Coping with crossings is next rail hurdle

Safety and education are key, officials say

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

Now that the decision to restore the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad project has been made, planning boards throughout the rail corridor will no doubt seek mitigation measures for their towns at the 43 grade crossings along the 17.7-mile rail line.

With 12, Cohasset has the second highest number of grade crossings of all Greenbush communities. A major criticism of the $215 million restoration project – loudly voiced by rail opponents – is the close proximity of the crossings to one another and the safety problems they could cause.

"We believe the line won't be built because of the number of crossings and the safety and noise problems they create," said Nancy Buckley, founder of the anti=rail Coastal Coalition.

Cohasset resident and fellow Coastal Coalition member Peter Robb also continues to oppose the project.

"But should that dark day ever come," Robb said, "it seems logical that they could eliminate some of the especially dangerous crossings in town."

'It seems logical that they could eliminate some of the especially dangerous crossings in town.'

Among the more dangerous crossings, Cohasset Selectman Martha Gjesteby includes Sohier, Pleasant, Beechwood and King Streets because they are highly travelled roadways. And Even before Cohasset firefighters had left the scene, efforts had begun to help the family displaced after their antique house was gutted by fire Tuesday morning.

Friends of Peter and Maryanne Clougherty have set up a relief fund in care of the South Shore Community Center (see companion story). The Cloughertys have three children Leo, 8, Florence "Flossie", 6, and Grace, 5.

The Cloughertys and upstairs tenant, Rick Curtis, escaped unharmed from the burning house, which is tucked in behind the Second Congregational Church and Cohasset Town Hall on Highland Avenue.

Four Cohasset firefighters were injured, none seriously, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

The second floor, roof and attic of the Cloughertys' 1870 Victorian home was destroyed and the first floor had extensive water and smoke damage, Lincoln said.

An emergency call came into the dispatch center at 6:44 a.m. Two police officers on patrol, William Quigley and Jon Small, arrived at the scene first.

"Before the call, I could smell smoke in the center of town," Small said. "When I pulled up and walked to the house, I could see flames through the roof."

The officers quickly determined that all occupants were out of the house.

The captain in charge of the first fire engine unit on the scene called for a second alarm. Fire-fighters responded with equipment from both Scituate and Hull.

Although the fire was under control earlier,

Relief fund is set up for the Clougherty family

As most people reorganize their lives after the hectic holidays, Cohasset residents Maryanne and Peter Clougherty and their three children must deal with the loss of their home and belongings following a fire Tuesday morning that gutted their Highland Avenue home.

Friends of Maryanne and Peter Clougherty ask Cohasset residents to lend a hand. Money is needed for immediate relief to buy clothing and other essential items so the Cloughertys can begin to rebuild their lives.

Monetary donations may be made to the Clougherty Relief Fund in care of the South Shore Community Center. P.O. Box 631, Cohasset 02025. Items may be dropped off at the South Shore Community Center, but organizers ask that you call the center at 383-0088 for details about sizes and what particular articles of clothing are needed.

Snow budget has dried up

As the air filled with the first flakes of the season's second snowstorm, Cohasset had already exhausted its snow removal budget.

"It's all gone," said town administrator Gregory Doyon of the the $45,000 that was set aside for snow plowing and sanding.

Tuesday afternoon, Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield added, "As I talk to you now, we're $905.82 in the hole."

Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling said he measured three inches of snow at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the weather station in nearby Hingham. With forecasters predicting a total accumulation of 10 to 15 inches, the heaviest snow fell at a rate of almost an inch an hour between midnight and 6 a.m. Wednesday.

Overnight temperatures stayed at 31 degrees dropping to a low of 27 degrees early in the morning, said Skilling, who reported that by 9 a.m. Wednesday, 10 new inches of the white stuff had piled up.

"This is a good size snow storm," he said, noting that wind gusts of more than 30 mph out of the northeast would lead to a good bit of blowing and drifting snow.

However, Skilling noted the light, fluffy snow had a ratio of one inch of water to 14 inches of snow, making it

Voter registration deadlines

The town clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Jan. 12, which is the last day to register to vote for the Jan. 22 Special Town Meeting.

The town clerk's office will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., Jan. 20, the last day to register to vote for the Feb. 10 special town election.

Registration forms are also available at the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The forms may be mailed or hand-delivered to the town clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

Property taxes are due

Property tax bills for the third quarter of fiscal year 1996 have been mailed and are payable no later than 7 p.m., Feb. 1.

Payments should be sent to the treasurer/collector's office. The owner of recently sold property should forward the bill to the new owner or return it to the tax collector's office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

For more information, call 383-9900, Ext. 113.

Landfill meeting is slated

The health board will conduct an informational meeting at 7:30 p.m., tonight (Jan. 4) at town hall on procedural matters relating to the upcoming site assignment hearings on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

The state Dept. of Environmental Protection (DEP) recently determined that the landfill site is suitable for disposal of demolition and construction debris. The health board must now act as administrative judges in the site assignment hearings process.

The hearings are slated for Jan. 23, 25, 30 and Feb. 1, 6 & 8, continuing every Tuesday and Thursday night until completed.

For more information, call the health board office at 383-9900.

Winter reminder is offered

The Cohasset Highway Department reminds all residents that it does not have the funding or the manpower to open up driveways that have been plowed in by snow plows while clearing the roads.

It is suggested that residents wait until the roads are cleared before shoveling the ends of their driveways, whenever possible. The Highway Department regrets any inconvenience this might cause.

Inspect home valuations

The fiscal 1996 Real Estate Assessed Valuations have been completed and have been submitted for certification by the Massachusetts Department of Revenue.

The new values are available for public inspection at the Assessor's Office, Town Hall, 41 Highland Ave., during regular business hours. Due to staffing limitations, telephone inquiries about valuations will not be accepted.

Additional copies of the value listings are available for inspection at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 106 South Main St. Any problems regarding valuation will be handled through the abatement process. Call the Assessor's Office staff for more information at 383-9900.

Planting trees is encouraged

The Norfolk County Conservation District has compiled a free 23-page brochure, "Conservation Trees," to encourage planting, preserving and managing of trees to conserve soil, energy, water and wildlife. It also briefly explains the proper way to plant and prune trees.

In February, a list of popular plants suitable for spring planting (burning bush, lilac, forsythia, mock orange, pink almond, red barberry, dogwood, pussy willow, sedum, bleeding heart and aster and evergreens, fruits and vegetables) will be published.

To request a free brochure and to be added to the group's mailing list, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Norfolk County Conservation District, 400 Main St., Walpole 02081, Attn: Trees.

Hire a student for odd jobs

The Social Service League of Cohasset has compiled a list of Cohasset High School students who are ready, willing and able to do odd jobs around residents' homes, including yard clean up, snow shoveling, pet sitting, plant watering, babysitting and car care. To obtain the names and phone numbers of these helpful students, call 383-0771. The rates are reasonable.

All Paws meeting is slated

All Paws Rescue, Inc., a non-profit animal shelter, will meet Tuesday, Jan. 9, at 7:30 p.m. at the Day's Inn, Rockland. Members and friends are invited to attend.

Cohasset firefighters were at the house until about 3:30 p.m. "when they finished digging through," Lincoln said.

"It was a stubborn fire to fight because of the age and construction of the house," he said.

Lincoln said defective wiring in a first floor wall caused the fire which burned undetected up between two studs through a second floor wall into the attic. Then it spread back down into a second floor wall.

"It's an old house before fire codes. There were no fire stops," the chief explained. In older homes, there are "void spaces" in walls that are not allowed today.

Permanent Firefighters Edward Corbo, Frank Mahoney, and Eric Wenzlow and call firefighter Kathleen Maguire were injured. Corbo will seek medical attention for a back injury and Maguire saw a local doctor for an injury to her foot which was struck by a falling piece of slate. Mahoney was checked out at South Shore Hospital for possible heart problems and Wenzlow was treated and released for a shoulder injury that occurred when the second floor ceiling collapsed.

Lincoln praised all the fire-fighters' hard work.

Firefighters battle a Tuesday morning fire at the home owned by Peter and Maryanne Clougherty on Highland Avenue. The fire destroyed the second floor and attic and water and smoke damage was extensive on the first floor, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said.

"The firefighters did a great job from all three towns to bring this fire under control in very difficult conditions," he said.

The home, built in 1870, has a mansard roof, named for the french architect Francois Mansart who originally designed the sloping roof style.

Town historian David Wadsworth said the house, which was originally a carriage house, is included in the Cohasset section of the state-wide survey of historic assets. It is not included in the town common's nomination for listing on the National Register of Historic Places because it is just outside the Cohasset Common Historic District, which includes properties that abut the common on both sides.

relatively dry and easier to plow. With the storm not predicted to taper off late in the afternoon Wednesday (Jan. 3), Skilling said the South Shore could easily see a total accumulation of 15 inches of snow with temperatures dropping throughout the day, guaranteeing the snow will be around for quite a while.

This storm followed a similar track to the nor'easter of December 20-21, but without the high winds and seasonal high tides that caused much concern at that time.

Cohasset school children saw their second "snow-day" of the winter.

Cohasset's stockpile of 450 tons of sand was depleted by the December 20 nor'easter, Litchfield said, and the highway department had laid in another load in preparation for this latest dose of winter.

Cohasset uses a mixture of five parts sand to one part salt. He noted that he has seen the price of salt increase from $22 per ton to $38 per ton over the 18 years he has managed the highway department, but the snow removal budget has increased only $5,000 in that time.

Litchfield said he is allowed deficit spending for the snow removal budget once the original appropriation is spent.

"The snow's on the ground," he said. "We've gotta do something with it."

Litchfield said he provides the selectmen and the advisory committee with weekly status reports of the snow removal expenses, and applies for a transfer of funds at the end of the winter, to cover the costs of plowing, sanding, and equipment repair.

However, the private contractors and the town employees are paid in a timely fashion, he said. These expenses are subject to the approval of the selectmen and the advisory committee.

Red Cross blood drive is slated

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, Jan. 17. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House at 23 North Main Street from 2 to 7 p.m. Babysitting assistance will be provided after 3 p.m. The Red Cross always experiences a decrease in blood donations during the winter months despite the ongoing need for blood and blood by-products.

The Red Cross counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time or if you have any questions, please call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

Town is cautious with zoning changes

Weymouth's Foxy Lady story doesn't prompt quick action

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

Following an attempt by a Rhode Island nightclub owner to open a establishment with nude dancing in Weymouth, officials in Hingham and Cohasset said they have considered zoning changes, but do not see the need for immediate action to address this issue.

Cohasset planning board chairman Al Moore said any zoning changes approved by town meeting must go on to the state attorney general for approval.

He cautioned against "knee-jerk reactions" that result in laws that are later found to be unconstitutional.

When an applicant files a proposal for site plan review, he said, the board does not have to know the identity of the owner. In the case of a bookstore, there can be no distinction made between Barnes & Noble, Waldenbooks, or "some triple-X bookstore," he said.

Moore said the planning board has discussed zoning changes to address clubs with nude dancing, as well as other forms of "adult" bookstores and entertainment, but at this time, he doesn't see an urgent need for changes.

"I think Cohasset's zoning is in pretty good shape."

In Hingham, zoning administrator Mary Jean Shultz said that as long as the zoning by-laws do not specifically address "adult" entertainment, those establishments are deemed to be prohibited.

She explained that the town cannot ban outright one form of business by prohibiting it in all zoning districts. If it is mentioned in the by-laws, it must be permitted in some zone.

Shultz said that the zoning board of appeals and the planning board need to consider some zoning changes because parts of the by-laws are out-of-date. "Adult" entertainment is one matter that should be considered for zoning changes, she said.

However, the deadline for zoning articles for the 1996 annual town meeting passed on December 1, so there are no plans to address this subject until 1997.

"At the heart of zoning is health and safety," Moore said. "Those are defendable. Beyond that, you cross the line to what's a matter of good taste."

What is "good taste" is subject to individual interpretation, he explained.

We're starting our 44th year of record keeping at the weather station and can only wonder what the new year will bring. Throughout most of 1995, it was the unusual precipitation deficiency. Although the months of October and December each brought more than six inches of rainfall, the year ended almost 9 inches below normal and was the sixth driest year on our records.

December was several degrees colder and a lot snowier than average. The total snowfall of 19.5 inches made it the third snowiest December on record. Only Decembers in 1970 and 1976 had more snow, with totals of 31 and 20 inches, respectively. During the week before Christmas, our total snowfall for the season (includes November) was the most so early in the season. The total snow on the ground reached a maximum depth of 11 inches on the 20th and 21st, but we still had 8 inches by month's end. After December 10, the high temperature reading for the month was only 40 degrees, occurring on the 22nd.

while the large number of crossings are a concern, Gjesteby, who also sits on the state-appointed Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC), formed to comment on the MBTA feasibility studies, said it will be very difficult to close any of them.

But closing the crossing at Smith Street and re-routing traffic to the Pleasant Street is one possibility, she said.

"Grade crossings and safety have always been my prime concern ever since I started this process 10 years ago," said Gjesteby, a rail supporter, who wants to make sure when the Greenbush line is restored, it is as safe as possible.

At the federal level, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) has created a task force which will conduct a national review of highway grade crossings.

The MBTA shows in its environmental feasibility study that all grade crossings will be protected with warning signs, bells, lights, and safety gates.

The gates would typically be down for 45 seconds as a train goes by, but in areas like the Hingham Square area where the train will be moving slowly and where several grade crossing gates will be activated together, the street may be blocked for as long as 60 seconds, the report said.

The study also includes plans for pole-mounted horns which will offer additional warning at grade crossings where the train will pass through at a speed greater than 40 mph.

MBTA Director of Planning Geoffrey Slater said mitigation measures for grade crossings, including some possible closures or consolidations along the Greenbush line, will come into play when transportation planners are in the final design phase.

William Grimes, who is the founder of the pro-train group Back on Track, and another long time member of the CAC, said grade crossings will be discussed as part of the mitigation process.

But Grimes added wherever possible grade crossings should be eliminated.

"Where ever you can do it, grade separation is best. But when you can't, you have to make the crossing as safe as possible," he said.

SAFETY IS A TOP PRIORITY within the FRA which formed the Grade Crossing Safety Task Force to conduct a comprehensive national review of the planning, design, construction, maintenance and inspection of highway rail grade crossings.

As a safety initiative to reduce rail-related accidents nationwide, federal Transportation Secretary Federico Pena launched a grade crossing action plan last year with a goal of reducing rail accidents and casualties by 50 percent or more by the year 2004 and closing 20 percent of grade crossings nationwide by 2000, and also began the FRA's public service campaign "Always Expect a Train."

The goal of the campaign is to raise public awareness about the dangers at grade crossings.

"Public education is really the key," said FRA spokesperson Luis del Rio.

Del Rio provided some interesting statistics on grade crossing accidents.

• There are nearly 280,000 highway rail crossings nationwide and deaths at highway rail crossings rank number one among rail-related fatalities.

• Nearly every 90 minutes someone in America is hit by a train and more than 50 percent of crashes at public crossings occur where active warning devices exist.

• Most vehicle/train collisions occur within 25 miles of the motorist's home and the majority of collisions occur when the train is traveling less than 30 mph.

In 1994 there were a total of 610 killed, and 1,923 injured in 4,921 rail-crossing collisions. In Massachusetts there were 16 rail crossing accidents, three injured and no fatalities.

And while these figures are alarming, del Rio said most of these accidents can be avoided. People jogging, riding bikes and walking along tracks on railroad bridges or trestles needlessly endanger their lives, and according to FRA statistics rail crossing and trespasser deaths account for 90 percent of all rail related deaths.

Most crossing accidents occur simply because a motorist chooses to ignore warning signs signals or safety gates and tries to beat the train. And nearly all trespasser deaths are preventable, he said.

Del Rio said the FRA stresses the need for motorist and pedestrian responsibility.

"Most accidents can be avoided by looking both ways. It's an issue of realizing there is the potential for danger," del Rio said.

As for the Greenbush line in general, del Rio said it sounds like a case where grade crossing elimination or consolidation could be implemented.

"We advocate the consolidation and elimination of crossings," he said, noting a familiar FRA slogan, "the safest crossing is no crossing."

Del Rio mentioned several options for increasing grade crossing safety or consolidation and ways to achieve grade separation.

Under passes or over-passes can be constructed in some cases, he said.

The FRA is working with a company in Florida that constructs pre-fabricated arcs – small bridges – that can be constructed over crossings at a relatively low cost, about $1 million each. Cars traverse the tracks via the arc eliminating the crossing, he said.

Del Rio also spoke of creating a "T" intersection at some crossings in which a street would come to a end at the crossing and traffic flow would be re-routed to another crossing further up the road.

And where crossings cannot be closed they can be made as safe as possible with the right safety equipment in place, he said.

As Greenbush restoration moves further along, del Rio said, the FRA can lend its expertise on grade crossing consolidation and closures to local communities like Cohasset and Hingham and work as a partner with local and state planners to make the crossings as safe as possible.

AMTRAK ALSO WORKS to eliminate grade crossings when and where possible, said Paul Leahy, Amtrak's New England division manager of safety and environmental control.

Leahy, a Duxbury resident, is very familiar with the Greenbush project and said while the line does have more grade crossings per mile than any other commuter rail line in the state, good planning can make the crossings safe.

Amtrak has operated MBTA commuter rail lines since 1987 and Leahy said grade crossing accidents have steadily declined.

In the last year and a half, Leahy said there have been only three accidents along MBTA commuter rail lines and one involved an unoccupied car parked too close to the tracks.

Along with the FRA, Leahy said the MBTA and Amtrak have worked to enhance grade crossing protection by improving safety equipment and warning systems.

"A lot of grade crossing accidents occur in areas of the country where there is no active protection, where there are no gates, lights or bells – just standard cross bucks giving no warning to approaching vehicles," he said, noting that commuter rail crossings in Massachusetts have "active" protection in place.

As to eliminating or consolidating some of the many crossings along the Greenbush line, Leahy said there will be opportunities to do so.

When the line is closer to completion, Leahy said the "Operation Life-saver" program which, in conjunction with the FRA, promotes grade crossing awareness and education, will come in handy. An outreach individual who could hold informational meetings with trucking companies, school bus companies, business and concerned citizens can provide helpful information on how grade crossings can be negotiated safely.

"Education works," he said. "The more people we reach and the more information we can provide on grade crossing safety the better."

In addition to public education, Leahy said the MBTA and Amtrak focus on tracking down traffic violators who try and beat trains and go around safety gates risking their own lives and the lives of the train passengers. Judges and local and state police have been known to ride the rails and view crossings that have had such problems, Leahy said. Installing cameras that film a motorist trying to go around the gates, can help identify violators who can be cited, he said.

Leahy said there's a long way to go on designing and planning Greenbush before these kind of details can be worked out.

"Each community has its own concerns," he said, noting that "now that Greenbush is going to be a reality, there is an opportunity to bring all of these concerns, including grade crossings, forward and have them addressed to the fullest extent and to be a partner in the process."

The Women's Counsel can be a vital resource

By DIANA N. KINCH
Special to the Mariner

Nina Belsan leaned forward and spoke confidentially to the women gathered at the December meeting at the Lightkeepers House in Cohasset, as she facilitated with magic marker in hand and flow sheet beside her.

"The potential and possibilities in this small group of women are amazing. There's such strength, ability and wisdom here that I can see good things coming out of this. This is not about doing business, conducting a meeting, or another 'pretty' workshop. This is about being a resource, an innovator and a thought provoker in the '90s," Belsan said.

Belsan and 20 other women met to discuss the purpose of the newly formed Women's Counsel sponsored by the South Shore Community Center.

The concept evolved when Louise Alibrandi, owner of the Face Place in Hanover, and Nina Belsan, director of the South Shore Community Center, perceived a need in the South Shore for a place where women can help women, a place to exchange ideas and resources for women at every stage of life. Since the South Shore Community Center offered a likely focal point from which information and skills can be exchanged, Belsan set a date for the first meeting for such discussions.

The group that responded to the November and December meetings comes from various backgrounds and interests. Dienna Lehner, who is anxious to begin this resource networking, believes that building a database of organizations that are already doing great things to inform and support women is a priority of the counsel.

Among the issues the women identified were: senior women's mental and physical needs; women and healing, and the everyday how-to information that is necessary when establishing a resource network.

The counsel is still in the process of being defined. As others join this effort, it will evolve into what women on the South Shore feel they need in the '90s. The women present at the December meeting agreed it is vital that women of all ages meet, talk, listen and work with each other. The Women's Counsel hopes to address questions like the following: How can I be self-sufficient in my elderly years? How can I support myself and my family? How can I be a more patient parent? How can I take part in framing legislation that affects me?

One goal of the Women's Counsel is to administer information and support to women of all socioeconomic, educational, age or cultural backgrounds in the South Shore area. Nita Frances, director of women's educational programs at South Shore Hospital, was excited about the prospect of the Counsel being a resource available to such a diverse group of women. She felt it was important for the group to verbalize exactly what the counsel is, even while it's being shaped.

Supporting and encouraging women to find their own resource and operating as a not for profit group were two points upon which the Women's Counsel founders agreed. Since it's crucial to understand what issues are affecting women, the counsel will circulate a questionnaire to local towns to help define the needs such as availability of medical care, transportation, locations of women's shelters, legal representation for women in cases of domestic violence; child care and literacy issues. The Women's Counsel offers an opportunity for all women to ask the important questions and share their vision.

The next meeting of the Women's Counsel is Jan. 18 at 2 p.m. at the South Shore Community Center. A breakfast roundtable discussion is also planned for Feb. 14, Valentine's morning, from 8 to 9:30 a.m. at The Lightkeepers House, off Border Street, Cohasset. The theme "Choosing The Positive Path in a Changing World" will be the main course.

Please call Nina Belsan at the SSCC, 383-0088 or 545-5462, for breakfast tickets ($6 reserved before Feb. 1, $8 at the door).

Sewer articles proposed for town meeting

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Town meeting voters may be asked to consider two and possibly three articles relating to the sewer project.

At their last meeting in December, selectmen accepted two articles, but postponed discussion for January, when all selectmen can be present.

Selectman Jane Goedecke told sewer commissioner Edward "Ted" Guild that she is not enthusiastic about spending any money that is not necessary.

One of the articles will require an expenditure of some $200,000, with 25 percent state reimbursement over 20 years.

The money would be used to rebuild the sewer lines along Border St., which are prone to salt water flooding during storms. Guild said the salt water is bad for the bacteria at the sewer plant.

However, he said the project is not required by the state.

The first article would amend the Nov. 6 town meeting Article 11, which appropriated $70,000 for sewer repairs, by allowing sewer commissioners to seek a state grant.

Guild explained that the cost of preparing the state grants will be some $9,000. He said that doing article one on its own would not be worthwhile, since the town would spend $9,000 to save $18,000 and there is no guarantee the town would receive the grant.

Therefore, he said it is worthwhile to do the two articles together.

He said the work would begin as soon as spring arrives, making the annual spring town meeting too late.

The two articles are being prepared by town counsel Richard Henderson.

A third article would revote the controversial sewer rate structure approved at the November special town meeting.

Guild called that "absolutely essential," if Henderson determines that it needs to be voted again.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Our best wishes to Dr. Woods on his retirement

Nov. 16 was a wonderful day in the St. John family, that's the day when Torie Lyn St. John was born. Torie weighed in at 9 pounds 9 ounces! Her mom, Molly (Lynch) St. John and Dad, Brian, are spellbound by her, to say nothing of her grandparents — maternal are John and Gunny Lynch, paternal are Paul and Joan St. John.

If this snow ever goes away, we'll be sure to see Torie being wheeled around town, meantime everyone enjoy that baby!

This week marked the end of an era in our town, Dr. Ed Woods, won't be practicing dentistry any more! After 41 years of working here, it is hard to imagine that he won't be saying "are our gums happy today," we all loved it when he would ask! At least he'll still be living here, so if you haven't congratulated him on his retirement be sure to do so!

It sure is great to report that Frank Wheelwright is home from the hospital — we hear that your New Year resolution is no more sicknesses in the house! Time for you and Muriel to kick up your heels, right? Anyway, here's to health and happiness for both of you.

Did you know that the Social Service League of our town has compiled a list of Cohasset High students who are more than capable of doing just about any odd job that you need to have done? Especially shoveling your driveway, path, or whatever – they will babysit, pet sit, water your plants, and the list goes on.

If you are interested in getting the names/phone numbers call 383-0771.

Cohasset resident Joel Carpenter (first left) autographs one of his Christmas designs at a holiday card signing party held at the Hard Rock Cafe last month. Joel is one of many patients at the Floating Children's Cancer Center who design holiday cards every year as a fund-raising effort. The party, organized by the Families for the Floating Children's Cancer Center, invited buyers to meet the young artists and authors who created this year's Christmas greetings.

Congratulations go to Robert E. Riley, he has been appointed president and CEO of Leggat McCall Properties. Mr. Riley will focus on real estate investments and capital markets opportunities for the company.

Cohasset lost two fine ladies recently, within a short length of time. Isabel Ainslie and Alexandria Donovan (Allie to all who knew her). These ladies worked together at the CHS cafeteria for years, and they were so nice, friendly and helpful, and always smiling — the students maintain that the cafeteria hasn't been the same since they left. Now, the town feels the same loss. They will be missed, and our hearts go out to their families. The only good thing is that they are together, probably reminiscing and telling stories to one another.

Did you know that Cohasset's own Paul Verrochi was named entrepreneur of the year for emerging growth companies? The award is given to individuals who exemplify the start-up process at its best, and Paul was selected from 18 national finalists! Paul is the chairman of the Board of American Medical Response, Inc., the nation's leading provider of ambulance services; he has acquired more than 50 ambulance companies in three years. The program which awarded Mr. Verrochi this honor is sponsored by Inc. magazine, Ernst & Young, and Merrill Lynch. Be sure to read Inc., it is truly an inspiring story and a tribute to Paul!

That, as they say, is that for this week – we are sorry it is so brief, but all of you must have been enjoying a vacation somewhere! Now you will call and tell me all about it, okay? Please!

She has performed as a soloist and an accompanist in major concert halls in Jerusalem and Tel-Aviv and in concert tours in Germany, Switzerland, Austria and the Netherlands.

In 1984, Minkin was the third-prize winner in the Paul Ben Haim Competition of Israeli music, and in 1987 she was a winner of the Israeli Radio Young Artists Competition.

Minkin has studied harpsichord with Mark Kroll at Boston University, earning a master's degree. She has also won several other awards and is a candidate for the degree of doctor of musical arts in historical performance at BU. She is director of music and organist of the First Church in Dedham.

The church is located at 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset and is handicapped accessible. Parking is available in the village lot. For further information, call 383-1083.

Bible discussion group to meet

A new Bible Discussion Group will meet Friday, Jan. 5, from 7 to 8 p.m. in Cohasset Town Hall, in the small meeting room next to the elevator. Cohasset Community Church, sponsored by Community Baptist Church of Weymouth, is a new evangelical church which has been holding a home discussion group in the community. The new group is being formed to give more people an opportunity to participate.

The new church is affiliated with the Baptist Convention of New England, and Redland Baptist Church in Derwood, Maryland, has offered to help by sending people and resources during the new year to assist the new church minister in Cohasset. For further information, call the church at 383-9761.

Friends of Paragon Carousel

The Friends of the Paragon Carousel will hold an open meeting Sunday, Jan. 7, at 1:30 p.m. at the Hull Lifesaving Museum for anyone interested in helping the group meet the Jan. 30 deadline set in the agreement to purchase which the group signed in November with the Carousel's current owners.

Under the terms of the agreement, the Friends have until Jan. 30 to arrange and secure financing of the former Paragon Park Carousel at Nantasket Beach. To ensure a manageable debt and successful financing package, the group is working to raise an additional $150,000 by the January deadline through a number of fundraising efforts, including the Carousel of Light and a Jan. 22 dinner at Tosca.

Some of the names may be familiar to you, others may not be. But the people attached to these names all have one thing in common: they wrote at least one letter-to-the-editor in 1995.

A few wrote thank you's to the people of Cohasset or organizations for their help or support; others complained about a decision or lobbied to have their views considered; while still others educated us about programs, problems, or activities.

But no matter what the subject – putting pen to paper to share your views with your fellow citizens is important. The First Amendment is close to our hearts here in the newspaper business and at no time do we appreciate it more than when ordinary citizens, like those listed here, take advantage of their Freedom of Speech. And what better vehicle is there than your local paper?

The editorial pages of the Cohasset Mariner belong to you. It's where you can speak out or just say thank you to a citizen or organization that went beyond the call of duty.

Sometimes it takes a good dose of courage to let your voice be heard but we think it's worth it. Often one voice is all the inspiration needed to propel others to action.

To those of you that have thought about writing and haven't, please reconsider. To those whom we hear from on a regular basis, keep writing!

There are lots of weeks to go in the New Year – which will be filled with events, decisions, and happenings that have an impact on Cohasset.

Let us hear what you think in 1996.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Food Pantry support is appreciated

To the Editor:

Through the Mariner, the people of the Cohasset Food Pantry would like to thank the many individuals, all the local churches, organizations and businesses who have kept the Pantry adequately supplied with funds and food to help us meet some of the needs of as many as 30 Cohasset families during the past 12 months. At a time when some other emergency food organizations have been faced with empty shelves, you have made it possible for the Cohasset Pantry to respond generously to the people who have come to us for help.

We particularly want to thank the postal employees who collected food for the Pantry, the Cub Scouts, and the CCD classes of St. Anthony's Church who have held food drives. We are also grateful to the businesses which display our contribution cans and the people who deposit in them.

Recently the Pantry received a large gift from proceeds of the Silent Auction at the Thanksgiving Fair of Jack Conway Co. realtors; a major gift from the Food for Friends Program of Cohasset Stop & Shop; and the surprise gift from Kinnealey Meats, Milton, of all the fresh turkeys needed to distribute to the families at Thanksgiving. In addition, many thanks to music director Bob Leavitt and his "Sounds of Christmas" choral group for their generous contribution to the pantry from the collection during the concert at the Second Congregational Church.

All these welcome contributions have made it possible for us to help make the holidays bounteous to some Cohasset families who might otherwise have not shared in the joy of the holiday season.

We of the Food Pantry thank you all.

Coastal Coalition will continue fight

The Coastal Coalition has announced that there cannot be a reconstruction of the 1849 Greenbush rail lone for diesel trains running from Braintree to the marshes of the North River.

"We are convinced, after reading the latest MBTA press summary, that there is no transportation argument which supports this rail line, and that it cannot be built," said Coastal Coalition co-chairs Randy Young and Nancy Buckley.

Coalition members, after reviewing the "Greenbush Corridor: Summary of Findings and Recommendations," from which Gov. William Weld's speech for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce November breakfast meeting was written, dismissed the findings as a "masterpiece of disinformation."

"They think they've pulled a fast one," said Young. "But the word from the South Shore to the MBTA is, 'No more tricks in '96!'"

Young and Buckley congratulated Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) for identifying the Greenbush decision as "political decision as a "political decision and not a transportation decision." They also thanked the hundreds of Coastal Coalition members and friends who have spent tens of thousands of hours during the past two years analyzing environmental studies, suggesting transportation alternatives, collecting signatures, holding signs, attending town meetings and telephoning and writing elected officials, for the impact the organization has had to date.

The Coastal Coalition is reorganizing to strengthen its efforts to oppose the construction of the Greenbush line and plans to announce the next phase of its opposition in January. Organizers encourage fellow citizens to be prepared to participate in the next phase of Greenbush resistance with ideas, research, letters and manpower.

Firefighters from three towns battle blaze

Firefighters from Cohasset, Scituate, and Hull fight a two-alarm fire Tuesday morning on Highland Avenue which displaced a local family. Two floors of the antique home were destroyed by the fire caused by defective wiring in a first-floor wall. A relief fund (see page one story) has been set up for Peter and Maryanne Clougherty and their three children. The Cloughertys are temporarily staying with relatives in Scituate.

Changes in cable-TV bills are expected

Cost of 'Cable 1' service to go up

By CHARLENE VANDINI
The Cohasset Mariner

Continental Cablevision customers in Cohasset can expect to see changes in their cable television bills, which could increase their monthly charges.

Changes in the rate structure are designed to reduce the cost of basic cable service while allowing cable television companies to recoup their operating costs in line with inflation, equipment, and increased fees for programming.

In Cohasset, the monthly cost of basic broadcast cable service will decrease from $11.25 to $10.75. The monthly cable converter box rental will also decrease by 29 cents, to $1.62.

However, the cost of Cable 1 service will increase from $1.80 to $2.92 per month, and Cable 2 service from $10.35 to $12.61.

These increases, along with the decrease in the cost of basic service mean that, overall, the standard service package will increase by $2.88 per month, according to Continental Cablevision director of government affairs Rick Jenkinson. This is the service chosen by most customers, he said. As of January 1, the standard service package will cost Cohasset cable TV customers $26.28 per month.

Jenkinson explained that Cable 1 and Cable 2 services are packages that include programs on USA, ESPN, and CNN. The charges for the so-called premium channels, such as HBO, Disney Channel, and Cinemax, will not change.

These changes are a result of an agreement reached with the Federal Communications Commission to provide what Jenkinson called "a lifeline service tier" that will make basic cable television service more affordable to low-income persons.

Cohasset cable TV customers who subscribe to the standard service package will pay 8 cents less than Hingham subscribers. He explained that cable TV rates vary by town since they are based on the number of customers and the number of channels available to them.

In addition to the new rate changes, cable TV customers will also have two new channels available to them. As of January 1, viewers will find "Home and Garden TV" and "fX", a sports, entertainment, and lifestyle programming service.

Rik Tinory produces celebrity album

Rik Tinory Productions, headquartered in Cohasset, is the executive producer of a one-of-a-kind album, scheduled to be released in mid-1996, that features many celebrities.

Walsh primed for SSL action

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

As Cohasset High hockey coach Dennis Walsh sees it, Scituate looks to be the team to beat in the South Shore League this winter. Beyond the Sailors, however, nothing is clear.

"It's a question mark the rest of the way," said Walsh.

So far this season the Skippers (1-3-1) have played just one league game, a tie against Norwell. Cohasset defeated Provincetown 6-3 before being outmanned in contests against Division 1 and 2 schools New Bedford and Sandwich.

Walsh is generally pleased with the way the Skippers have fared after five games. The team is young with 12 of the team's 23 players in the ninth grade or younger. He expects there'll be mistakes made this season due to inexperience. But on the same note, Walsh doesn't foresee the Skippers being blown out of the rink by any teams in the SSL.

"We can compete with these teams,"

Some 1996 wishes from a die-hard fan

By Joe Reardon
Cohasset Mariner

By now the resolutions have been made and broken, but we all have hopes and aspirations for 1996, whether they be for ourselves or others. So when cover sports for a small local town, you secretly have wishes you'd like to see come true, even though you can't reflect them in your writing.

But thanks to this column, I have my own sounding board and this week I've come up with a few of my wishes for the teams and athletes who train hard and play hard in a small seaside community.

•Number 1 on my wish list for 1996 is the hope the Cohasset High gymnastics team continues its undefeated string. The Skippers have won an impressive 24 consecutive meets, dating back nearly two years when they lost to Scituate on Jan. 19, 1994. Cohasset wound up tying the Sailors for the South Shore League title that season before winning the league outright in '95.

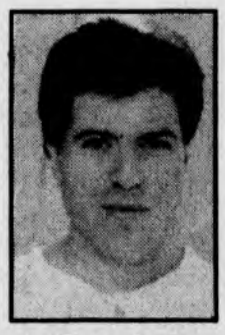
McKee



Reardon

•To Cohasset High gymnast Erica Hettstrom: A season of good health. The South Shore League All-Star was slowed for several months with a series of maladies but is back in full force. Here's hoping she continues to get stronger.

•To the Cohasset High girls gymnastics team: A down-to-the-wire showdown in its meets against Hanover and Scituate. The three

Lauren Genovese appears completely calm as she goes through an Arabasque move on the beam.

Freshman Tara Hettstrom is in complete control as she performs a scale on the balance beam during a Cohasset High gymnastics team practice.

powers of the South Shore League should put on quite a show in the battle for league supremacy.

•To the Cohasset High girls soccer team: A return trip to the Division 3 South Sectional tourney in '96. Ditto for the boys squad.

•To the Cohasset High field hockey team: That all those heartbreaking one-goal losses last fall become one-goal victories this fall.

•To the South Shore Community Center: That it be renamed the Ardizzoni School for Aspiring Gymnasts.

•To Carol Riley and Ruthann Ardizzoni: A second career in photography. We at the Cohasset Mariner are indebted to them for their photo submissions.

•To the youth coaches and parents who submit game summaries: Our undying gratitude. The only ones who appreciate your work more than the sports dept., are the kids whose names you mention in your articles.

•To Cohasset High basketball coaches Ron Ford and Cori Hughes: That a video be made of their highly successful basketball camps and be made available at the neighborhood movie rental store.

•To the Cohasset High track team: A spring of personal bests on its new track. Ditto for the Hanover High squad which also will be going through the paces on a spanking new track this spring. While we're at it, how about personal bests for all the South Shore League athletes who compete on both.

•To the Cohasset High boys basketball team: Ron Ford's troops had the opportunity to play in the Boston Garden last year. Lets hope the FleetCenter follows suit during tourney time sometime in the future and the Skippers tickle the twine there in another championship game.

•To the Cohasset High football team: Special Thanksgiving Day Arctic weather gear. The Skippers play every other holiday game on that Tundra Hull calls a football field. How about some warmth while you're battling for four quarters.

•To those select (ie. pieces of work) Little League parents and coaches in all the towns: It's only a game. Don't try to live your miserable sports fantasies through kids who love to play. They'll end up dreading game day and resenting you in the process.

•To cheerleaders at all levels in all the towns: It doesn't matter what some may think, you're athletes in my book.

•To the organizers of the Cohasset Roadrace-by-the-Sea 10K: That the event continues to grow and is greeted with sunny cool weather on race day.

•To anyone planning on running in this year's race: Run the Forest Ave. hill at least a few times in the weeks leading up to the race. That is truly one incline that is truly a much tougher grind than it looks.

•To the Cohasset High lacrosse team: That its brutal schedule against some of the best lacrosse squads in Eastern Mass will pay off come tourney time.

•To Ron Ford: That he can do with the baseball team in the spring what he has done with the basketball team in the winter.

•To the Cohasset High wrestling team: The knowledge the youngsters on this club are going to be seasoned veterans by the time they're sophomores.

•To all the coaches, fans, players, officials, trainers, athletic directors, booster club members and contributing writers: May 1996 bring nothing but victories and good memories!

Grapplers shine in Marshfield, Carver

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

While many of Cohasset High's younger wrestlers showed just how talented they are at last Wednesday's Carver tournament, three Skipper freshmen placed in the Marshfield Holiday Tournament.

Cohasset finished a respectable 10th out of 19 teams, but it was the performances of freshmen Jordan Fiore, Mike Baird and Luke Caldwell that had head coach Torin Sweeney anticipating the future of the sport at Cohasset High.

Freshman Jordan Fiore battled to a sterling sixth-place finish at 130 pounds and both Mike Baird and Luke Caldwell wound up in eighth.

"For these freshmen to win matches at that level is pretty intense," Sweeney said. "The experience they're gaining is fantastic."

Kevin Duffy was the Skippers' big finisher, taking a second at 135 pounds. Justin Buckley (171) and Nate Caldwell (Heavyweight) both took home fourth-place finishes.

* * * * *

It was the youngsters' turn to shine on the mats last Wednesday at the Carver Junior Wrestling Tournament.

One of the biggest junior high tournaments of its kind in the state, the Carver tourney featured 30 teams and more than 200 wrestlers.

And Cohasset High was right there collecting some hardware.

The Skippers had three of their seven wrestlers in grades seven to nine place at the meet.

Seventh-grader Craig Sherrin dominated the 72-pound weight class, dropping three of his opponents to the mat to earn pin victories. Sherrin wound up taking first place overall.

Kevin DeVito joined Sherrin as the Skippers' other first-place finisher. The eighth-grader turned back all challengers in the 145-pound bracket.

Also placing for Cohasset was Jim Figuerido. A seventh-grader, Figuerido grappled his way to a fourth-place finish in the 86-pound category.

Sweeney said he was pleased with the performances and competitiveness of all his wrestlers.

Also competing for the Skippers were ninth-grader J.P. Lautelle, eighth-grader Dan Mulligan and seventh-graders Alex Dedes, Dan Duffy, Derek Fair, Tim Grassey and Ben Bibxy.

"Most of them all had at least one win," Sweeney said. "That's our future coming up right there.

"They're doing well. I'm happy for them."

The junior high wrestlers will next compete in Canton next month.

Late ski registrations

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept late registrations for Blue Hills ski lessons for youngsters ages seven and over at the recreation office, town hall.

Tai Chi offered

The South Shore Community Center is offering Tai Chi for beginners and advanced students. It is a form class which promotes health, balance, relaxation, and flexibility through slow, fluid movements. Please call 383-0088.

Golden qualifies for New Englands

Colby College swimmer Rebecca Golden of Cohasset qualified for the Women's New England Division 3 Championship swim meet, which will be held from Feb. 23-25 in Williamstown. Golden, a sophomore, clocked a 30.33 finish in the 50-yard butterfly against Bentley College on Dec. 1. The time qualified her for the meet.

Golden, and International Studies major, is the daughter of Stephen and Amy Golden of Cohasset.

Walsh said. "We gave Sandwich a good game and we were in dire straits because we were missing two or three players."

Cohasset, though, does have its problems and it begins with numbers. Walsh says there just aren't as many kids who play hockey from the town anymore. He points to the closing of the Winter Gardens rink several years ago as one of the reasons.

Because of the relatively small roster and young players, Walsh has been forced to go with two lines instead of the three that is more typical in high school hockey. The result is the players tire faster.

That was evident in the 7-3 loss to New Bedford. The Skippers were playing well early in the game against the Whalers, but "got worn down" by the bigger squad.

Defense has been one of the squad's weak areas and it has forced Walsh to take action. He moved Co-Captain Nevin Bunstein back alongside his top defenseman, Matt O'Connor, to give Cohasset that extra punch when the opposition heads down the ice.

Offensively, freshman Greg Figueiredo, who has already scored four goals, and Co-Captain Pat Reynolds are Cohasset's two strongest players when the Skippers have the puck. Both can put the puck in the net. However, the Skippers could use another consistent goal scorer, especially when they get in the thick of their SSL schedule.

Goaltenders Kyle Bunstein and Kevin McKenna have both played well between the posts for Cohasset. Walsh has used each equally. The pair either alternate starts or split playing time during games.

The Skippers will face a big challenge this Saturday against a struggling Hanover team. Walsh in no way intends to take the Indians lightly and will be playing them very close. He said he'll see how their defense is reacting and then decide the best offensive strategy to incorporate.

He hopes, as he does in all Cohasset's games, that the matchup is even or surprisingly the Skippers trail by a goal.

"I don't like high-scoring games," Walsh said. "But depending on how the game takes shape, you can't control it."

Cruiser repairs total about $7K

Police Chief Brian W. Noonan said it will cost about $7,000 to repair one of the town's three police cruisers.

The cruiser, which will be out of service for about two more weeks, was damaged in an accident which occurred at 5:43 p.m., Saturday, Dec. 23 on Rte. 3A across from Barry's Waste Services (the old skating rink site).

Saying she was blinded by the blue strobe lights, Carol Kiburis, 62, of Marshfield struck the cruiser which was parked facing oncoming traffic in the fog lane on the side of the highway, Noonan said.

Kiburis' car also sustained heavy front-end damage, he said.

Noonan explained that Officer Shellee Peters had driven across the road to stop snowmobilers from crossing the highway.

"She (Kiburis) tried to pass someone, who was making a left turn, and hit the cruiser," Noonan said.

When her cruiser was hit, Peters, who is back at work, was struck by the cruiser's open driver's door.

Kiburis was not cited in the accident, Noonan said.

Financial aid conference

A financial aid conference will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 7, at the Harrington Center of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay. It is free and open to all residents of Cape Cod, the Islands and the South Shore.

Congressman Gerry Studds said the 11th annual conference offers high school students and their parents – as well as the parents of younger students anticipating future college costs – a unique opportunity to listen to and speak with a large variety of experts on how to manage the financial burden of higher education. The session will focus not only on four-year colleges, but on financial aid for two-year colleges, vocational training, continuing education and graduate studies.

Those who attend the conference can obtain a detailed information packet, containing financial aid guides from the federal government, brochures specifically designed for Massachusetts colleges and universities, workbooks, sample financial aid forms and information on scholarships and other aid available from private resources.

For more information, call the congressman's office at 1-800-870-2626.

Open seats draw interest as election season starts

Jane Goedecke, Nancy Sandell won't run

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Although it is cold outside, Cohasset's political season is just beginning to heat up, as conservation commission chairman Roseanne McMorris and former advisory committee chairman Nancy Adams Roth said this week they will run for selectman.

Selectman Jane Goedecke announced Tuesday night that she will not seek a third term, while Martha Gjesteby indicated she will run for a fourth term.

The top two vote getters will be elected since Cohasset's local elections are at large, as opposed to by district, as in Scituate, for instance.

Selectman serve for three year terms.

The 42-year-old McMorris has served on the conservation commission for three years and is chairman of the Democratic Town Committee. She is a former member of the Parent School Organization executive board.

A native of Brooklyn, New York, McMorris will celebrate ten years living in Cohasset on Valentine's Day.

She is a non-practicing attorney.

Roth took out nomination papers Wednesday.

The 47-year-old Roth has spent six years on the advisory committee, including four years as chairman. She has also volunteered for various school-related events.

A Dover native, Roth moved to Cohasset in 1985, although she summered across the town line in Scituate all her life.

She is a special education teacher in Weymouth, working with dyslexic fifth and sixth graders.

Gjesteby has spent years in Cohasset government, serving two

Town digs out from blizzard

Like many residents, Jessica MacDonald of Ripley Road is hard at work clearing her driveway. Meteorologists predict the South Shore will see more snow this weekend.

Snow removal budget in red

Cohasset was trying to return to normal after a blizzard that plotted its way up the east coast of the country took the town into its grip, effectively shutting down the community on Monday.

The storm blanketed the town with more than 18 inches of snow on top of nearly a foot that had fallen less than a week earlier. Schools, businesses, and government offices were closed, and the post office made no deliveries.

Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling said the weather station in nearby Hingham recorded an official depth of 11 inches of snow for the January 3 storm, and another 18 to 20 inches this week.

As with past snowfalls this winter, it was another dose of "dry" snow, with a water content of one inch of water for 13 inches of snow. This light, fluffy snow, while easier to shovel, also compacts more quickly, he explained, so 20 inches of snowfall will settle by as much as three inches in one day, reducing the depth accordingly.

Post office supervisor Joe Cerilli said no mail was delivered to Cohasset on Monday from the area mail depot in Brockton, but carriers

Selectmen, advisers hear plans for new school

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

The proposed school construction project will add an average of $116 per year to the typical property tax bill for the next 25 years, an architect retained by the school committee told officials this week.

Sid Bowen of Earl R. Flansberg & Associates, said that state officials have indicated that the Commonwealth will pay 60 percent of the nearly $14 million project, leaving the town to pay 40 percent, or just under $6 million.

The project includes a brand new school to built behind the Deer Hill School, an addition to the Deer Hill, plus a possible sewage treatment plant.

However, Bowen stressed that the town must approve and submit a proposal before June 1 to ensure that the project receives state reimbursement.

He explained that the law paying for the program expires June 1.

School superintendent Stephen Hart and school committee chairman Ralph Kidder said that the there is a chance that the funding formula will be altered after June 1 and urged that the town act quickly.

They said that building a new school will cost less in the long run

Cohasset's Week

CHL request complied with

Officials say they will comply with a request from Cohasset Heights Landfill, CHL, to receive relevant documents town boards have generated on the issue.

However, selectmen said Monday night that since those documents probably contain hundreds, if not thousands, of pages, they will have to figure out how to comply.

Selectmen, the conservation commission, water department and board of health have all dealt with CHL for the past decade.

Since the town hall copy machine could not be tied up for hours, selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested that CHL lawyers bring their own copy machine.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said the original copies should not leave the building.

CHL attorney Ellin Swanson Katz made the request in a Jan. 2 letter.

After the brief discussion, selectmen went into executive session with Michael Scott, a lawyer with Warner & Stackpole, to consider collective bargaining issues pertaining to the library association.

Snow bank alert noted

Children should not play in or around snow banks, selectman Michael Sullivan warned during Tuesday night's meeting.

He said the police department reminds residents that children sometimes build forts in snow banks, which tend to collapse.

In addition, snow often prevents motorists from seeing children playing near the road.

Selectman Merle Brown also reminded residents not to build snow structures which children or animals can enter and become trapped.

He reported that a building inspector in another town, which he would not name, ordered an igloo demolished for safety reasons.

Brown named MIIA delegate

Selectmen Tuesday night named chairman Merle Brown as the town's voting representative to the MIIA, the insurance association for Massachusetts municipalities.

Lonely meeting over quickly

Monday night's selectman's meeting probably set a record, as both the quickest and the loneliest meeting in recent memory.

Selectman chairman Merle Brown made it to town hall during the blizzard so he could open the meeting, which had been posted for 7:30 p.m.

The meeting was immediately adjourned for lack of a quorum and continued to the following night.

Department budget approved

The wire department budget is down slightly over last year's.

Selectmen this week approved a budget request of $54,347, down from the current $54,983.

The salary for inspector Steven Wigmore will be recommended at $43,507.

Wigmore told selectmen he wants to retire in June, 1997.

Town meeting/election dates set

Selectmen this week set the following dates for the local election and town meetings: special town meeting, Jan. 22; special override election, Feb. 10; annual town meeting, March 30; and town election, April 6.

Drama club accord reached

Selectmen will continue to allow the Cohasset Drama Club to use the town hall auditorium, but asked town administrator Gregory Doyon to come up with a checklist for the club members to review before leaving the building.

Earlier, selectmen had complained that drama club members left the auditorium and basement were left in a mess.

Dawn Rota of the drama club, said she first learned there were problems after reading the Cohasset Mariner.

She denied that club members left plates of food in the town hall staff lounge.

"We're being charged with something we didn't do," she stated. "It was cleaner than when we got it. We left the place spotless. I can guarantee you, sir, we cleaned it."

"I know you make a mess," Selectman Merle Brown said, adding that he personally saw trash in the men's room after the club members left.

Rota said that other groups use and often break, the club's equipment. She said she has complained to the recreation department in the past.

Doyon also said that the town hall door was once left unlocked.

"We'll make every effort to cooperate," Rota said.

The club pays $600 a year to use the auditorium.

In an unrelated matter, selectmen approved use of the auditorium for auditions, rehearsals and performances of the upcoming plays, "Blythe Spirit" and "Anne of Green Gables."

Town gears up for landfill hearings

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Board of Health held a 4-hour pre-hearing conference Jan. 4 to address certain administrative matters with regard to the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Public site assignment hearings on the proposed expansion are due to begin Tuesday, Jan. 23.

John F. Shea, an attorney with the law firm of McGregor & Shea, was appointed by the health board as hearing officer/moderator. His selection met with unanimous approval from both the board of health as well as Cohasset Heights' representatives.

All parties agreed that commencing with the Jan. 23 hearing date, meetings would be held every Tuesday and Thursday for the duration of the hearings.

Though Anton T. Moehrke, attorney for CHL owners John and Paul Barry, warned that if the hearings looked likely to turn into protracted affairs he would request additional evenings (Monday and Wednesday) be added to help speed the process on.

It was determined that, as of now, 22 groups would be recognized as eligible parties of interest in the proceedings. These parties would have the ability to present evidence, make oral arguments, object to testimony and cross-examine witnesses during the hearing process.

The groups included are the Cohasset selectmen, water commission and conservation commission, Cohasset Heights, as well as the town of Hingham's board of selectmen, health board and conservation commission. The trustees of reservations, owners of 808-acres abutting the landfill, and 15 groups made up of at least 10 citizens apiece round out the approved delegations.

The remaining bulk of the evening's session was taken up with 10 motions submitted by John K. McNabb, Jr. McNabb, who is vice president of Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE) and authorized representative for one of the 10-citizen groups, submitted the motions on behalf of residents who might wish to come forward and be heard after commencement of the hearings.

Shea, in denying most of McNabb's motions, explained that the regulations were very specific and those who wished to be a part of the hearings must register prior to the Jan. 23 opening meeting.

In concurring, Moehrke noted that the publicity generated by SAFE (over 500 mailings) virtually assured all residents of Cohasset and Hingham should have been made aware of the guidelines for the hearings.

McNabb, who withdrew his remaining motions, rebuked Moehrke by stating that the 15 10-citizen groups "are just the tip of the iceberg."

The final topic of the evening concerned the CHL's disagreement with the state Department of Environmental Protection over whether or not the landfill could accept municipal solid waste (MSW).

Moehrke argued he felt the state was wrong when, in granting approval for expansion last December, it ruled that the landfill could accept only construction and demolition debris. He further added that he plans to sue the state DEP to reverse its decision.

Michael Leon, who serves as special town counsel on CHL matters, disagreed and considered the subject closed.

At this, Moehrke sharply replied that if this was to be the case, then he would have to strictly abide by the letter-of-the-law when it came to the upcoming hearings.

The conference concluded with Shea looking for cooperation between all boards and parties of interest and asking that the upcoming hearings be concise and not a long drawn out affair.

"We began tonight talking about flexibility and I will entertain any aspects that will expedite the process," he said.

Cohasset digs out from blizzard of '96

were making their appointed rounds on Tuesday.

"We got buried today," Cerilli said Tuesday, referring to the amount of mail, rather than the snow.

Cerilli said the letter carriers reported widespread cooperation from residents who had shoveled paths and sidewalks, but the usual deliveries took longer due to the slippery conditions.

Even though Tuesday saw the first sunshine in days, School Supt. Steven Hart said the school closing for the second consecutive day was attributable to the unplowed parking lots and sidewalks around town.

With Cohasset schools scheduled for one vacation week in March Hart said the town has few alternatives to a late end of the school year if more "snow days" are called.

Cohasset schools have already racked up five days of cancelled classes due to snow. The school year is scheduled to end on June 20, but if necessary, more days will be added.

Hart noted that next year, Cohasset schools are scheduled to return to the two-vacation schedule, with a week off in both February and April. The number of "snow days" this year may cause the school department to "revisit the issue" of these two vacations, he said.

Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield the crews focused on the primary roads of North and South Main streets, Atlantic Avenue, Border Street, King Street, Beechwood Street, Elm Street, Jerusalem Road, Sohier Street, Ripley Road, and Forest Avenue.

The Cayman Islands and Aruba are proving to be popular destinations, along with Florida for which inexpensive fares are available from some airlines.

— Justine Van Der Lugt at Cohasset Harbor Travel.

He said road crews plowed right up to the time the last flakes fell Tuesday, to combat the accumulation of as much as two inches per hour and snow drifts as deep as 10 feet.

He reported the worst drifts on Jerusalem Road, but added "The Deer Hill School was no picnic."

On Tuesday, the department was concentrating on snow removal at the schools to allow the buildings to open for classes on Wednesday. The schools require more than parking lot plowing, Litchfield said. The sidewalks around the buildings and to every door must be cleared of snow, since each door is a fire exit.

The highway department now faces the task of removing the piles of plowed snow.

"We're going to have to start eating it soon," Litchfield said.

The department will dump the snow at the Sandy Beach parking lot, where it will be allowed to melt. The snow removal may be a race against the clock as another storm is predicted for the weekend.

The rapid accumulation Sunday night and Monday meant only a limited amount of road sanding before the storm ended, he said.

The town's salt stockpile has been drastically depleted by the season's heavy snowfall, which has seen more than 60 inches of snow since late November.

Litchfield said Tuesday he had ordered another 60 tons of salt, to be delivered later that day, and expected to order more beyond that quantity.

After two salt suppliers were unable to fill his order, Litchfield said he consulted a third who could, but the cost was $40 per ton, $2 more per ton than he had to pay earlier this season.

Cohasset mixes the road salt with sand, at a ratio of five parts sand to one part salt, Litchfield said. This does not speed melting as quickly as the higher concentrations he used 18 years ago when he became highway superintendent.

"When I was running three [parts sand] to two [parts salt], the Cohasset roads were black," he said.

Litchfield has advised the selectmen that snow plowing is operating at deficit spending, but he does not know the figure at this time. Prior to the January 3 storm, he reported that he was almost $1,000 beyond his budget. The town's snow plowing budget of $45,000 was exhausted before the new year. Selectmen said this week the budget is $14,600 in the red not including bills for Monday's storm. They estimate the town has spent a total of about $80,000 for snow removal so far.

Not only were many travellers were left stranded when the east coast's major airports closed, local travel agents report dozens of phone calls from people trying to re-book flights that were cancelled. Others are trying to rearrange departures ahead of the next storm that may arrive on Saturday, according to Justine Van Der Lugt at Cohasset Harbor Travel.

She also said that this storm may have been the last straw for people who have had enough snow and are now looking to the tropics.

Van Der Lugt said the Cayman Islands and Aruba are proving to be popular destinations, along with Florida for which inexpensive fares are available from some airlines. She also noted that cruises are popular to some islands that are still recovering from last fall's active hurricane season.

Some people want to leave as soon as possible, she said, while others are making reservations for the school vacation weeks.

However, Van Der Lugt noted that some people never get enough of the snow, and she has booked several trips to Canada, Colorado, Idaho, and Wyoming ski resorts.

Most people think mothers like to cook. But with Mom living alone these past few years, things had changed. She got tired of grocery shopping and fixing her own meals. We began to worry about her eating properly. Bathing and taking her medications on time were becoming difficult, too.

That's when we looked into assisted living at Allerton House. Allerton House is managed by the Welch family, a trusted name on the South Shore for over 45 years. Our first visit convinced us. This was a choice we all felt good about.

Last month, Mom moved into her own private apartment at Allerton House. Tomorrow, she's having us over for dinner. And she won't have to lift a finger.

School board's schedule is on target

Deer Hill budget on table

By DOREEN LEGGETT
Special to the Mariner

Unlike students, school committee members did not get last Thursday off. Committee members will meet often during the next couple of weeks to discuss the 1996/1997 budget and conduct informational meetings on the space needs proposal.

Committee members' schedules have been termed "aggressive" as they prepare for a number of informational meetings with the town's various boards, and "coffees" to garner support for the $5.594 million space needs project, which includes a new pre-kindergarten to third grade school and renovations to the Deer Hill School.

The budget is due in February.

At Thursday night's meeting, committee members focused on the Deer Hill budget, as well as listened to Supt. Stephen Hart's presentation on the proposed performance standards for teachers and administrators.

The Deer Hill budget went from $1,262,825 to $1,275,414, which is less than a 1 percent increase. Salary increases were not factored in.

The staffing of the school remains basically the same, as do general supply costs which have experienced a modest increase because of the 30 percent jump in the cost of paper.

The changes in staff involve hours instead of personnel. There will be a slight increase in the time special education aides spend at the school and Ann Berman, the art teacher, will work four instead of three days.

"People don't realize the diverse needs of children in Cohasset," said Donna Hartlage, the principal of Deer Hill. We've "identified special needs as just under 20 percent."

Berman's extra time will be spent planning and conducting activities with classroom teachers. Art will still be taught as a unique subject, but will also be linked to other subjects. For example, Berman will teach an art lesson specifically related to social studies, perhaps on the movement of pioneers to the West.

The Deer Hill library will also install a local area network (LAN), a computer system which will enable students to locate a particular book in the library. The system at Deer Hill is a pilot project and over the next few years systems will be installed throughout the school system and be hooked up to the town library.

Hartlage had asked that an additional teacher be budgeted for, so the school could have five teachers in each of the three grades. Now there are four third-grade teachers and five fifth- and sixth-grade teachers.

"Once you move into the teens, if the teacher is willing to change strategies, you do see pronounced improvements," said Hartlage. Class sizes are now in the low- and mid-20s.

Hartlage also said that having five teachers in every grade would help in long-range planning.

Her request was turned down because there has not been an increase in student numbers. There will be four classes coming up from the third grade.

The purchase of a few round tables, as opposed to the longer narrower ones, for the cafeteria has also been budgeted for. The round tables, said Hartlage, would create more of a family atmosphere. A few round tables will be purchased each year.

than trying to renovate the outdated Osgood School, which was built in 1926 and is overcrowded to the point of being a fire hazard.

Because the school was built with a wood frame and occupies a small four-acre site, the state would not reimburse the town for any costs incurred by its renovation.

In order to meet the June 1 deadline, voters will be asked to consider a debt exclusion override of Proposition 2 1/2 at a special town meeting Jan. 22, and at a special election Feb. 10.

(Adopted in 1980, Proposition 2 1/2 limits property tax increases to no more than 2 1/2 percent, plus new growth, each year, unless authorized by voters.)

However, others questioned the need to proceed so quickly.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, a Republican with good ties to the Weld administration, said that she has been assured by the governor's office that money for school construction will be included in future budgets.

She said that the need for a new school has been brought up suddenly and was not included in last year's capital plan.

In response to a question from selectman Michael Sullivan, advisory committee member Leland Jenkins also questioned the timing of the proposal.

"I think it (the new school) is definitely needed," Jenkins said, adding that the timing is "poor. This one may break the bank. If the tax rate goes to $20 or $21 per thousand, you're going to have a problem."

School committee member James Kirk responded, saying that whether the timing is bad or not, the Osgood School must be replaced. He urged the town to take advantage of the 60 percent funding reimbursement now, while it remains a certainty.

Sullivan said he hoped the town would not be "penny wise and pound foolish." In the past, budgets were kept as low as possible, which resulted in postponing vital projects, which wound up costing more money than originally.

He cited repairs to the sewer system, new playing fields at the high school, and the new DPW garage as examples.

Using a series of scale drawings, Bowen explained the $14 million plan, which includes:

- a new school, housing 527 youngsters in pre-kindergarten through grade three, will be built behind the Deer Hill School. The 69,000 square-foot structure will contain 18 classrooms for grades one through three and six classes for pre-kindergarten and kindergarten.

This will cost $9.8 million, with the town's 40 percent share at $3.9 million.

Bowen explained that the building will likely be located on a slope toward Evergreen Road because of wetlands and hills in other areas of the 7.7 acre site.

He suggested a one-way entrance, leading from Sohier St. onto Evergreen, could manage traffic safely.

A two-story building, fitting into the hill, would allow the kindergarten and pre-k students to be separated from the others, he explained.

There would not be a full-service kitchen at the new building, rather a warming oven for food brought in from the high school.

- a 7,000 square-foot addition will also be built on the Deer Hill School. Two new classrooms will be added, which will allow the library to expand into an adjacent classroom. The gym and cafeteria will be expanded and new art and music rooms will be built.
- Bowen said the state may waive its requirement that whenever two or more school buildings occupy the same site a sewage treatment plant be built. He said that the schools could be connected to the town's sewer if it is extended. If a sewage plant must be built, it would cost $525,000, with the town picking up $210,000 of the cost.

Kidder also said that the committee would turn the Osgood School back to the town once the new construction is completed.

Robert Beggan of the school facilities committee began the meeting with a short video, narrated by Hart, showing how the Osgood School is overcrowded.

Bowen also said that the school committee considered housing kindergarten and pre-K students at the Osgood and building a $6.7 million addition to Deer Hill for all elementary students, but rejected the idea because it would have created too large a building containing too many students.

terms on the school committee and on the planning board and capital budget committee.

As selectman, she has represented the town on a number of regional bodies, including the Citizen's Advisory Committee on the restoration of the Greenbush train, the Mass Municipal Association and the South Shore Coalition.

In her announcement to step down, Goedecke said that two "very interesting" terms as selectman and five years on the advisory committee were enough.

"I think it's time to move on," she said, praising local government as "citizen participatory democracy at its best."

Goedecke said she has no definite future plans. "I'm accepting offers," she quipped.

In other election news, veteran school committee member Nancy Sandell is also stepping down and Border Street resident Keith Knowles has announced he will run for Sandell's seat (see announcement, page 10).

Sandell said Tuesday that after serving three terms, which included two years as chairman, the time had come for her to step aside.

"I'm comfortable leaving now," noted Sandell who said with new teacher performance standards in place, two new principals on board, and possibly a new school on the horizon "it's a nice time to leave."

Sandell has been particularly proud that during her terms academic standards have been raised, and there's been a "vision of excellence for the school system including higher expectations for all students," she said.

Sandell would not rule out a future run for another office or serving on an appointed board.

"I would love to stay involved and I will always be there to drum up support for the school system," she said.

Feb. 15 will be the last day to take out nomination papers for the April 6 election. All nomination papers must be returned by Feb. 19.

Voter registration deadlines

The town clerk's office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Jan. 12, which is the last day to register to vote for the Jan. 22 Special Town Meeting.

The town clerk's office will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., Jan. 20, the last day to register to vote for the Feb. 10 special town election.

Nomination papers for the April 6 Annual Town Election are now available at the town clerk's office for the following positions: selectmen (two for three years); moderator; treasurer/collector; school committee (one for three years); library trustee (three for three years); assessor (one for three years); board of health (one for three years); housing authority (one for five years); recreation commission (one for five years); planning board (one for five years); sewer commission (one for three years); water commission (one for three years).

Children should wear bright colors

Police Chief Brian Noonan asks that parents dress their children in brightly colored winter clothing and hats to enable motor vehicle drivers to see them more easily.

The chief said due to the high snow banks, he is worried that children may emerge from driveways and sidewalks and surprise unsuspecting drivers.

Brightly-colored hats and clothing may help, he said.

Noonan also warned that drivers should be on the look-out for children and other pedestrians.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Hats off to Cohasset's freshmen at B.U.

Great news comes our way this week! Shirley Laidlaw is home from the hospital, she is way ahead of schedule (that doesn't surprise anyone who knows her!).

Shirley wanted to be sure to thank everyone for their cards and prayers, she is sure that is what did it! We are sure it's because she is a super lady in super shape!

Five Cohasset residents are members of Boston University's Class of 1999. This year's freshman class comes from 49 states and 62 foreign countries. Now studying at the university are Cohasset High School graduates Jemilah Y. Afshar of South Main Street; Scott L. Moe of Sohier Street; Elizabeth L. Corcoran of King Street and Dean D. Volungis of Forest Avenue; and Berkshire School graduate Spencer R. Henderson of North Main Street.

Grades are probably in for the first semester by now, we hope to hear from you (know you did really well).

By now everyone knows about the horrible fire that damaged the home of Maryanne and Peter Clougherty, the only good news is that everyone was unharmed. The other bit of good news is how our town has pulled together to help – it seemed by the time we got things together, they already had them! That's so nice! Now the thing is rebuilding their lives and their home. Monetary donations is the big way left to help now, they may be made to the Clougherty Relief Fund, c/o The South Shore Community Center, P.O. Box 631, Cohasset 02025.

We are hearing of so many nice people organizing fund-raisers, be sure to watch for them.

As a side-note to the Clougherty's house fire, there is a story of their neighbors, Lisa and Jeff Pratt. Lisa and Jeff live across the street from them, and they are the type of neighbor that everyone should have. Of course they welcomed the children in immediately, then folks that were full of concern, then helpers, etc.

In all of the confusion, their cat got out of the house. His name is George, he is a very friendly three-year-old black and gray tiger cat with white chest and white feet. The Pratts say he is such a friendly cat, he may well be in someone's home without their knowing where he came from!

They have been everywhere looking for him – and their other cat, Gracie, is wondering where George is too! Gracie wants George to know she is waiting for him – if you know anything about George's where-abouts, please call Lisa Pratt at 383-1387.

Chloe J. Chittick has been offered admission to Colby College in Waterville, Maine under the college's early decision program. Chloe is scheduled to enroll at Colby in September following her graduation from CHS. She is the daughter of Stanley and JoAnne Chittick.

At CHS, Chloe has been secretary of the National Honor Society, a National Merit Commended Scholar, winner of the Dartmouth Book Award, a member of the student council, class secretary, captain of the field hockey team, South Shore League all star in 1995 and Homecoming queen.

With her early decision acceptance, Chloe is one of only about 150 students from around the world to gain early acceptance at Colby this year.

Congratulations, you certainly earned yourself this grand honor; Chloe!

That's the news from here, hope to hear from you with all of your news real soon!

STUDENT OF THE MONTH/ Catie Campbell

Catie Campbell is a hard working, unselfish young woman. Tackling advanced courses is difficult enough, but add to that responsibility of peer counselor, varsity soccer captain, teen center supervisor and audio visual aide.

I have been lucky enough to not only have Catie's assistance in the AV studio this year but have also had the pleasure of coaching this determined athlete the last two basketball seasons.

She won the team's "Hustle" award last season but has impressed me even more with her recent conviction and leadership in the classroom, in the community, and on the soccer field.

Catie has a bright future, and a big heart; and I can't imagine a more deserving student to be recognized as Student of the Month.

Winter

The way a crow
Shook down on me
The dust of snow
From a hemlock tree

Has given my heart
A change of mood
And saved some part
Of a day I had rued.

— Robert Frost.

Before you know it, recent snows will have melted into memory and spring will be in the air. Then surely some hot, humid weeks will follow in summer when we'll all be yearning for fall.

Despite the spate of recent snowstorms, our world has not come to an end.

We'll admit to joining in the panic at the grocery store, buying extra windshield-wiper fluid, and wishing we had a snowblower.

Our radios are on early as anxious young ears listen for their town to close school yet again.

We've cursed the inconvenience of snow-filled driveways and walkways and have suffered from cabin fever — and it's only January 11!

But before winter is too much with us — it's time for all of us to take a step back and enjoy it. Cohasset has never been more beautiful than it is this week. Covered in blankets of white, fluffy snow — wreaths still on doors reminding us of the recent holidays — the town is a sight that surely gives the artistic among us pause.

So take a moment to appreciate the splendor of it all. Even if we're hit with another nor'easter, we'll hold up. More bread will be delivered it to the shops, the mail will get through, and thanks to our local highway department, the streets will be passable again.

Take a walk outside and look around. Try to appreciate what nature has given us: an old fashioned, snowy winter.

Chat with your neighbor, lend a hand with your shovel, slow down.

Try to take some pleasure in winter while it's here.

Train is poor political decision

To the Editor:

When asked at the recent South Shore Chamber of Commerce breakfast of how he, Gov. William Weld, expects to win the U.S. Senate seat if he plans to build the Greenbush train line through communities that voted against it, the Governor quipped, "You have to crack a few eggs to make an omelet."

This response from the aspiring U.S. Senatorial candidate is a far cry from the Bill Weld who visited Hingham in 1990 as an aspiring gubernatorial candidate. "The Greenbush line would fundamentally change the character of this town," he said. "I would not go ahead with this project unless I had an unambiguous statement from the people in the town that they want it."

Well, there's egg on the Governor's face now that he gave the go ahead to build Greenbush. Spring 1995 town meetings in Hingham and Scituate resoundingly said no to a diesel train passing through 24 times a day crossing 43 streets at grade level in only 17 miles. The towns said no to what would be a harsh and permanent change to what is treasured most about these quiet, coastal villages.

More compelling to voters than the environmental impact that the train would have on the towns was the information provided from the MBTA on the financial impact that this one train line would have on the state of Massachusetts.

Learning that taxpayers will have to pay more than $20 million each year to remove only 440 of the 67,000 cars that use Route 3 each day and only 890 of the 38,000 cars from Route 3A, educated citizens trusted that Weld would expand the South Shore's water transportation system and maximize bus service on the new "zipper" carpool lane on the Southeast Expressway to get those few cars off the road for a fraction of what this rail line will cost.

But with his sights set on Washington, union PAC money from the construction industry anxious to get a piece of this $300 million porkbarrel rail project influenced Weld to ignore these fiscally conservative solutions to the South Shore's transportation problem.

Weld intends to use our state tax money to defend this project from inevitable lawsuits. His detached statement of "Let them sue away" shows a different man than the Bill Weld who in 1990 said "Government is taking on a life of its own and forgetting why it's there...I'm raising a flag of warning on the Greenbush line."

Governor Weld might have cracked a few eggs with this decision but it looks like he just might have cooked his own goose.

Knowles is a candidate for school committee

Citing his ability to bring balance to the issues confronting Cohasset's school system, Keith Knowles announced his candidacy for the open school committee position.

"While I have great respect for the current members of the school committee, I believe that their activities will benefit from my experience as both a business person and a parent/taxpayer," Knowles said,

Knowles is well known in the community as the co-founder of the Teen Depot, the first president of Cohasset Youth Resources, Inc. (the current organizing entity for the Teen Center), and as the recent president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. He also has served on Cohasset's drug and alcohol committee for the past five years, and was the group's first chairman.

"I believe that my record of community service firmly supports my concern for the youth of Cohasset. Since each of our children is touched, for better or worse, by our schools, my candidacy is a natural extension of that concern," Knowles said.

An outspoken observer of the school system, particularly in regard to its operational philosophy, Knowles hopes to bring a more objective viewpoint to the financial and educational challenges our schools face. However, his candidacy is not based on a critical outlook.

"I have a vision for Cohasset in which every part of our community is united around providing our youth with best possible start on life. My experience has been that the citizens of Cohasset share that goal," Knowles added.

As his campaign unfolds, Knowles intends to provide a specific initiative that can be implemented to ensure that this goal is met.

Individuals interested in learning more about Knowles' candidacy and his position on the many issues facing the taxpayers of Cohasset are encouraged to call him at home, 383-1331. Evenings and weekends are best.

Landmark survives time, banking mergers

By MICHELLE MENCHIN
Special to the Mariner

In December of 1898, Cohasset Savings Bank announced construction completion on its new office at 13 Elm St. in Cohasset Village. Nearly a century later, the new owners of 13 Elm St. are celebrating another grand opening and the preservation and restoration of a Cohasset landmark.

In December, the Hingham Institution for Savings reopened the office building to serve as its Cohasset branch, after having purchased the property in June from Palmer Management Corp. for $211,400. The property was "condominiumized" with the bank owning a 66 percent interest, occupying the first floor and basement.

"We have received a tremendous outpouring of support from our many customers who live and work in Cohasset," said Robert H. Gaughen, Jr., President and CEO for Hingham Institution for Savings.

The building formerly housed the Cohasset Savings Bank which merged with Shawmut National Corporation of Boston and Hartford in 1994. Last year, Shawmut sold the Cohasset Village site and another property at 400 Gannett Road in North Scituate to investors. This past summer, the Hingham Institution for Savings announced that it would be adding two new branches in Cohasset and North Scituate and would purchase both of the former Shawmut properties.

The bank completed renovations of the building before the branch opening. Restoration began in mid-October and was completed in early December, with several South Shore contractors working on the project including Ciarlone Brothers of Weymouth and Livingston Painting of Cohasset.

Interior improvements included removal of suspended ceilings on the first and second floors that had been put in place years ago, and hid the building's original high ceilings with ornate, decorative plaster moldings. The Cohasset Historical Society was consulted for information and photographs of the ceiling's original detailed craftsmanship.

The Hingham Institution for Savings replaced the building's front entrance concrete stairs in granite, replicating the original front entrance. Perhaps the most striking exterior improvement is the restoration of the hand-carved portico above the building's two-story four-column facade. This detailed area is now hand painted in contrasting shades of brick red, showing off the artisan's original work.

Renovations also included installation of a few modern conveniences as well. Centralized air conditioning was installed throughout the building, and improvements and changes were made in the bank's front vestibule to make room for an ATM and install advanced security equipment.

At the "new" Cohasset Savings Bank, completed in 1898, are Caleb F. Nichols, president (in front); Caleb Lothrop, treasurer; and Henrietta Bates, secretary.

"The bank has never looked better," said Cohasset Historical Society curator David Wadsworth.

"The structure is typical of the style used for buildings during that era, classical revival, modeled after ancient Greek and Roman public areas," he said. "At the time, most public buildings throughout the country were done in this style, including many of the monuments and government offices in Washington, D.C."

The original architect of the building, Edward Nichols, also designed Cohasset's Paul Pratt Library and a number of Queen Anne style homes throughout Cohasset.

"I remember coming to the bank as a child," said Wadsworth, whose great grandfather was president and treasurer of Cohasset Savings Bank at one time. "Banking is much more informal now than it was during my great grandfather's day. The bank was a very serious place, set in a large Victorian-style atmosphere, and now of course it's very contemporary."

Some aspects of the original interior remain, including a working fireplace in the president's office. But the most notable difference now, when compared with the bank's original decor, is the absence of the large iron grate that once divided bank officials and customers, designed to protect tellers and deposits.

The second floor, now occupied by Palmer Management Corp., once served as the meeting place for the Odd Fellows Lodge, a fraternal organization, and its sister auxiliary club, the Rebecca Lodge, both still in operation in some parts of the country today.

"This building has always been a magnet in Cohasset Village," said Gaughen. "I think our customers are thrilled to have a locally owned community bank come back to the area, instead of one of the regional [banking industry] giants."

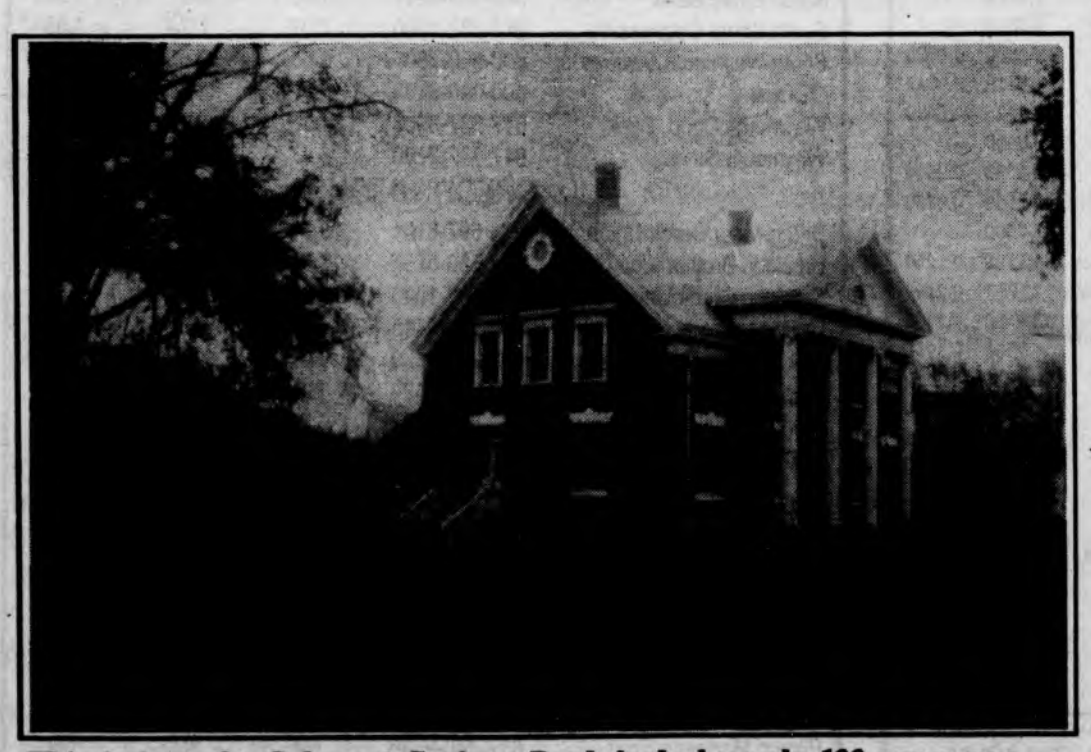
The Elm Street building has survived generations of tenants and bank mergers.

"Ironically, several years ago executives of the Hingham Institution for Savings and the Cohasset Savings Bank seriously contemplated a merger, but negotiations fell through," said Gaughen.

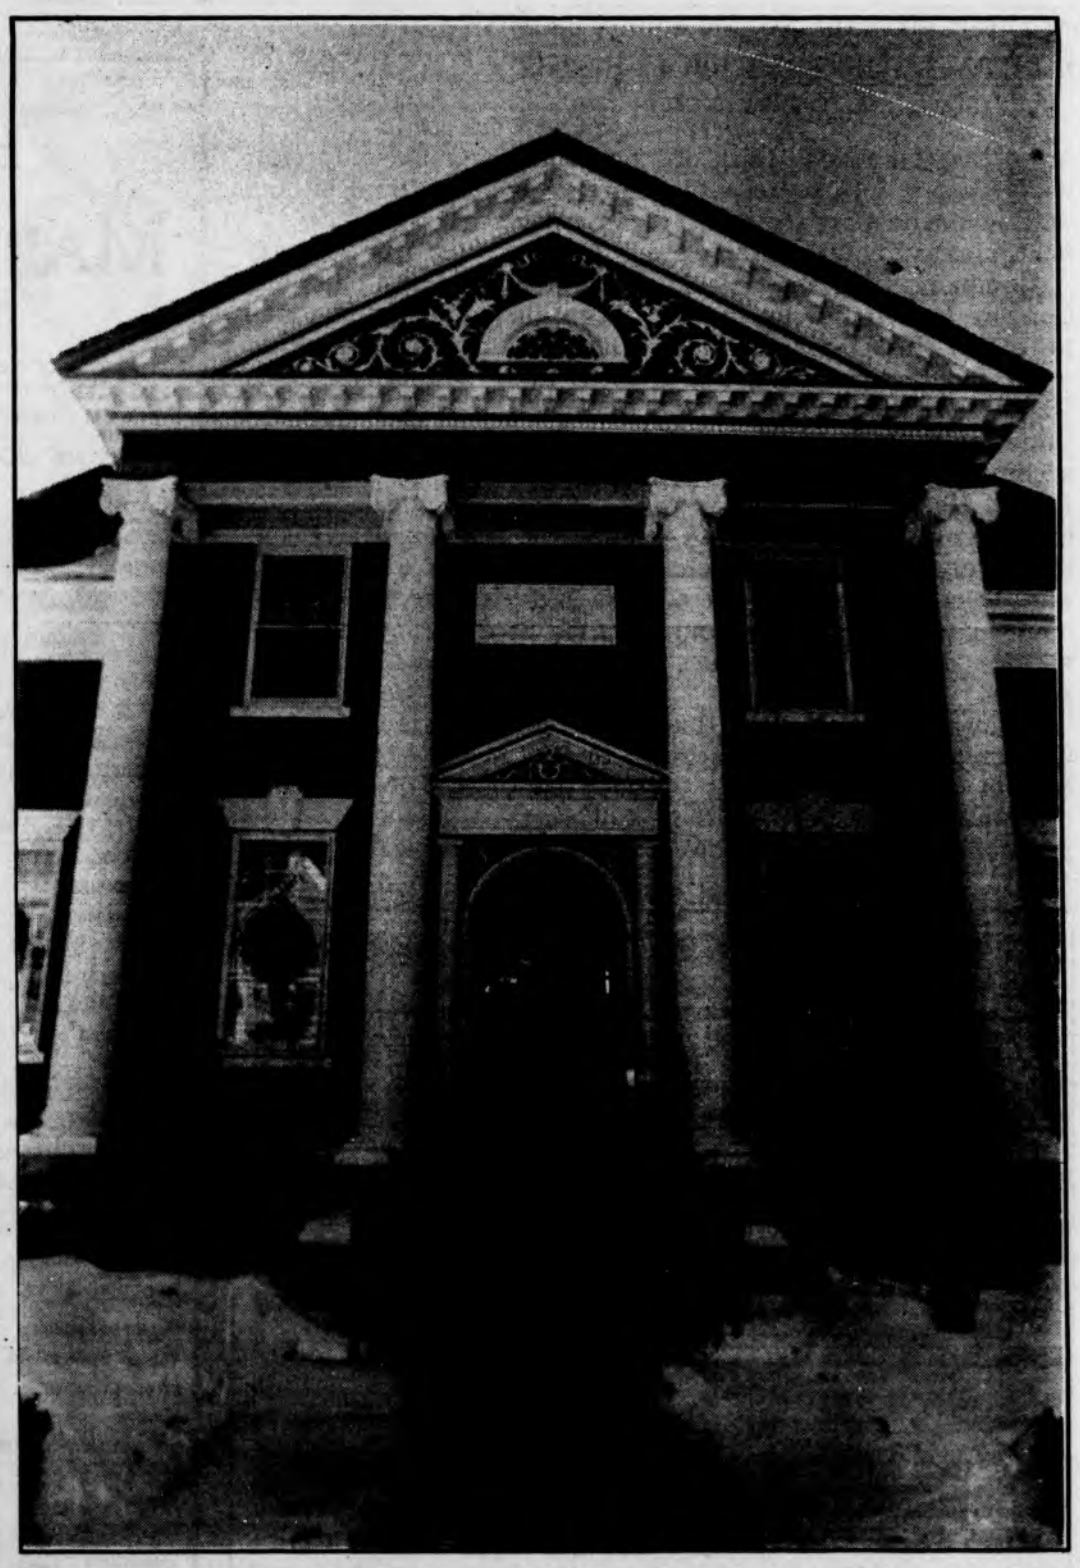
Despite the two new locations, the Hingham Institution for Savings does not plan to add many more branches.

"We have chosen to be a small community-oriented bank," said Gaughen. "I think once you reach a certain size you can no longer be that to your customers. We are not ruling out additional sites, but there is a limit to how large we want to grow because our focus is here in the areas we now serve."

The Hingham Institution for Savings, with assets of more than $162 million, is a Massachusetts chartered savings bank. Incorporated in 1834, it is the oldest financial institution headquartered in Hingham. Its main office is located at 55 Main St., with two other branches in South Hingham and Hull in addition to the new North Scituate and Cohasset locations.



This is how the Cohasset Savings Bank looked nearly 100 years ago.



Hingham Institution for Savings, which purchased the building last June, recently restored the hand-carved portico above the old Cohasset Savings Bank two-story four column facade.

South Main Street retail building sold

Conway Commercial Consultants, a division of Jack Conway & Co., has completed the $285,000 sales of 19-25 South Main Street which houses the Children's Exchange, Hernan's, and Habit Management and formerly housed the Village Fare restaurant, which closed several months ago.

Conway's Paul Durgin represented John Hand of Scituate, in the sale of the property to Richard Torsney of Humarock. Conway's John Williams assisted Torsney in the transaction. Torsney is the owner of On-Line Cable Systems which will open in one of the property's retail units.

Located in Cohasset Village, the property also features a residential apartment upstairs.

Durgin said the asking price for the property was $310,000.

Women's Counsel to meet

Stan Walsh is promoted

Former Cohasset resident Stan Walsh has been promoted to executive vice president of merchandising and marketing for Builders Square, headquartered in San Antonio, Texas.

Walsh, his wife, Kathy, and their children moved to San Antonio last August. He assumed his new duties in November.

Conway honors food pantry fundraiser

Jack Conway & Co. recognized the community work of its Cohasset office recently with a luncheon at the Satuit Restaurant in Scituate Harbor.

Company Chairman Jack Conway hosted the luncheon to thank the Cohasset sales team for raising more than $3,000 for the Scituate and Cohasset food pantries at its second annual Thanksgiving Fair. Held at Conway's Cohasset office on Route 3A, the event featured a yard sale and bake sale as well as a silent auction of goods and services donated by local businesses.

Conway praised the Cohasset sales team for reaching out to its community.

"Realtors are part of the community," Conway said. "We live and work out in the neighborhoods, and it's only right that we give something back to our neighbors."

In addition to Conway Realtors, guests at the luncheon included Scituate and Cohasset food pantry directors and volunteers, who thanked the company for its efforts on behalf of the area's hungry.

"We're really dependent upon the generosity and community spirit of organizations like Jack Conway & Co.," said Margie Steele, chairperson of the Cohasset Food Pantry.

Conway-Cohasset's two Thanksgiving fairs have raised a total of nearly $7,000 for the food pantries of Scituate and Cohasset.

Asthma fails to slow Nate Caldwell

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset High wrestler Nate Caldwell built a commanding lead in the finals of the heavyweight category in the highly-competitive Whitman-Hanson Invitational Wrestling Tournament on Saturday and looked like a sure winner.

As the match progressed, it became clear Caldwell had two worthy opponents: The athlete he was grappling with and the asthma attack which suddenly hit.

Caldwell had to take three breaks to catch his breath, but in the end he hung on and captured the championship with a 15-10 victory.

The way in which Caldwell held onto his lead impressed Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney.

"It was a gutsy win," Sweeney said. "He stuck it out and wound up winning."

Caldwell also found his place in the Cohasset High record books as well. With the win, he became the first heavyweight in school history to take first place in any tournament.

Caldwell joined Justin Buckley as division winners in leading the Skippers to a strong fifth-place finish. Buckley, who won three matches in the tournament, took the 171-pound title win a pin victory in the final round.

The competition was fierce and furious with Foxboro, which Sweeney says "is probably the strongest team in the state," taking first. Weymouth was second, followed by W-H and Boston College High.

Cohasset put four wrestlers into the finals. Tucker Gledhill finished in the runner-up slot at 112 pounds and Kevin Duffy took the same place in the 135-pound division.

Sweeney said he enjoys the W-H meet because of the competition. A number of teams, he said, have pulled out of the meet in recent years, but Sweeney and his Skipper squad won't be bailing anytime soon.

Lady Skippers ready to challenge Hanover gymnasts

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

The Cohasset High gymnastics team's 25th consecutive win was an easy 120.20 - 106.40 defeat of Carver.

The Skippers try for their 26th win on Thursday and it won't be nearly as routine a meet with Kim Richardson, Renee George and the rest of the talented Hanover High squad penciled in.

"I'm hoping they can pull it off," said Cohasset head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni, who believes the outcome will be about three points either way.

"It's going to be a very tough meet. I'll feel confident if they're really focused with drive and determination.

Because of school cancellations, the Skippers haven't practiced since last Friday night after the Carver meet. Ardizzoni said the squad would work out on Wednesday, the day before Hanover comes to town.

The balance beam and will be the event to watch particularly close. They have proven to be the events the Lady Skippers usually do extremely well on, helping to set the stage for the remaining events.

"Those events are very crucial against a tough team," Ardizzoni said.

Cohasset had its share of problems staying on the beam against Carver, but did manage to grab two of the top-three places. Erica Hettstrom won with an 8.35 score and Jodi Colwill grabbed third at 7.3.

The pair took the same places on the bars, scoring 7.4 and 7.35, respectively.

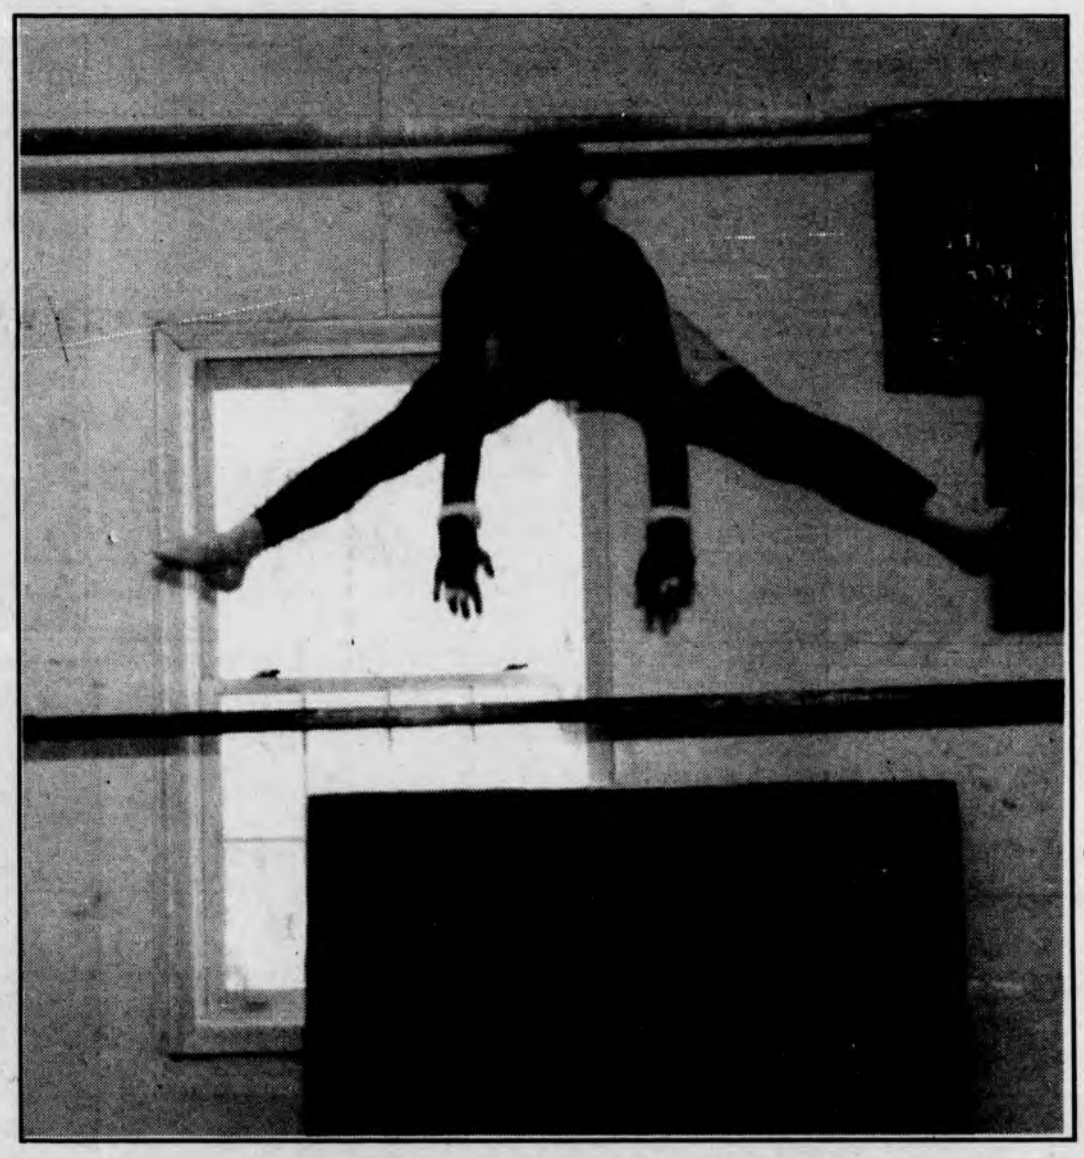
Hettstrom finished second (8.25) to her sister Tara (8.35) on the floor exercise and Megan Pratt hit a personal best for the season with her 7.9.

Kristen Reynolds was third (7.6) behind Colwill's winning vault score of 7.85.

While the Carver meet was not the team's best performance of the season, the squad did turn in its most solid performance on the floor exercise.

Ardizzoni is hoping the Lady Skippers can repeat that type of outing in a few more events with Hanover in the gym.

"If we win the next two meets," she said, "we're home free."



Cohasset High junior Erica Hettstrom performs a Straddle Back on the bars during a Skippers gymnastics practice. Cohasset, which is undefeated this season, faces a tough Hanover High squad on Jan. 11.

Skipper hoopsters get back on track

By JIM O'SULLIVAN
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Skippers hosted the Hanover Indians Friday night. Going into the game 5-2, they played a strong second half to triumph by a score of 76-63. With excellent efforts from Ryan Bishop, Burke Davis, Fred Howard and a host of others, the Skippers played their first game since the holiday break. The Indians were led by Brad Baronas, who scored 19, and Jon Peacock, who picked up 14.

However, before the varsity could take the floor, the JV squad had to seal up a win of their own. Playing a close game the whole way through, the Skippers trailed by three until sophomore Andy Hamilton sunk his trademark three-pointer from behind the arc.

Tied at 56, the two squads battled gallantly, the Skippers inbounding with about four seconds remaining. The ball went to freshman Jamie DeMichele, who fought through traffic and, showing incredible poise for a freshman, took the shot from three-point land as time ran out. The ball fell through the hoop as time expired and DeMichele was mobbed by ecstatic teammates and given a standing ovation by the crowd.

Davis, who went on to lead Cohasset with 17 points, drilled a three-pointer to open the game, and Bishop followed with a lay-up after a nice pass from sophomore Paul-Michael Quintin. Bishop came up with a strong rejection on the next play, and then took a pass from Jared Hardwick for two points.

Junior forward J.L. Williams added two of his own with a nice spin move in the paint. Hardwick knocked down a pull-up jumper to give the Skippers a 16-4 edge, and Quentin netted a three-pointer. Bishop, Williams, Davis and Hardwick hit free throws during a Hanover rally that cut the home team's lead to 26-25.

Howard missed a pull-up jumper, but followed, got his own rebound and put it back for a bucket. Hardwick sunk two foul shots and Davis tossed in a trey. Hardwick hit two more foul shots and the half-time score was 35-31 in favor of the Skippers.

Bishop found Hardwick under the basket for two, then grabbed an offensive rebound on the next possession, laying it back up and in for a pair. Davis notched another three and Hardwick's block set up a Howard hoop at the other end, making the score 44-36 in Cohasset's favor.

Snow, cold fails to cool Ritts' goal

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

Steve Ritts gets asked the same question over and over again.

"Aren't you freezing wearing those shorts?"

And the Cohasset resident gives the same answer every time.

"No, not really."

Ritts has been wearing the shorts for past six weeks as a way to raise money for the Travis Roy Fund. Roy, a former Boston University freshman, was paralyzed in his first shift of the varsity hockey team's season opener, last October, when he slammed headfirst into the boards after checking an opponent.

Ritts, who has never met Roy, was saddened by the accident and decided to wear shorts until the first day of spring on March 20. Friends, family members and fellow employees have donated a certain amount of money for every day Ritts wears the shorts.

So far, the undertaking has been extremely successful. Ritts has raised just over $1,700 and is closing in on his goal of $2,000.

While most people would shudder at the thought of wearing shorts during the winter, Ritts has rolled with the punches.

"It hasn't been tough," Ritts said. "I'm used to shoveling. People ask me if it's tough with the snow, but it really hasn't been that bad.

"Actually it's better because it's not all that windy."

The only time Ritts has felt the least bit uncomfortable was when the wind was blowing particularly hard one da and the wind chill brougl the temperature well belo zero.

"The wind is what reall gets you," he said. "Beyon that it's fine.

"It has been easier than thought it would be."

Skipper hoopsters get back on track

Hardwick scored and Howard sank a free throw. Tough offensive rebounding by Howard and junior forward Brian Kilroy set up Williams, who swished a jumper. Hardwick's three free throws and Howard's block kept the Indians at bay, 51-41. Howard found Hardwick for a bucket, Bishop sank two free throws and Davis up-faked and drove for an easy lay-up, widening the lead to 14 points. Bishop hit two more from the charity stripe and Davis reeled off four points for the Skippers.

Howard then went on a tear, scoring eight points to the Indians' five. Howard's spurt put the game out of reach, making the score 74-60. However, CHS wasn't through. Head Coach Ron Ford sent in sophomores Grant Emde and Matt Belson, and junior Lutz Grunwald. Emde finished off the game with a lay-up as the buzzer sounded.

After the game, Ford was happy with the performance of several players. "We had a balanced effort tonight," he said. "They tied after our good start, and I was proud of us because we didn't back down. Tonight, we proved that we're a tough team. Played defense in the end, when we needed to. We have to play more defense over a longer stretch of the game. Ryan Bishop, Fred Howard, Burke Davis, a;nd Brian Kilroy all played excellent games. Hardwick played a smart game. He had a lot of assists, good ball movement, he showed leadership tonight."

Hardwick also stressed the second half as Cohasset's strong point."As a team we played really well," he said, "In the second half, we sucked ii up when they tried to make their run. We're starting t play as a team, it's coming together, and our perfor mance has been good in th close games."

ment because it's a higher level and that's how you improve," he said.

Prior to the tourney, the Skippers improved their record to 5-1 in dual-meet competition with a convincing 46-18 drubbing of Milton, last Thursday.

So dominant were the Skippers, they won seven of their eight matches by pin with just one day of practice heading in.

Sweeney said Milton is in a transition period and the team is still building for the future. The W-H tourney was a more accurate representation of Cohasset's conditioning.

However, a win's a win and Sweeney was happy with the squad's effort.

Among those Cohasset wrestlers who pinned their opponents were Mike Baird (112), Gledhill (119), Ben Littauer (125), Duffy (135), Doug Sheerin (140), John Whitehouse (152) and Adam Sasso (189). Buckley won his match on points.

Sweeney said with the missed practices, it is important the wrestlers still maintain their conditioning and weight.

"You can't go backwards with it," he said. "You have to keep up the conditioning. If two athletes with equal skill get on the mat together, the one who is better conditioned is going to win."

Officer injured, cruiser damaged in collision

Another police officer was injured and police cruiser damaged this week in a traffic accident.

At 7:13 p.m., Friday (Jan. 5), Officer Paul Laugelle injured his shoulder when his cruiser was hit broadside by a pick up truck in Cohasset Village, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Brook and South Main Streets, Noonan said.

Officer Laugelle's cruiser, which was exiting Brook Street, was struck on the front quarter driver's side by a 1986 Dodge pick up truck driven by James A. Duane of Scituate, who was heading north on South Main St., Sgt. Robert W. Jackson explained.

Police cited Duane for operating with revoked registration; operating an uninsured motor vehicle; operating with an expired inspection sticker; and for speed that is greater than reasonable and proper for the conditions, Jackson said.

Damage to the cruiser, which is still in service, is about $2,000, Jackson said.

Duane's car was impounded, police said.

Last month, a police cruiser sustained $7,000 in damage in an accident on Rte. 3A. Officer Shellee Peters was injured when the cruiser's open front door struck her during the collision.

Noonan said this week, the department is using the animal control officer's car with chains on the wheels as a back up patrol car.

Officers Peters and Laugelle are back at work.

Bake sale raises money for Clougherty family

By LINDA BOLSTER & HELENE GARBER
Special to the Mariner

Saturday, Jan. 6, the Deer Hill PSO held a bake sale at the Deer Hill School and the high school during the basketball games (which are held all day).

The bake sale proceeds are to benefit the Clougherty family who had the house fire Jan. 2.

During the snowstorm last week the Deer Hill Room mothers were busy calling 60 or more Deer Hill moms to bake. There were many different kinds of baked goods from brownies, Irish soda bread to homemade pies.

Fifth- and sixth-graders Ashley Leahy, Catherine Coyne and Carlie Carter worked at the tables all day. Ashley and Catherine at the Deer Hill and Carlie at the high school.

Their helpers were Caroline Carr who was there most of day, Shelley Carter, Ben Bolster, Amanda Watts, Cara Foley, Nick Bolster, Peter Whoriskey, Sean Chase and Caitlin Flint.

Sue Carr, who is always so generous with her time, was also there all day.

There were two raffles donated. Chip Bolster donated six lobsters won by Donna Davis, and John Durkin donated four Bruins tickets (center ice) which the Dwyer family won.

Lyn and Joe Previte donated the coffee maker, coffee, sugar, cups, etc. to sell at the Deer Hill School.

We wanted to thank everyone for their time and help to make this bake sale a success.

The bake sale made $750 with an additional donation from the PSO totalling $800. The proceeds will go to a Toys 'R Us gift certificate for Leo, Flossie and Grace and the remainder will go to the family fund set up at the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank in Cohasset.

Last but not least, thank you to Carmine, owner of the Strawberry Parfait, for the glass jar to hold the donations and the first donation in that Linda Bolster and Helene Garber are Deer Hill PSO representatives.

Red Cross blood drive is slated

The Red Cross has scheduled the next Cohasset Community Blood Drive for Wednesday, Jan. 17. The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Unitarian Parish House at 23 North Main Street from 2 to 7 p.m. Babysitting assistance will be provided after 3 p.m. The Red Cross always experiences a decrease in blood donations during the winter months despite the ongoing need for blood and blood by-products.

The Red Cross counts on a good turnout when it visits Cohasset so please respond, if possible, when a volunteer from one of the church, civic, corporate or social organizations calls. New donors are welcome and needed. To register and make an appointment for donating at a specific time or if you have any questions, please call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 383-1290.

Junior voices at choral event

Saturday, March 2, Junior Voices will join with children from other choirs in Belmont, Brookline, North Andover and Chelmsford at an all-day choral festival in Brookline. Junior Voices will welcome new members for the second semester who have a strong love of singing and the ability to match pitches. The South Shore children's chorus, directed by Margo Euler, is open to children in grades three through seven. Rehearsals are on Tuesdays from 4 to 5:15 p.m. starting Jan. 16 at Wilder Hall on Main St., Hingham. Pre-registration is required by Jan. 15. Call 749-6561 for further information.

New school on agenda

Town meeting is Monday

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Although there are only two articles on the warrant, Monday's special town meeting is expected to draw a crowd.

"I don't think we'll have any trouble reaching a quorum," said town Moderator George L. Marlette about the 100-voter minimum needed to get the meeting underway.

Voters will be asked to approve borrowing $13.93 million for a new elementary school on town-owned land on Sohier Street near the Deer Hill School; renovations Deer Hill; and an on-site sewer treatment plant to serve both schools.

The meeting gets underway at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

Officials say that the state will pay 60 percent of the nearly $14 million project, leaving the town to pay 40 percent, or just under $6 million. The town must approve and submit a proposal before June 1 to ensure that the project receives state reimbursement under its current formula.

A 2/3 town meeting vote is required for approval because it is a "borrowing" article, Marlette said.

Approval of the article will set the stage for a debt-exclusion override at a special election Feb. 10. The project will add an average of $116 per year to the typical property tax bill for the next 25 years, officials said. A typical Cohasset home is valued at $242,000.

The $116 figure is averaged over the life of the bond issue. Property taxes will actually be higher in the early years of borrowing because of the time lag for state reimbursement to kick in, town administrator Gregory Doyon explained.

Marlette said he will limit the Home prices continue to climb

Fewer houses in Cohasset changed owners in 1995, but the average sale price increased by more than $120,000 over the last four years.

According to information from the Plymouth County Board of Realtors, which tracks sales throughout the state, 1995 saw 84 houses sold in Cohasset, a decrease from the 100 sold the previous year.

But the average sale price continues an upward trend: from $268,724 in 1992; to $297,634 in 1993; to $312,042 in 1994; to $383,877 in 1995.

The overwhelming majority of the sales are existing homes, with only four building permits issued for new single family home construction in 1995.

There is little buildable land remaining in Cohasset, according to real estate agent Judy Parsons at the Hunneman office on South Main Street. This situation is exacerbated by the strict septic system requirements of Title V that went into effect last year.

Participation in Turkey Hill land purchase sought

Cohasset and Hingham would each own the land within their town with the Trustees managing the property.

— Valerie Talmage, Trustees of Reservations.

The Trustees of Reservations are negotiating the purchase of 55 acres of land at the top of Turkey Hill, that will link the Whitney Woods and Wompatuck State Park, and provide a spectacular view of Boston Harbor.

The property is now owned by the heirs of Joseph Saponaro who operated a riding stable near his home at the top of the hill until his death in 1987.

Valerie Talmage, land protection specialist for the Trustees of Reservations, said Tuesday that the negotiations have been on going for more than a year. She hopes to have an agreement in time for town meetings in Cohasset and Hingham when the towns will be asked to appropriate funds for the purchase.

"We can't go to town meeting with a wish," Talmage said, but added an agreement is possible before the town meetings.

The property crosses the town line, with 30 acres in Hingham and 25 acres on the Cohasset side.

The Trustees of Reservations operates the 800-acre Whitney Woods, and 250 acres at the Worlds End reservation, in additional to other conservation properties in Massachusetts.

Property taxes are due

Property tax bills for the third quarter of fiscal year 1996 have been mailed and are payable no later than 7 p.m., Feb. 1.

Payments should be sent to the treasurer/collector's office. The owner of recently sold property should forward the bill to the new owner or return it to the tax collector's office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

For more information, call 383-9900, Ext. 113.

Voter registration deadlines

The town clerk's office will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m., Jan. 20, the last day to register to vote for the Feb. 10 special town election.

Nomination papers for the April 6 Annual Town Election are now available at the town clerk's office for the following positions: selectmen (two for three years); moderator; treasurer/collector; school committee (one for three years); library trustee (three for three years); assessor (one for three years); board of health (one for three years); housing authority (one for five years); recreation commission (one for five years); planning board (one for five years); sewer commission (one for three years); water commission (one for three years).

Voter registration forms are also available at the Cohasset Post Office and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The forms may be mailed or hand-delivered to the town clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

Appointed to drug committee

Ronald Hammer, Margot Adams and Susan Thompson were appointed to the drug and alcohol committee during Tuesday night's selectman's meeting.

Meeting/election dates set

Selectmen this week set the following dates for the local election and town meetings: special town meeting, Jan. 22; special override election, Feb. 10; annual town meeting, March 30; and town election, April 6.

Conservation request accepted

The conservation commission is requesting $19,753 for the upcoming fiscal year, which includes $17,500 for a parttime agent.

If the commission needs specialized assistance, the applicant must pay.

The budget has dropped because secretarial services are now included in the town administrator's budget.

The commission will be hiring a new secretary to replace Pat Walsh, who retires in June. The new secretary will work fewer hours and will receive an entry rate of pay.

Snow budget deficit soars

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

The snow is melting, but Cohasset's snow removal budget is mounting up, with the most recent figures showing the town has spent almost twice its budgeted amount.

Town administrator Gregory Doyon said this winter's total costs for road sanding, snow plowing, and snow removal have reached $86,152. This amount exceeds the annual $45,000 snow removal budget to produce a deficit that now stands at $41,151.

Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling reported Tuesday that a bona fide "January Thaw" is imminent, with temperatures in the mid- to high-40s expected by the middle of the week, possibly reaching 50 degrees.

Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield reported that the Sandy Beach parking lot is full with snow that has been removed from street corners, parking lots, and sidewalks.

With a break in snowstorms, crews have been able to remove snow from sidewalks.

"We need to get rid of the snow now," Litchfield said. "It's all dirty."

Although Friday's rain helped to reduce the amount of snow, it also posed a new set of problems for highway department crews who had to find buried catch basins in an effort to alleviate street flooding.

Litchfield said workers were able to find the catch basins at the worst locations. But, in other places, where the rain could not drain quickly, puddles froze when the temperature dropped. This produced another round of sanding, he said.

The state Department of Environmental Protection has issued guidelines to Massachusetts cities and towns regarding the dumping of snow into harbors and other bodies of water.

While snow dumping in uplands area is the first alternative, the guidelines state that snow and ice that are not visibly contaminated can be dumped into waterways.

"In coastal communities, preference should be given to disposal in salt water if reasonably available," the guidelines state.

DEP also advises that ice and snow should not be dumped into saltmarshes and vegetated wetlands, shellfish beds, mudflats, or near sources of drinking water.

The popular Road Race by the Sea will take place March 31. Selectmen this week gave the Rotary Club permission to hold the event.

Legal bills paid

This week selectmen approved two legal bills from special counsel Warner & Stackpole, for a total of some $14,400 and a bill from town counsel Richard Henderson for $1,411.

Lawyer may be hired for landfill hearings

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Selectmen planned to meet in emergency session at 4 p.m. Wednesday (after the Cohasset Mariner went to press) to consider hiring a special counsel to represent them in the site assignment hearings on the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Warner & Stackpole, the town's current environmental counsel, will assist the board of health during the hearings, which start Tuesday and continue Thursday and every Tuesday and Thursday as needed.

Selectmen pointed out at their meeting Monday that the administrative role the health board plays in the hearings is separate from that of other town boards, which will testify, and this necessitates having separate counsel.

"We definitely should have counsel, the other side will bring in good technical people," said Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown.

Selectmen planned to meet with Kenneth L. Kimmell of the Boston law firm, Bernstein, Cushner & Kimmell, which expressed interest in representing the town during the hearings for $135 an hour.

The law firm successfully represented the town of Webster in its fight against a proposed landfill in the adjacent town of Douglas, selectmen said. The firm is also special counsel in Hinsdale on landfill issues.

It is not clear how many hours would be required. Selectmen were not sure how many hearings Kimmell would have to attend and how much time he needed to get up to speed on the issue.

John K. McNabb Jr., who is vice-president of Stop Any Further Expansion, a citizens' group opposed to the landfill expansion, explained that the burden is on the town to establish the record beyond the recent state Department of Environment decision that the Rte. 3A site is suitable for acceptance of construction and demolition debris.

"The regulations require the board of health grant the site assignment unless they make a determination that the site is dangerous to public health." It's as though the burden of proof is on the board of health, he said.

"We need an attorney with expertise on how to find holes in the DEP determination and CHL presentation," McNabb said.

The town is concerned that any expansion of the existing landfill will pose a serious threat to the town's water supply.

Snow problems with roofs

The recent record snow accumulation produced the problem of additional weight on area roofs as the weekend rains arrived.

Building commissioner Robert Egan said he received only one report of a roof problem in town at the Cohasset Tennis Club on Cedar Street when personnel there detected distortion in a steel beam.

A structural engineer was contacted, Egan said. Snow was removed from the roof of the 25-year-old prefabricated building, and it was stabilized from the inside.

Egan said he also checked the roofs of all Cohasset schools and found no problems. In all cases, wind had blown most of the snow off the roofs.

"There's never as much snow on the roof as on the ground," he said, adding school roofs are designed to support as much as three feet of heavy, wet snow. The most snow he found in any one location was a small section where approximately 29 pounds of snow had accumulated.

reach an agreement to buy the Turkey Hill property, this will increase the vast area of open space that includes the nearly 2,900 acres of Wompatuck State Park with portions in Hingham, Cohasset, Norwell, and Scituate.

Of the total site, approximately two-thirds of Turkey Hill is wooded, and the remaining portion open field which offers the commanding view of Boston Harbor, the harbor islands, and the city skyline.

Hingham conservation agent Pine DuBois explained that state funds may be available to cover 52 percent of the purchase price of the property. In addition, the Trustees of Reservations, and private land conservation groups in Hingham and Cohasset may also contribute money that will decrease the amounts requested from voters at the town meetings.

"It's an unusual way to go about saving a piece of land," Talmage said, noting the three private groups and two towns involved in the purchase. "It makes [the purchase] reachable."

Although the purchase price is being negotiated, the Hingham conservation commission has asked the town's capital outlay committee for $200,000 for Hingham's share the Turkey Hill purchase, based on a $850,000 price.

Talmage noted that figure is not "firm" at this time, and could be higher or lower when a sales agreement is reached.

Cohasset and Hingham would each own the land within their town, she explained, with the Trustees managing the property.

DuBois said that there are likely to be additional costs associated with the purchase, possibly as high as $40,000, if site clean up is required. The property was used in the 1950s as a Nike missile radar tracking station, with a dormitory and office. The commanding view of the harbor made this an ideal location for the installation, she explained, but there may be some material remaining from that time that must be removed to restore the property.

Cohasset conservation commissioner Sue Cope said the application for state funds for the land purchase requires that both towns have updated open space plans.

The Cohasset open space plan has not been updated in 25 years, Cope said, noting that the possible purchase of Turkey Hill has provided the incentive to do this work now.

The plan must show how parcels of open land will be linked, managed, and made accessible for public use, she said, and include information on wildlife and vegetation.

The update project will take between nine and 12 months, Cope said. The commission will ask town meeting for $12,000 to complete to cover the costs of hiring a consultant who will prepare maps and write the final report that will be submitted with the state grant application.

In Hingham, DuBois said the commission also plans to hire a consultant to assist its grant application and open space plan. The last update took place in 1987, she said, when the town purchased the South Shore Country Club.

In addition to the Saponaro house, a water tank and a communications antenna are both located on the hill top.

DuBois said the water tank is owned by the Massachusetts-American Water Company which owns the land for the tank. The antenna is owned by Motorola, which leases the land. DuBois said that lease will not be renewed.

If the Trustees are able to buy the land, the Saponaro house could be converted to a visitors center, Talmage said.

Teacher standards is topic at Jan. 18 meeting

At a recent school committee meeting, Supt. Stephen Hart presented an overview of the performance standards for teachers and administrators.

The performance standards are required under the Education Reform Act. Next year will be the first year that the performance standards are used; however, Cohasset has had an evaluation tool for teachers and administrators in place for five years.

The criteria required by the state for performance standards were similar to Cohasset's evaluation standards. So Hart created Cohasset's performance standards by blending the state's guidelines and Cohasset's evaluation tool.

In order to more closely match the state's standards, Cohasset added a "protection of equity and appreciation of diversity" heading.

Examples of teachers' standards include: having a physical environment conducive to instructing students and keeping an up-to-date knowledge of curriculum.

One of the ways evaluators gauge if a teacher meets those standards is by monitoring the interest and reactions of students.

A public hearing on the standards will be held tonight.

The standards have to be approved by the state, as well as teachers, administrators and the school committee.

In other business:

• Hart and the school committee congratulated Ryan Sawchuk for earning the number one ranking in the senior class. Sawchuk will be attending Princeton in the fall.

time allowed for the first time a citizen speaks is up to the moderator's discretion and "at this time that will be five minutes," he said.

Marlette will have the article voted by paper ballot.

The other article is a re-vote of a article authorizing an increase of sewer rates approved at October's special town meeting. The article was reconsidered the second night without notice being given to voters who attended the first night, Marlette explained.

It is a housekeeping matter that should only take a few minutes, he said.

said. "The town has wonderful appeal," noting the proximity to the ocean and the New England village atmosphere.

Buyers are now looking for more expensive houses, moving up from more modest houses, she said. With more couples working, a house in "move-in" condition is most attractive.

"Younger buyers are both working and often don't have time to fix up a house," Parsons explained.

Houses also sold more quickly last year with the average time on the market of 124 days as compared to 140 days the previous year.

In neighboring Hingham, 162 houses were sold in 1995, at an average sale prices of $298,153. Both these figures represent an increase from the previous year, when 135 houses sold at an average price of $267,528. In Hingham in 1995, there were 34 building permits issued for new single family home construction, as compared with 48 in 1994.

Selectmen consider options for old Hagerty showroom

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Annual town meeting voters will have several choices on what to do with the Victorian house on the town-owned Hagerty property on Parker Avenue.

Town meeting authorized purchasing the two-acre harbor-front parcel three years ago for $470,000. Since then, a study committee has looked into turning the former Cohasset Colonials property into a recreational area for the town.

The town tore down most of the factory buildings at the site but left the house, which was the Colonials' showroom, and a few other structures.

Selectmen will ask town meeting to consider changing the zoning of the house and about 8,000-square feet around the house from light industrial to commercial, water-front use, or residential and will ask that the remainder of the property be zoned open space. Voters will also be asked to give selectmen authorization to sell or lease the house which is appraised at about $200,000.

At the 1993 annual town meeting, officials said the house might be sold at some point to help the town recoup some of the cost of purchasing the property.

The town has had proposals to buy and lease the house.

Selectman Sullivan, fire chief at odds over need for call backs

Selectman Michael Sullivan and Fire Chief Roger Lincoln cannot agree on the need for "call backs" to cover the station when the ambulance is out of town.

Lincoln presented his revised fiscal year 1997 proposed budget to selectmen this week but discussion focused on the about $30,000 in overtime for "call backs," which occur when the town needs additional coverage.

The chief's total request is $1.2 million which is same as this year's budget.

Lincoln explained that money for call backs has always been included in the budget because a need is expected due to simultaneous calls and other emergencies.

With five-man minimum manning requirements in the past, when two men took the ambulance out of town, three were left at the station – now with four men on shift, there are two men left in town to answer the second call, Lincoln explained, increasing the need for calls backs.

Lincoln feels three men should be on duty when the ambulance is out of town.

The disagreement between Sullivan and Lincoln also involves the changed role of the dispatcher. Before civilian dispatch was in place, a firefighter manned the desk at the fire department. Now a civilian dispatcher handles all the calls from the police department.

Lincoln explained that the firefighter who used to sit on the desk could answer a call if needed – and now with civilian dispatch, that extra pair of hands is not available except through a call back. In the past if the firefighter was called off the desk, the fire department phones could be switched to the police department.

Sullivan took exception to the explanation noting that situations when the firefighter on the desk was called away were very rare.

But Lincoln tried to explain the call backs are a precautionary measure because the fire department is responsible for providing the town with adequate protection for an unexpected emergency.

"We have to protect people," Lincoln said.

Lincoln's entire overtime request, which includes call backs, sick leave, and training costs, is $122,000.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Welcome to a brand-new member of the Pratt family

The Piasecki family must have had one wonderful holiday season, they had their brand new baby to celebrate it with them.

Hannah Rose Piasecki was born Dec. 12, at 1:24 p.m.; she weighed 6 pounds, 2 ounces. Her mom, Alison (Smith) and Richard, her dad, are so pleased and proud! As are Renee Smith (Hannah's maternal grandmother, formerly of Cohasset, now of Barnstable, Mass.) and Marguerite Piasecki of Moriches, New York, Hannah's paternal grandmother. With all of this snow that we are having, it is possible that the groundhog will see his shadow before Hannah can get out to see hers!

Anyway, we all welcome you Hannah !

Douglas R. Ellinger, the son of George and Patricia Ellinger of Cohasset, is returning to the United States following a fall semester abroad in Australia. Doug took part in the University of New South Wales program and will return to Colby College in Waterville, Maine, for the remainder of the academic year. Doug is a member of the Class of 1997 at Colby and is majoring in administrative science.

Stephanie Eno of Cohasset was awarded a Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in Communications from Flagler College, St. Augustine, Florida at the fall commencement ceremony held Dec. 16, on the college campus. We congratulate you, Stephanie, and hope to hear more about it!

Cohasset has a celebrity in its midst, Vince Longo!

Vince (who most of you know is the producer at the South Shore Music Circus) has been nominated for a 1995 Concert Industry Award for the "Talent Buyer Of The Year!" This is such a big honor in the theatre industry, just to be nominated!

The winners will be announced at the annual Concert Industry Awards Party Saturday, Feb. 3, we'll be certain to let you know the outcome — we're sure that Vince will win, but we will tell him to "break a leg" anyway as added good luck.

Congratulations go to Donna and Peter Pratt this week, they are parents of another son! His name is Jared Jerome Pratt and he was born Jan. 10. Jared joins his brother Benjamin, and mom sure is going to be busy! Another family anxiously awaiting spring! Enjoy your wonderful new baby, everyone.

Did you know that the Appalachia Service Project has a super way for you to enjoy the Super Bowl, they can prepare your food for you! They are offering an assortment of sub sandwiches, Greek salad and chili (with or without meat), and each is $4. The proceeds of this fundraiser will help support the work week in Appalachia this June. The order deadline is Thursday, Jan. 25. Please call Ami Argus at 383-9325 for ordering or questions that you might have.

Had a nice note from Karen Sheerin last week, did you know that she is now a certified personal trainer and a fitness counselor. After the holidays, lots of us can use her advice and training knowledge, give her a call at 383-9728.

Lyn Previte called last week, she certainly has had quite a winter thus far! Lyn has been in and out of the hospital (knowing her, she does so much she doesn't take the time to allow herself to get better, she is a dynamo!), and told me she didn't know what she would have done without all of her friends and neighbors who helped her out! They provided meals, did shopping for her, just "everything" — she and her family want to thank all of you so much!

An added note, Lyn misses her kiddos at her Sweet Relief play care group, and assures them she is getting better every day!

Hats off to Florence Jerome and all of the other families from Route 3A to Bound Brook Lane, people are still talking about their luminaries they put out last Christmas Eve! Placed on top of the snow, they really were a beautiful sight — so much so, they are hoping it will be an annual event! Mark it on your calendar now, that way you'll be sure to remember it as part of your holiday festivities.

The Second Congregational Church is holding a concert Jan. 27, it is P B & J who will be the stars. P B & J appeared last year, they are New England's premier acoustic trio, and everyone adores them! The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m., it will be at the church (43 Highland Ave., next to the town hall), and admission will be $5. Call 383-0345 for any questions.

My mailbox held a special treat last week, a letter from Sharon (McEwan) Brennan! Sharon's husband, Jim, received a letter concerning his 40th class reunion (CHS '56) and it made them think of their old hometown (Sharon graduated from CHS also, class of '62!) The Brennans live in Kentucky (Lexington), as do their two girls (Susan is an accountant in Louisville and Kim is a medical student at the University of Kentucky); both Kim and Sharon are "ensconced at the university," working hard I'm sure. Anyway, hopefully we will see them this summer, meanwhile they subscribe to the Mariner so we can all say a big Hello from Cohasset (the land of snow and cold).

It wasn't really a surprise but last Friday the Boston Bruins president/general manager Harry Sinden confirmed that Cohasset's Mike O'Connell definitely will succeed him as the club's general manager. With Mike on the player side of the Bruins team, he'll be a whiz at solving lots of their problems — he is a real people person. Those who know him will tell you how kind, fair and honest he is — anyway, we congratulate Mike for his hard work earning him one of the most coveted positions in hockey (or any pro sport for that matter!).

Kelsie Blair Litchfield is pleased and proud to announce the birth of her sister, Tori Clark Litchfield. Tori was born Jan. 14 at 10:58 a.m., she was 20 inches long and weighed 8 lbs. 4 ozs.

Dad, John, and mom Kim (Chatterton) are both so thrilled (and surprised that they didn't have to travel through a snowstorm to get Tori here). Need I tell you that Tori's grandparents are beside themselves with joy and love? "Mimi" (Marge) Litchfield (paternal grandmom); Clark and Sal Chatterton (maternal grandparents); and of course, "Mimi" (Fran) Chatterton, great-grandmother (for the fifth time). Oh, are we all excited! Just ask to see pictures, we all have them!

That's it for this week, please call with your news!

EDITORIAL

'I have a dream . . .'

It's hard for most of us to realize now but Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has been dead for nearly 28 years.

He was gunned down by an assassin April 4, 1968, on the balcony of a motel in Memphis, Tenn.

A whole generation of Americans, both black and white, have grown to adulthood since that day.

Fully half the population of the United States can't recall ever seeing him live in person or on TV.

But his words – delivered on Aug. 28, 1963 – outlining his vision of an America stripped of inequality still live on.

"In spite of the difficulties and frustrations of the moment," he told the throng from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, "I still have a dream. It is a dream deeply rooted in the American dream.

"I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self evident; that all men are created equal.'

"I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit together at the table of brotherhood.

"I have a dream that even the state of Mississippi, a desert state sweltering with the heat of injustice and oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

"I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

"I have a dream today. I have a dream that one day the state of Alabama . . . will be transformed into a situation where little black boys and black girls will be able to join hands with little white children and walk together as sisters and brothers.

"I have a dream today. I have a dream that one day every valley shall be exalted, every hill and mountain shall be made low, the rough places will be made plains, and the crooked places will be made straight, and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together.

"This is our hope. This is the faith with which I return to the South. With this faith we will be able to hew out of the mountain of despair a stone of hope. With this faith we will be able to transform the jangling discords of our nation into a beautiful symphony of brotherhood.

"With this faith we will be able to work together, to pray together, to struggle together, to go to jail together, to stand up for freedom together, knowing we will be free one day.

"This will be the day when all of God's children will be able to sing with new meaning 'My country 'tis of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing. Land where my fathers died, land of the Pilgrim's pride, from every mountainside, let freedom ring.'

"When we let freedom ring, when we let it ring from every village and every hamlet, from every state and every city, we will be able to speed up that day when all of God's children, black men and white men, Jews and Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics, will be able to join hands and sing in the words of that old Negro spiritual, 'Free at last! Free at last! Thank God Almighty, we are free at last!"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

School group responds to letter

To the Editor:

We would like to respond to a letter from Roy Fitzsimmons that appeared in the Dec. 14 edition of the Cohasset Mariner. In his letter, Mr. Fitzsimmons questions the need for a new school and raises other issues that we feel we must address.

First, Mr. Fitzsimmons states that the "...school committee and the superintendent are trying to make a case that we need more space in our schools." In fact, the recommendation for the need for new school facilities has come from the School Facilities/School Building Committee. This committee is an independent committee comprising nine members, three of whom are appointed by the selectmen, three by the town moderator and three by the school committee. The School Facilities/School Building Committee was authorized by the March 25, 1995 Annual Town Meeting to "...determine the most efficient or effective use of our present school buildings including the renovation of existing buildings and/or the construction of a new building..."

Since the Town Meeting, our committee has, with the assistance of our architect, Earl R. Flansburgh & Associates, conducted an Existing Conditions Review of all three Cohasset schools, including a report on each building's structural, mechanical, electrical, plumbing, architectural, landscape and civil components. The committee also identified the number and kinds of spaces necessary to meet the needs of Cohasset projected school enrollment through the year 2005. Although we were pleased that the school committee unanimously approved our recommendation, we want it to be clearly understood that the recommendation was a result of almost a year-long study conducted by our independent committee.

Second, while projected enrollment figures were a major concern of our committee, they were not the sole driving force behind our decision. We also considered the major deficiencies of the Osgood School that include health and safety issues, deterioration of a 70-year-old plus building, the inability of the building to support a modern educational program, and the present overcrowding that exists at Osgood. Mr. Fitzsimmons includes enrollment figures from 1968 to 1995 with his letter. He does not specify, however, that in 1971, when 602 students were listed as attending the Osgood School, 122 of these students attended kindergarten classes at the Unitarian Parish House. Therefore, the actual enrollment at Osgood was 480, a number which is actually the proposed enrollment for the Osgood School for the year 2005 (only 64 more students than are presently enrolled). Since educational programs today require more space than was needed in 1971, the overcrowding at Osgood is even more acute.

Third, our committee is very concerned about the financial impact of this project on the town. We have considered many options to meet the school system's needs. We determined that housing students for grades 6-12 in the same building is not appropriate. We also learned that the state will not provide any financial support for the renovation of the Osgood School. James Anderson, an administrator of the State Department of Education, has written, "...based on the on-site review, the Department of Education will not participate in aiding this project..." This means that any work conducted at the Osgood will have to be paid 100 percent by the town of Cohasset. We found that retaining the Osgood School and bringing it up to current acceptable standards would be a more expensive project than constructing a new school.

Finally, we would like to clarify that although there would be a delay in the initial reimbursement to the town by the state, the reimbursement would continue for a full 20-year period; the town will be reimbursed a full 60 percent of the project's costs.

We hope that this information is helpful and urge that all voters investigate this issue thoroughly so that they can make an informed decision at the Jan. 22 Special Town Meeting.

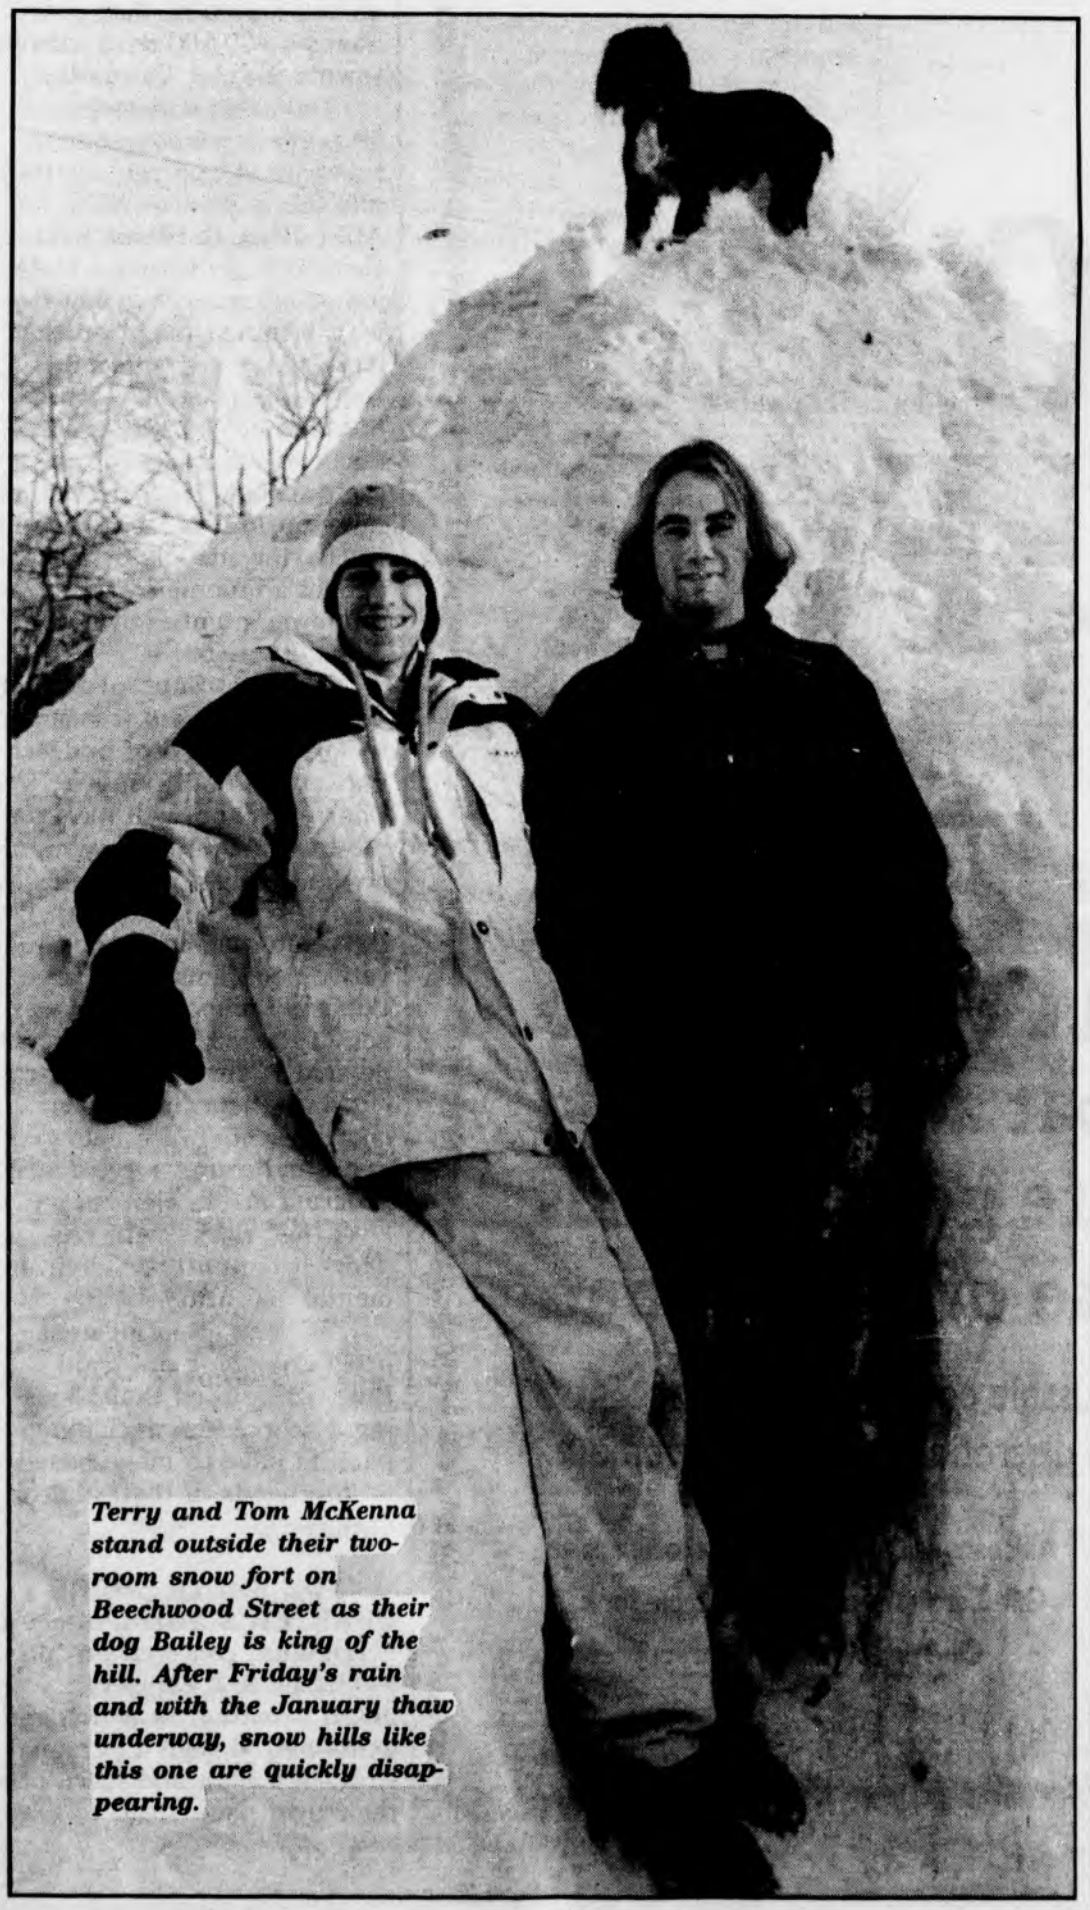
Snow days add up to winter fun for school kids

Staff photos/ Alan Chapman

Carlo and David Santiago hang on as they start down the sledding hill at Cohasset High School. January 1996 holds the new record for snow with a total depth of 32 inches, weather experts say.



Terry and Tom McKenna stand outside their two-room snow fort on Beechwood Street as their dog Bailey is king of the hill. After Friday's rain and with the January thaw underway, snow hills like this one are quickly disappearing.

Ryan Elizabeth Ingram runs back uphill at Cohasset High for another sledding run. So far this school year, Cohasset children have missed five days due to snow storms.

A look at South Shore Charter School

Town reimbursed 50% of tuition costs

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

Like those in other public schools, students at the Hull-based South Shore Charter School enjoyed another couple of snow days last week thanks to the Jan. 5 blizzard.

But unlike school districts where officials worry about finding ways to meet state education requirements for 180 school days if severe winter weather continues – school director Timothy Anderson said charter school students – 15 of them from Cohasset – can have up to 199 days of school this year.

School began Sept. 6 at the experimental new school and will run until June 23 or longer if students choose to continue their education into the summer months.

The new public schools give families a new educational choice and with a non-traditional curriculum and innovative teaching methods serve as "research and development lab" for other public school systems, officials say.

Except Thanksgiving, the week between Christmas and New Year's, Labor day, Memorial Day, and the Fourth of July – the charter school stays open observing no other holidays, half days, and no scheduled February or April vacations.

Students are expected to be in school at least 180 days, Anderson explained, but they are permitted to take vacations when they want to.

An extended school year and student choice for vacation times are just a couple of the many differences that have set this and other charter schools school apart from traditional public school systems.

The new public schools give families a new educational choice and with a non-traditional curriculum and innovative teaching methods serve as "research and development lab" for other public school systems, officials say.

Formed through the 1993 Education Reform Act, 15 charter schools opened throughout the state last year. Five more charter schools are slated to open in September, said Acting Director of Charter Schools Paul Herdman from the state's Executive Office of Education. Under the reform act as many as 25 charter schools can be opened across the commonwealth. Herdman said with strong support for the new schools from the governor, there is the potential for legislation to further increase the number of charter schools.

But a big concern for local communities – which must compete with charter schools for students – is funding.

State legislation requires that tuition dollars follow the students – which means school districts will lose not only students but also state education aid (chapter 70) dollars. To ease the burden, in the the charter schools' first year of operation some towns hardest hit by student transfers received 100 percent reimbursement in state aid while others towns, which lost fewer students, got 50 percent back from the state.

In Cohasset, 15 students have made the switch to the South Shore Charter School and with a per pupil cost of $5,263 annually, that puts about a $79,000 dent into the town's chapter 70 funding.

Cohasset will receive a 50 percent reimbursement this year, 40 percent in 1997, and 30 percent in 1998. After 1998, Herdman said there will be no more state aid reimbursement, which was designed to soften the blow of the transition on school districts. Over time, the idea is that school districts will either improve their schools so that they do not continue to lose students to charter schools or make budget adjustments based on the fewer number of students, he said.

Cohasset Supt. of Schools Stephen Hart said it's hard to say what kind of budget impact the South Shore Charter School will have on the town or how many more students might attend the school in its second year. But Hart noted some of the innovative programs going on in Cohasset schools including activity-based learning, which he said is similar to the project-based learning at the charter school (see below) and a naturalist-in-residence program at the elementary level that works with students in an outdoor environmental classroom.

"We have a lot of new programs going on," said Hart, who noted that choosing a school is a decision parents have to make based on the needs of their children.

THE SOUTH SHORE CHARTER SCHOOL offers a curriculum centered on "project-based and competency-based learning" in which students help design a personal education plan and learn at their own pace. Add to that at half-way point of first year in Hull

a strong focus on parent and community involvement and you have the basic principals behind the new school, Anderson says.

Student assessments let parents know how students are doing and whether they have established competency in a subject. If parents request it, letter grades are provided at the end of the semester and in quarterly progress reports. All parents receive teacher comments on how their child is doing And at the secondary level, teachers, too, get graded as students get a chance to evaluate educators.

The second semester begins Feb. 2, and Anderson said feedback from students, teachers, and parents has been positive.

At both the primary and secondary level, students study, learn, and work on projects in small groups called pods – many contain a range of ages and all integrate most academic disciplines through project-based learning.

Students move from pod to pod and work on a minimum of three projects on four different themes: the environment, communication, entrepreneurship, and human service.

Projects in action include a lunch business started by second graders at the primary school. They take orders for lunch from fellow students, call the orders in to a local sub shop in Hull (which meets the state's nutritional requirements), collect the money, and pay for the lunches when they are delivered.

The school does not have a cafeteria but the sub shop is working out well for students who want to buy lunch, while those who do not, brown bag it, Anderson said.

Another project under the entrepreneurship theme involves several secondary students working to restore and preserve the tugboat Luna sunk in the Charles River Basin in 1930. The student group leader organizes fund-raising by using the school's public relations firm – a separate project under the communications theme – and coordinates the workers who head into Boston to work on board the boat on Saturdays.

IN ITS FIRST YEAR, the charter school hired 11 full-time teachers, 30 part-time teachers, and benefits from contributions of volunteer parents and community members, Anderson explains.

In the fall, parents constructed a playground for the primary school and continue to be involved in school issues serving on the primary and secondary school councils.

Members of Hingham's Rotary Club are frequent visitors to the secondary school giving career information and ideas to students. And corporate and college partners like Suffolk University and Massasoit Community College offer courses to students who can earn college credits giving them a head start in higher education.

The school's extended-day program offers after-school educational opportunities for students who can study Russian and other subjects or try their hands at chess up until 6 p.m.

At the charter school, students play a large role in shaping not only their own educational experience but also guiding the course of the school as it continues to evolve.

One third of the members of the secondary school council are students who help to address grievance and discipline issues by making recommendations. This kind of student involvement is important in getting students to understand the consequences of their actions and the responsibility involved in making decisions, Anderson says.

Self-governance is a basic part of the secondary school's success, said Anderson, who noted one of the charter's school's greatest achievements this year was establishing a culture of trust and respect in which the students have a hand in running the school.

"Many students came to us unhappy by something that had hurt them in school, that made them less curious, less interested or less ambitious," he said.

Empowering these students and encouraging them to take leadership roles has made a big difference, he added.

RECRUITING FOR NEXT YEAR's expanded enrollment will begin soon. Currently 150 are enrolled in grades K-2 and six through 12. Next year the school will add grades three, four and five increasing enrollment any where from 250 to 400 students. Already, 25 applications have been submitted and Anderson said the school will do its lottery drawing for next year's students early in March.

In addition to increasing enrollment, Anderson said the school looks to lease more space to accommodate the additional students. Currently the school works out of two buildings in Hull, and uses a nearby fitness studio for its physical education programs.

Anderson said the school also seeks new corporate partners to bring new educational opportunities and resources to the school.

Ironing out what has been a slow transition to getting a completely on-line computer network in use, is another goal for Anderson, who was surprised by the difficulties the school has experienced in this area.

All students have e-mail accounts and the charter school receives Internet services through Suffolk University, said Anderson, who noted that secondary students are making the most use of the school's 22 computers so far. Some students and parents have phobias and it will take time to get everyone accustomed to using the system that will provide students and parents full computer access to curriculum information, teacher comments and assessments of students, and give them an opportunity to make comments of their own, he says.

Participation in landfill hearing urged

To the Editor:

Site Assignment Hearings for the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of Cohasset Heights Ltd. landfill begin at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 23, in town hall auditorium, and continue every Tuesday and Thursday night after that until completed. I urge Cohasset residents to attend these hearings and to participate in this critical phase of the permitting process.

By now, everyone in Cohasset should have received a copy of the "Petition for rights as a participant in the site assignment hearings." I urge every Cohasset resident to sign and send in one of these petitions to be received by the Board of Health before 4:30 p.m., Jan. 23, to reserve your right to speak out against the expansion or to submit a written comment letter.

The CHL solid waste operation threatens to expand far beyond the 23 acres of the existing landfill. The landfill expansion itself would extend CHL operations to another 27.5 acres for the landfill and another 8.3 acres for the materials processing operation on Route 3A where the golf driving range is. And, CHL owners are now proposing to establish a construction and recycling facility on the three acres of the old Winter Garden's building across Route 3A. CHL owners have purchased more than 100 acres of land around the current landfill – where will this all end?

Grapplers' pins net two more wins

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

They weren't pinned into the corner with nowhere to go. Instead, the Cohasset High wrestling team pinned the Norwell High Clippers into the mats.

Often.

The Skippers built a 48-0 lead up to the 152-pound weight class en-route to a convincing 60-18 victory last Thursday evening.

Cohasset registered all of its nine individual wins by pin in the lopsided win.

The Skippers then split a tri meet later in the week, improving their record to a none-too-shabby 7-2 on the season.

Head coach Torin Sweeney said the South Shore League meet against Norwell was a good one for the ever-improving Skipper club.

"It was a good league meet," he said. "Our guys wrestled very well. Once they put somebody on their back that was it."

The Clippers found themselves on their backs early and often as Mike Baird (112), Tucker Gledhill (119), Ben Littauer (125), Jordan Fiore (130), Kevin Duffy (135), Doug Sheerin (140), Eric Snow (145), Justin Buckley (171) and Adam Sasso (189) all won with convincing pins.

Cohasset then split a tri meet on Saturday with Sharon and Nauset. The Skippers lost an extremely evenly-

Pratt shines in Skippers' 27th consecutive win

Cohasset Mariner

The countdown has begun for the Cohasset High gymnastics team.

Led by the two season-best scores by Megan Pratt and first-places finishes from Tara Hettstrom and Jodi Colwill, the Skippers won their 27th consecutive meet – taking a huge step towards a third South Shore League title – with a 122.6 – 119.6 victory over Scituate.

The win extended Cohasset's record to a perfect 6-0 on the season and marked a clean sweep over the Sailors for the winter.

Skipper head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said it was Cohasset's consistency in this year's meets that she felt gave her squad the edge heading in.

"I felt really confident with the girls where they had score in the 120's in the past five weeks," Ardizzoni said.

First- and third-place finishes from Tara Hettstrom (7.5) and Megan Pratt (7.3) on the bars gave the Skippers a quick 29.1 – 27.7 lead.

Pratt also picked up the first of two season-best performances with her

Letters, awards presented at Gridiron Club Dinner

The 1995 annual Cohasset Gridiron Club Football Break Up Dinner was attended by more than 170 parents, players, school administrators, fans and coaches on Dec. 3 at the Chart House. Many participants were honored for their fall participation in Cohasset High School athletics.

Gridiron president Mike Sasso introduced cheerleading coach Kara Protulus following the dinner. The cheerleading squad showed tremendous effort throughout the year, and Protulus spoke about team work as she introduced its members, which include Holly Russell, Maureen Murphy, Stephanie Lubitz, Meredith Equi and Heather Conte, all seniors who cheered for their final football season.

Coaches Torin Sweeney and Brandon DeVoe introduced the freshman football team, which included seventh-, eighth- and ninth-graders. The team showed steady improvement, finishing the season with a strong 5-3 record.

Coaches Robert Knurek and Bobby Silvia took the podium to introduce the Cohasset varsity football team. Ten seniors were awarded letters as they finished their last football campaign. Included were Co-captains Brian Riley and Brian Sasso, Nate Caldwell, Greg Stevens, Kevin Gentile, Kevin Smith, Keith Wright, Ben Keefe, Patrick Reynolds and Mike Coates.

Following the letter awards, special award presentations were made. Brian Sasso and Nate Caldwell were awarded Golden Helmet Awards for being three-year varsity letter winners. Mike Coates earned the Coaches Award, Nate Caldwell was recognized as Most Improved Player and Patrick Reynolds was identified as the Unsung Hero.

Ben Keefe was awarded the Best Offensive Player award in conjunction with his leading blocker, Brian Sasso, who earned the Best Offensive Lineman award. Brian Riley garnered both the Best Defensive Player and the Most Valuable Player awards.

The evening ended with a special presentation by the Gridiron Club to the varsity letter winners. Each athlete was given a letter jacket, and the surprise and excitement were evident in the smiles of each of the players as they were introduced and given their jackets.

score. Her 8.2, third-place showing on the floor exercise was also Pratt's best score of the winter.

"She's looking really good right now and really came through for us," Ardizzoni said.

Cohasset then proceeded to keep all of its gymnasts on the beam and extended its lead to 2.7 points. Erica Hettstrom (7.8) and Colwill (7.7) took second and third, respectively.

Ardizzoni knew the strong beam performance wrapped up the win for the Skippers.

"They wanted that win really bad," she said. "Unless we had a disaster, we weren't going to lose the meet."

Colwill won the vault with a score of 7.7, followed closely by Erica Hettstrom in second (7.6) and Tara Hettstrom, whose 7.5 tied her for third. Erica also took second in the all-around at 30.9.

The Hettstrom's had identical second-place finishes on the floor exercise (8.3) with Pratt hot on their trail in third (8.2).

Carolyn Pratt also turned in a stellar performance with a personal best of 7.5.

Ardizzoni said she wouldn't be surprised to see the girls hit some of their highest scores in the weeks to come.

"I think we might get the best performances now because the pressure's off and they can relax," Ardizzoni said.

She quickly added that it was too early to think about a third consecutive league title because of the sickness and injury factor that is always lurking. And with eight girls on the squad, the loss of just one or two key gymnasts could spell disaster.

Cohasset did away with another nemesis, Hanover, in last Thursday night's meet.

Erica Hettstrom (floor) and Megan Pratt (beam) won their respective events while Pratt and Lauren Genovese both hit personal bests of 6.9 on the season.

matched contest against Sharon, 38-37, but soundly defeated Nauset, 54-18.

Sweeney's crew continued its pin streak when it needed the victories most. Down 32-7 and heading into the last six matches, Cohasset came alive with five pins.

"Even the match we lost we were four seconds away from winning," Sweeney said.

Baird and Duffy both won their matches with each chalking up a pin victory. J.P. Laugelle (171), Luke Caldwell (160) and Heavyweight Nate Caldwell won both their matches by pin.

In the Nauset meet, the Skippers got some help from one of their youngsters as eighth-grader Dan Mulligan (103) won his first match. Gledhill and Sheerin also had single-pin victories.

Cohasset was scheduled to wrestle Scituate on Wednesday before hosting Saturday's annual tournament.

Sweeney said the Sailors are "somewhat rebuilding" but predicted it would be a close meet.

In a sport whose score could change in a matter of seconds, however, Sweeney knew the Skippers were in no position to take Scituate lightly.

"I like to be cautiously optimistic," he said. "You never know what's going to happen."

Cohasset Business

Help offered to businesswomen

Baker MacKay Associates is kicking off Women Works '96, a series designed to develop the potential of women in business through effective communication skills while providing networking opportunities.

The first workshop will be held Thursday, Jan. 25, from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Days Inn, Rockland. Pre-registration is required, and the $25 fee, which includes a continental breakfast and all materials, must be pre-paid.

Checks, made payable to Baker MacKay Associates, may be sent to 20 Sunset Lane, Hingham. For further information, call Nancy MacKay at 749-9725. Walk-ins will be accommodated on a space available basis only.

Help save the Carousel

Everyone is invited to join the Friends of the Paragon Carousel on Saturday, Feb. 10, at 7:30 p.m. for an evening of dinner and dancing with a Valentine's Day theme, at the South Shore Country Club. The benefit will feature an elegant buffet dinner and music provided by D.J. Ken Nickerson.

Reservations may be made by sending a check, payable to Friends of the Paragon Carousel, in care of Valentine Benefit, Box 412, Hingham, MA 02043. Tickets are $28 individually or $25 if purchased in groups of five or more. All proceeds will go toward the purchase of the Paragon Park Carousel at Nantasket Beach.

During the Valentine's dance, sun lovers will have the opportunity to take their chances on a trip to the island of Vieques off the coast of Puerto Rico. The trip, which may be taken at any time, includes a week for two at Casa Del Frances, "the world's most laid-back hotel," and airfare for two to San Juan.

Arrangements for the trip have been provided by Cohasset resident Irving Greenblatt, Garber Travel and Continental Airlines. Changes are $5 each or six for $25. The drawing for the trip will be Feb. 29. For further information, call 741-5808.

17 South Main is for sale

The Cohasset Mariner incorrectly reported Jan. 11 that the Village Fare restaurant was housed in the retail building at 19-25 South Main St. which recently sold for $285,000.

The Village Fare, a sub and pizza shop which closed several months ago, occupied the adjacent 1,200 square-foot building at 17 South Main St. which is currently for sale for $139,000, said the listing broker, Joyce Hoffman of Hunneman in Cohasset.

Town meeting supports building new school

Override is Feb. 10

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Although a majority of selectmen decided not endorse it, the school building program was overwhelmingly approved at town meeting Monday night.

Using paper ballots, an overflow crowd voted 427 to 105 in support of the $13.9 million project, which includes building a new elementary school and an addition to the Deer Hill School.

Voters must now approve a Proposition 2 1/2 debt exclusion override at the polls on Feb. 10 for the project to go ahead.

Earlier that evening, selectmen Merle Brown, Peter Pratt and Martha Gjesteby voted not to support the measure, stating that it would be cheaper to undertake the project in phases. They said that because of a number of other debts, the tax rate will likely skyrocket some 40 percent within five years.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Michael Sullivan voted to support the project, on the grounds that to postpone it would increase costs and risk children's safety.

The youthful town meeting crowd appeared solidly behind the school committee from the beginning.

School physician for the past 40 years, Dr. Robert Sceery, received a standing ovation and thunderous applause when he stated the Osgood School is in deplorable shape.

"We need a new school now," he said. "Everyone should look into his head and his heart and do what is right for the children."

Sullivan received the second loudest applause when he said that the tendency to postpone necessary projects has landed Cohasset in its current financial predicament.

"We shouldn't let the avoidance of the past fall on the back of our children," he said, adding that the Osgood School was examined 25 years ago and

The Red Lion Inn, a Cohasset Village landmark, was sold to a Florida contractor at a foreclosure auction Tuesday morning.

Carl Akerblom of Fort Lauderdale purchased the restaurant and inn for a high bid of $300,000.

Akerblom, who has a summer home in the Humarock section of Scituate, said he plans no changes in the business, and has a manager who will operate it after the property is conveyed to him.

New faces on group studying Greenbush

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

In its second meeting since Gov. William Weld announced the decision to restore the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad, the 17-member state-appointed citizens advisory committee convened in Cohasset Wednesday, after the Mariner went to press.

State Environmental Secretary Trudy Coxe created the panel with representatives from all Greenbush corridor communities to comment on the MBTA's environmental feasibility studies for the rail line. Until December, the committee had not met since commenting on the draft environmental impact report in February.

Three new committee members, announced Wednesday, are Kevin Dasey, chairman of the Braintree Transportation Committee; Hingham businessman Brian Noble, owner of Nobles Camera shops; and Scituate resident Ilana Marks, a member of the anti-rail Coastal Coalition.

'Our role in the next eight months is to rule on the adequacy of what the 'T' has done and not to put forth new alternatives or waste time thinking whether we can get a tunnel or not. That decision has been made for us.'

Terry Fancher, chairman.

In response to concerns that newer members might bring anti-MBTA or anti-rail political agendas to the table, chairman Terry Fancher, who is director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said he would take the time at Wednesday's meeting to clearly define the committee's role.

"As chairman I'm going to have to let people know early on what the role

Hull sewer solution not feasible, state says

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

The most expensive of three alternatives to solve Cohasset's sewer problems is off the table, sewer commissioner Edward M. "Ted" Guild said.

The estimated $9 million project to hookup the central part of town through a sewer line to Hull has been ruled out by the Department of Environmental Protection because the capacity of the Hull treatment plant is less than previously estimated making the alternative not feasible.

The town and state reached a new settlement in the fall of 1994 to resolve Cohasset's sewer plant problems which have plagued the town for 20 years. The settlement gave the town five years to correct its sewer problems and allowed the town to explore three alternatives – the connection to the Hull plant; expansion and upgrading of the town's sewer plant and discharge in to James Brook at an estimated cost of $2.5 million; and expansion and upgrading of the town's present sewer plant and discharge into the harbor for about $3.1 million.

Scattered power outages

Friday evening's storm caused scattered power outages in Cohasset, Eastern Edison reported.

Edison received 38 complaints of no power and no lights mostly from the Jerusalem Road, Nichols Road and Forest Avenue area of town, spokeswoman Ruth Stetson said.

"The problems were all tree related," she said.

Stetson said most of Edison's customers had power back by midnight.

Eastern Edison has 117,000 customers in its Brockton division and 20,650 lost power during Friday's storm. The heaviest wind and tree related damage occurred from 6 to 7 p.m., Stetson said.

Traffic sign recommended

Safety officer Clifton Jones has recommended that a "Dangerous Intersection Ahead" sign be posted on King Street, 50 yards from the Beechwood intersection known as "Reed's Corner."

Jones said he would also see if a guard rail could be installed on King Street.

Jones' recommendations for safety improvements at the corner are in response to a letter of concern sent to the town from Betsy Giddings, 247 Beechwood Street.

Landfill hearings get underway

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

After much anticipation the Cohasset Board of Health convened public hearings Tuesday evening on the proposed 27.5 acre expansion to the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

The hearings will be held every Tuesday and Thursday evening at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium and are expected to last six weeks.

Hearing officer John Shea opened the proceedings, and the bulk of the evening's business was taken up with a pre-hearing designed to settle certain administrative matters before to the beginning of the formal session. The actual opening of the public hearing did commence shortly before the close of the three hour session.

Shea acknowledged officials from the neighboring town of Hingham (the landfill is located on the Cohasset/Hingham border) and asked their intentions as to addressing the opening session.

Hingham Selectmen Chairwoman Katherine Reardon stated, "We're here tonight to learn how the process will unfold." When asked if her board would like to make a statement on the proposed landfill expansion, Reardon declined, saying, "We had not thought (that) through that as of yet."

Speaking on a petition submitted by John McNabb, vice-president of the citizen action group Stop Any Further Expansion (SAFE), Shea, over the strong objection of CHL attorney Anton Moehrke, appointed Kevin O'Donnell and James Kinch as representatives for interested parties in the hearing proceedings.

In addition to 23 groups that have been recognized as parties of interest and therefore allowed to speak on the proposed expansion, a further 261 residents have also registered as individuals wishing to be heard.

Stephen Gaumer of the Fair Oaks Neighborhood Association took exception to Moehrke's objection to the late addition of O'Donnell and Kinch, and sharply stated, "This entire hearing is a charade. Give me a break."

When residents who wished to speak during the life of the hearings were told they had to be recognized as a specific party of interest prior to the start of the hearings, one audience member remarked, "That's not right, we're taxpayers."

And Reardon offered, "Public citizens should have a right to participate in the process."

A lengthy discourse followed on this topic with all sides offering an opinion.

Moehrke, commenting on the expanding number of potential speakers and with an eye towards the time allotted for the hearings, said, "This is something far different from what I anticipated. This borders on being a filibuster."

Kenneth Kimmell, attorney for the Cohasset Selectmen, Conservation Commission and Water Commissioners, warned, "It would be a mistake to deny people the right to say something."

McNabb seemed to speak for all in attendance, saying, "We shouldn't be unfair to the applicant (CHL) and we shouldn't be unfair to the residents of Cohasset either."

This prompted Shea to conclude the discussion by telling both sides, "I will not tolerate efforts to grandstand or filibuster."

A schedule of the order in which the hearing would be conducted was then approved. Speaking first will be representatives of Cohasset Heights followed, in order, by officials from the towns of Cohasset and Hingham, the Trustees of Reservations and, finally, all other interested parties.

Once this pre-hearing was concluded, Moehrke opened the hearings by calling CHL's first speaker, Raymond Quinn.

Manager of the environmental engineering division of SAIC Engineering, Inc. of Middleboro, Quinn listed his education and experience qualifications and then gave a short overview of the proposed expansion.

He said there would be three components to the integrated solid waste management facility: the landfill, a materials recycling facility and a material processing facility.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, who was briefly in attendance, said he was reviewing information he had recently received from the Department of Environmental Protection and he would speak on this information at Thursday's session.

found to be in need replacement or renovation, but that nothing was done.

The other emotional moment occurred when the crowd hissed and booed Brown.

"The cost is going to be prohibitive," the selectmen chairman said. He suggested that class size be increased to 30 students in the elementary schools, instead of the 22 students favored by the school department.

George Kovach announced that the capital budget committee unanimously endorsed the plan, while Roger Whitley reported that the advisory committee had voted five to one in favor the expenditure.

However, the room fell silent as Whitley explained the financial ramifications facing the town from this and other projects.

• the school plan will cost $13,985,000. The state is expected to reimburse 60 percent of the cost and interest, leaving $5,595,000 as the town's share.

The total figure includes nearly $9,890,000 to build a new school on land behind the Deer Hill School. Cohasset faces $3,956,000 in costs.

An addition to Deer Hill will cost $3,570,000, of which the town will pay $1,428,000.

It is possible that a sewer disposal system for both schools will be needed. This will cost $525,000, with the town share estimated at $210,000. If a sewer system is not needed, the money will be returned to the town.

The addition and new building will not require increases in staff.

Whitley said that the school bond issue will add $111 to the median tax bill of $3,500, per year, for the next 25 years, based on a 5.5 percent interest rate. The median tax bill is for a median house assessment of $242,000.

However, he explained that since it will take an estimated five years for the town to receive the money, tax payers will face a disproportionately heavy burden in the early years.

For the first four years, the median tax bill will increase $288, dropping to $139 the fifth year.

Over 25 years, the project will add $2,767 to the median tax bill, averaging $111 per year.

Whitley outlined what other projects are also upcoming.

• $2.6 in bonding for the DPW garage, the Hagerty property and the high school playing fields will add $111 to the median tax bill.

• costs associated with capping the landfill will add $39 to the median tax bill.

• $4 million for installing a sewage line around Straits Pond will add $43 each year to the median tax bill.

• $12 million in state ordered sewage extension to half of the town will add $155 to the median tax bill annually.

Before the school project is included, these bonding issues will add a total of $348 to the tax bill.

The tax rate, currently $14.50 per assessed thousand, will rise to $18.86 in five years, as a result of the other projects.

With the addition of the school project, the tax rate will be $20.06 in five years.

The median tax bill will be $4,564 for a house assessed at $242,000.

A house assessed at $300,000 will face a tax bill of $5,658 in five years, if all the projects are approved.

In addition, those on the sewer line face increased assessments as well.

Despite the financial news, Whitley said the advisory committee still recommended the school plan because it is simply a necessity.

Most of those in the room agreed.

Members of the school committee were visibly irritated when selectmen voted not to support the issue earlier.

"I'm very disappointed that the selectmen will choose to ignore the good sound financial advice and not support the educational program" school committee member JoAnne Chittick said, adding that construction of the new school, "is the most fiscally prudent thing to do."

She also stated that the school department's percentage of the upcoming borrowing costs is small.

School committee member James Kirk said, "I think it's a shame that they (selectmen) could not have lent their public support."

He predicted the project will be approved at the polls, and vowed an education campaign explaining the situation at the Osgood School.

Selectman Peter Pratt, who opposed the project, said he is not sure the measure will pass. Conceding the need for a new elementary school, Pratt said the 40 percent increase in taxes over five years will "make Cohasset unaffordable" to all but the very affluent.

Pratt and Gjesteby said the project could have been spaced out, with construction beginning at once on the new school, with the Deer Hill addition following in later years. Pratt also said a less expensive new school could built.

Supporters of the school article did address some of the criticisms during their presentations.

There was considerable discussion of the fact that the state bill authorizing the 60 percent reimbursement will expire June 30.

Although it is expected that it will be renewed, Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, said that it is not absolutely guaranteed.

There are now 89 school projects on the list for reimbursement, with another 75 spaces to be filled by June 30.

According to Hedlund, the projects will receive reimbursement in the order they are accepted, so that if Cohasset is not on the list by June 30, it will have to wait longer.

As it is, he said the reimbursements could take from three to four years or up to ten years to be processed, depending upon the project's number on the list.

In explaining the article, David Chase, secretary of the school facilities committee and Sidney Bowen, a consultant with the architectural firm of Earl R. Flansburgh & Associates, explained the need for the new school, showing a video of the school.

They said that because the Osgood School is on such a small lot, 4 acres, has a wood frame, making it a fire hazard, and is not expected to last for many years in any event, the state will not reimburse the town for its renovation.

The state requires all projects to have a life of at least 50 years in order to qualify for state funds.

The 70,000 square-foot new school and the small Deer Hill addition would have a life expectancy of 50 years, Bowen stated.

Gjesteby elected VP

During last weekend's meeting of the Mass Municipal Association, MMA, selectman Martha Gjesteby was elected second vice president of the Mass Selectman's Association, part of the MMA.

She was also named vice chairman of the MMA's public works committee.

of the CAC is," Fancher said.

Discussing or proposing alternatives to commuter rail service is not in the committee's purview, he said.

"Our role in the next eight months is to rule on the adequacy of what the 'T' has done and not to put forth new alternatives or waste time thinking whether we can get a tunnel or not. That decision has been made for us."

Veteran committee members William Grimes of Hingham and Cohasset Selectman Martha Gjesteby agreed.

"I comment both pro and con on sections the 'T' brings to us. I don't think of the political aspects of this," Gjesteby said.

Grimes noted that many diverse opinions on the project exist among the committee members but so far no one has used the meetings as a platform to further their own political agendas.

"We leave our bull horns and signs outside the door when we go inside," he said.

"We comment on documents the 'T' gives us and write reports every so often and discuss what goes into those reports. We've managed to do it in an amicable and business-like way and I hope we continue to do so," Grimes added.

As the committee awaits the final draft of the environmental impact report which is expected to be completed some time this summer, Fancher said determining the adequacy of mitigation measures put forth for the line and whether they meet the separate communities' needs will be a big part of their job.

"I do believe we'll have some input as to what mitigation will be in place and what forms it will take," he said.

Paying for the estimated $215 commuter rail line and the ramifications the source of funding has on the extent of environmental review, is another issue Fancher said he intended to clear up at Wednesday's meeting. At the December meeting in Braintree, Fancher said he got no clear answer as to whether the line would be entirely paid for with state money or a combination of state and federal funds.

"Our role is dictated by what pot of money the 'T' is using," Fancher noted.

Fancher also said he will ask that the MBTA submit separate chapters of the final environmental study to committee members every two weeks to avoid lengthy delays in the comment process.

"There are time constraints on the personal lives of the members and I want the committee to know what to expect," said Fancher. He recalled that what was originally proposed as a 18-month process to study the Greenbush line has turned into several years.

Hull sewer solution not feasible

In a Jan. 16 letter to Guild, the DEP, which concurs with the analysis that the Hull plant would not be able to accept 300,000 gallons per day from Cohasset, said the town should contact the Attorney General to negotiate a possible modification of the state/town settlement.

This does not affect plans to lay sewer mains in the Straits Pond/Black Rock area, install a pumping station at the site of the North Cohasset fire station, and connect to the Hull plant. Cohasset is working with Hingham and Hull to use an available 130,000 gallons per day at the Hull plant. Hingham needs to sewer the Weir River Watershed area near its border with Hull and Cohasset.

Of the estimated $4.1 million Straits Pond project, only $700,000 of that would be on the tax rate, the rest would be paid for through betterments assessed to users, Guild explained.

Taxpayers would pay for upgrades to Cohasset's sewer plant for the the James Brook and harbor alternatives but the additional cost of laying sewer mains would be paid through betterments, Guild said.

"It is a major achievement that Cohasset has been released from the Hull alternative to the central part of town," Guild said. "Neither Cohasset or Hull wanted the big Hull alternative."

The town is under a court order to resolve its wastewater problems or it could face fines of up to $1/2 million a year.

School board zeroes in on technology upgrades

By DOREEN LEGGETT
Cohasset Mariner

Whereas a chicken in every pot was President Hoover's slogan, a computer, or better yet several computers, in every classroom has become the cry of educators.

This was evident Thursday night when the school committee discussed the proposed $3.38 million junior and senior high school budget, which is an increase of approximately $58,000 over last year.

Like the Deer Hill School budget, and to a lesser extent the Osgood School budget, most of the increases in the high school budget revolve around technology.

A major portion of Osgood's budget for the 1995-1996 school year focused on computers. Osgood's budget for the 1996-1997 school year includes the salary of an additional second-grade teacher, as well as a number of textbooks.

The proposed Osgood budget, which is approximately $1.46 million, is more than a $39,000 increase.

Unlike the two elementary schools, the junior and senior high budget proposes an approximately $33,000 increase in the athletics budget.

The preliminary figure for the system-wide budget is approximately $7 million, said Supt. Stephen Hart. Teachers' salaries are still being negotiated.

Hart said that schools are becoming more involved in technology. Cohasset is updating in an incremental, planned fashion.

At the high school, almost all departments requested computers, software or both.

'The T-square is a thing of the past.'

— Curtis Collins, high school principal.

Technology is used in the music department, as well as in the sciences.

Five computer work stations are proposed for the industrial laboratories. The technology will familiarize students with CAD, computer assisted design, which will particularly appeal to the pre-architectural or pre-engineering student.

"The T-square is a thing of the past," said Curtis Collins, principal at the high school.

He added that, he hopes, those five computers are just a stepping-off point. The labs were also moved up to the science wing to better prepare students for the integration of the sciences and industrial technology.

The budget also includes the purchase of several microscopes and balances to replace debilitated onces.

In terms of maintenance, money was budgeted for water fountain replacement, as well as for bleachers.

Collins said that the high school may have the highest participation rate in sports in the commonwealth. Almost 70 percent of the students are involved in athletics.

Because of the high student participation, additional coaches are needed. A hockey and a track coach are budgeted for.

Athletic supplies and new uniforms make up a large portion of the increased athletics budget.

New uniforms for the cheerleading squads will cost approximately $4,000.

In other business:

The committee approved a motion to return the Osgood School to selectmen and recommend that selectmen consider the option of returning Osgood to the tax rolls. The motion has several contingencies; they are: that the $13.9 million school project be approved at town meeting, that the funds be appropriated by a Prop. 2 1/2 override on Feb. 10, that the state approve the project and fund 60 percent and that the pro-

Sewer article passes at town meeting

The rate table for sewer users passed town meeting Monday night nearly unanimously.

The item had already been approved by the November town meeting, but because that vote was taken after a move for reconsideration, its legality was questioned and the issue brought up again.

Under the rate table, sewer users will pay one hundred per cent of sewer costs in three years. Until then, the town will pay fifty percent.

An amendment offered by Roy Fitzsimmons, which would have increased user fees so that sewer users would pay one hundred percent of costs immediately was handily defeated.

Selectmen, the sewer commissioners and the advisory committee (by a six to one majority) opposed the amendment.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Best wishes to Ruth Pratt, who is 80 years young!

Let's start out with good news this week! Remember when I told you the story of George, Lisa and Jeff Pratt's cat that was lost after the Cloughertys' house fire? Well, George came home! Just appeared on the Pratts' doorstep as though he had never left! Very skinny and cold looking, but home! Gracie is so happy!

Joan and Phil Shockman are walking around with their heads in the clouds, and there is a wonderful reason why! Her name is Molly Elizabeth Fitzgerald, the brand new baby girl born to Jill (Shockman) and Joe Fitzgerald on Dec. 26. Molly weighed six pounds, six ounces and measured 20-1/4-inches long. Her paternal grandparents are Joan and Robert Fitzgerald, who are also thrilled to pieces with little Molly. It will be so much fun walking around town this spring, seeing all of these new babies and comparing notes on all their accomplishments – anyway, congrats to all of you. We know you will love that baby to pieces!

It is hoped that Janet Fig feels better as she reads this – she works so hard and everyone loves her so much! Janet is a patient at South Shore Hospital as this goes to press, but we all know you cannot keep a good gal down for long, and Janet is the best! Get well soon, Janet. All of your kiddos miss you!

Happy belated birthday greetings go to Ruth Pratt, who celebrated her 80th birthday last week. To honor the occasion, her husband, Carleton, and sons Jeff and Stuart with their wives Lisa and Esther (and all of the grandchildren, too) had 80 roses sent to Ruth – isn't that a lovely idea? For a wonderful woman, we might add! Ruth has done so much for so many! Here's to your next 80 years, Ruth. May they be even better than the first!

Everyone please give a big Cohasset welcome to Rocco Anthony Laugelle, born Dec. 27 to Karen and Paul Laugelle. Rocco weighed eight pounds, 12 ounces and was 21 inches long. Naturally, his grandparents, Rocky and Peg Laugelle, are delighted, as are Rocco's siblings, J.P., Craig and Leigh. Congratulations go to all of you.

James Rosano and family of Cohasset are proud to announce the graduation of James Frank Rosano from Boston University with a degree in economics. James also is a Cohasset High School graduate, Class of 1991.

I had a nice chat with Cynthia Tillotson last week. She and her husband, Jim, had just returned from Woodstock, N.Y. The reason for the trip? Katelyn Ann Wolgamuth, their brand new granddaughter! Katelyn was born Jan. 5 to her parents, Kimberley (Tillotson) and Todd Wolgamuth. The word has it that she is beautiful, wonderful, super – the list goes on!

By the way, Mom Kimberley is a Cohasset High graduate, the Class of 1981. Our congrats go to all of you. Hopefully we will all see Katelyn when she visits her grandparents!

If you haven't gotten your tickets yet, please don't despair – you can get them! PB&J concert tickets are a hot item – people who saw them in concert last year really loved them. The acoustic trio is appearing at the Second Congregational Church this Saturday at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $5. See you there!

We must give Steve Ritts a standing ovation – he is still wearing his shorts! As most people know, he made a vow to wear shorts until the first day of spring as a way to make money for the Travis Roy fund. When we last heard, Steve had raised just over $1,700 (he hoped to raise $2,000 – we'll bet he'll do that plus more with your help).

If you think you are tired of all of the cold and snow, just think what Steve is going through! That's what you call dedication!

Congratulations go to Gregg Sullivan of Cohasset, who was promoted to vice president of account services for Dickinson Direct of Braintree, a direct marketing firm. Mr. Sullivan is responsible for the development and management of client accounts.

We give Ryan Sawchuk an "A" this week, to add to all of the others he has earned for himself. Ryan received Early Decision at Princeton. Isn't that awesome? He is such a great guy, Princeton is one smart university to have him go there! And go there he will – it was his first choice.

Ryan's accomplishments are so numerous. You name it, he is there! Scholastically he is number one in the class of 1996, and he's number one in so many facets of his life. He is a tribute to his family and our town and we commend him.

This Saturday there will be a memorial service for Patricia Lee, Jim Rooney's Mom. Most of you know Jim, who is the captain of the Cohasset Firefighters and a grand guy. His mother died in Arizona, and there will be a service at 10 a.m. at the Second Congregational Church on Jan. 27. Our thoughts and prayers are with you at this sad time, Jim.

That's the news from here. Please call and let me in on your latest happenings, okay?

– Sallyann

February 10

Shall the town of Cohasset be allowed to exempt from Prop. 2-1/2, so called, the amounts required to pay for the bonds to be issued in order to finance planning, designing and constructing an elementary school on land owned by the town of Cohasset off Sohier Street known and "Deer Hill," an on-site sewage treatment plant to serve both the school to be constructed and the existing Deer Hill School, and an addition and renovation to the existing Deer Hill School?

Monday's town meeting voters set the stage for a Feb. 10 debt exclusion override the text of which appears above. The town looks to borrow about $13.9 million to pay for a new school and improvements and an addition to the Deer Hill School.

Sixty percent of the project will be reimbursed by the state, officials say.

This week we're publishing two charts on page 11 to help citizens understand how the cost of the new school will affect their property taxes.

Here at the Mariner, we've been criticized for reporting that the typical tax bill will see an average increase of about $116 a year spread over the 25 years.

We agree that's confusing. Taxes will be actually be higher than that in the early years of borrowing until the state reimbursement kicks in.

If you have any questions about the charts, call your selectmen, school committee members, Town Administrator Gregory Doyon or Town Accountant Michael Buckley at 383-9900.

In our travels around town, the biggest concern we hear about is rising taxes. Many residents are clearly worried about the tax rate. These fears must be weighed against the town's need for a new school.

There are just over two weeks until the override election.

In the interim, listen to both sides of the issue. Talk to proponents and opponents and keep an open mind.

When Feb. 10 rolls around, cast your vote but be sure it's an informed one.

Fire insurance

There's some micro-managing of the fire department budget going on. Last week, selectmen grilled Fire Chief Roger Lincoln over the amount needed for "call backs" or coverage of the station when the ambulance is out of town.

It's always difficult to pay for something you may not need.

We begrudge our high car insurance bills but are awfully glad we're covered if should we have an accident.

The same is true for fire department coverage. It's insurance. The called-back firefighters may not been needed. But if my house is on fire, I'll be grateful they were on duty, ready to respond.

Fires and other emergencies don't adhere to any rules. They can occur day or night and simultaneously.

Let's hope selectmen continue to provide oversight of the fire department budget but leave the management of it up to the fire chief who's been in the business of protecting the public for a long time.

Timing is wrong for new school

To the Editor:

Although the Osgood School needs to be replaced with a more modern facility, the school administration and others are pushing us faster than is necessary. Senator Hedlund, at the Jan. 22, town meeting, made it clear that the state is highly likely to continue sharing the burden of such projects. The selectmen voted 3-2 against recommending the article.

• No commitment has been made to return the Osgood School to the tax rolls (assessed for $2,856,000). This should happen concurrent with the approval of any new school so that special interest groups don't lobby the town into an alternate use that will cost millions of dollars to meet state code.

• The project cost of $13,985,000 is excessive and the School Facilities Committee acknowledges that at least $400,000 could be saved by the expansion of the Deer Hill School to accommodate preschool through the sixth grade (PK-6).

• A skillful traffic and architectural plan will make it possible to provide an appropriate degree of separation between PK-3 and 4-6.

• PK-6 will not only save $400,000 (plus finance charges), but it will permit the construction of better common usage facilities such as the cafeteria, library, auditorium, teachers/music/administration and emergency rooms, gymnasium, HVAC, etc. The potential exists to minimize school administration costs while keeping facilities such as the library and gymnasium open for longer hours.

• Air conditioning is not included in the current plan, but should be. Air conditioning will make "hot spells" bearable and usage of the building during July/August practical in case school schedules change in future years. In any event, the recreation department and other town entities would benefit from making the school habitable during July/August.

This huge expenditure (Article II) was not in the Capital Budget Committee 1995 Plan. Likewise many expensive "essential items" listed as needed for the Junior/Senior High School (7-12) are not considered in the town's five year budget projection.

The town's current projection has the total operating budget increase as follows: FY98 8.2 percent; FY99 6 percent; FY00 3.2 percent; FY01 2.9 percent and FY02 only 5 percent. The real state of affairs will be much worse.

The town's projected required tax levy varies as follows: FY98 +13 percent; FY99 +2.2 percent; FY00 +7.9 percent; FY01 +2.5 percent and FY02 -.8 of one percent. This will never happen because the town lacks a master plan and new capital items are constantly unexpectedly "emerging."

Please be aware that those of you linking to sewage will confront a currently estimated $12,500 betterment charge. Water system improvements for those serviced by the Cohasset and Hingham Water Departments will also exceed normal inflation rates.

We can't afford to, and don't need to, rush this huge project through and overspend by somewhere in the vicinity of $1M to $2M.

Family is grateful for help

To the Editor:

We don't know how to begin thanking all the people who helped us during and after the tragic house fire we experienced in early January.

The response from town emergency personnel, town departments, fire and police was timely, professional and caring. Our neighbors and friends immediately provided support and assistance. Then, with incredible generosity, people in the town of Cohasset rallied around us with more kindness still.

From the clothing and essential needs drive at the Community Center (an overwhelming response within hours and days!), to the assistance fund at a local bank, to the bake sale organized by parents and children at our schools, to the fund for the children run by the Cohasset Student Council, and all the offers of referrals and support, the results were phenomenal.

Those who we never knew, or were acquaintances, became friends. Those who were friends became family. To those who helped behind the scenes and anonymously, we thank you. The Town of Cohasset is a community in the true sense of the word to anyone who is lucky enough to live here. We could never begin to personally thank everyone or mention everyone, but no good deed has gone unnoticed.

As we begin to rebuild our lives and our home, we look forward to continuing to bring up our family in such a warm climate no matter tne season!

With gratitude,

The Clougherty Family: Maryanne, Peter, Leo, Flossie and Gracie

Nan Roth announces candidacy for selectman

NAN ROTH

Nan Roth kicked off her campaign this week for one of the two positions available on the Board of Selectmen. Roth served as Chairman of the Cohasset Advisory Committee for four years, and as a member of the committee for six.

"Fiscal restraint, consolidation of services and regionalization combined with the preservation of Cohasset's special community are issues we must face," explained Roth."

"I believe that the Board of Selectmen must play a major role in balancing all interests and making the best decisions for Cohasset.

"Leadership on the Advisory Committee has given me knowledge of the many complex issues facing Cohasset," she stated. "As chairman of the committee I made it a priority to ensure that we maintain all town buildings and property, and that we make capital improvements when needed. All plans for spending must be considered in the light of their impact on both the quality of life and our future tax rates."

Supporters have praised Roth for her broad knowledge of the issues facing all departments in town.

Ann Whelan, former member of the Advisory Committee stated, "Nan's detailed knowledge of town government, her skill in developing financial projections and her clear and cordial manner of relating to committee members and employees will be a great asset to the Board of Selectmen. Her knowledge, experience and courtesy in developing important town policy will benefit us all."

A series of neighborhood meetings is being coordinated for Nan to meet with voters between now and April 6. Persons interested in learning more about Nan and her campaign should call her or send e-mail to dnhjsroth@aol.com.

The Mariner welcomes letters to the Editor

Historic Red Lion Inn is auctioned

said shortly after signing the documents to secure his high bid.

He also said he will pay an additional $10,000 for the rights to use the Red Lion Inn name, transfer of the liquor license, and the 383-1704 telephone number, as well as the furnishings, inventory, and business "goodwill."

The sale of the items exclusive of the real estate is being handled by the court-appointed receiver who is overseeing the inn operations for the previous owners who defaulted on a mortgage held by the Rockland Trust Company. Bank officials would not disclose the amount of the unpaid loan, nor the amount of time that it had been unpaid, except to say it was "a very long time."

Under the terms of the auction sales agreement, Akerblom is responsible for $43,000 in unpaid real estate taxes and interest due to the Town of Cohasset.

He said he will "look into" the situation of the inn's liquor license, which selectmen said may be revoked if the inn's fire alarm system is not updated.

However, building inspector Robert Egan, who also attended the auction, said bringing the fire alarm system into compliance with the building codes is not a major expense. To comply with the code, smoke detectors must be installed in each of the inn's guest rooms, and connected—or "hard-wired"—into the electrical system.

Dale Rains, who attended the auction as a representative of the court-appointed receiver, said the inn will remain open until the ownership is transferred to Akerblom.

Prior to the opening bid, auctioneer Jerome Manning explained that under the terms of the "absolute auction," there was no minimum bid and the property would be sold to the highest bidder, regardless of the price. He also said the bank would not bid on the property.

Manning also said that ownership of the property would be conveyed within 45 days from the conclusion of the auction, and that if the successful high bidder could not close the sale at that time, the inn would be offered to the second- and subsequent-highest bidders, at their recorded bids.

His offer to open the bidding at $500,000 was met with a wave of chuckles from the 70 persons who attended the auction, and the first offer was made at $50,000. However, few of those in attendance actually made offers, raising speculation that some had registered to bid in the hope of snaring a real estate bargain.

Bank officials had said more than 125 packages of auction materials were mailed to prospective bidders prior to the auction.

The offers gradually progressed to "going three times" at $260,000 when bidders pushed the offer to $290,000. At that point, Manning interrupted the bidding to allow several persons to make telephone calls.

When the bidding resumed at the $290,000 point, a subsequent offer was made to $295,000, and then Akerblom's $300,000 offer which ended the bidding.

The Red Lion Inn was described in the the auction literature as a 8,457 square foot, three story building, on a 35,974 square foot lot. The first floor has two dining rooms and a pub room with a total seating capacity of 184; kitchen, and restrooms. There are seven bedrooms on the second floor, three of which have private bath, and 1-1/2 baths, and an office. The third floor has 8 bedrooms and one bathroom.

The future of the Red Lion Inn has been the subject of speculation for several months. In July, 1995, the sale of the property was rumored but never came to fruition when the buyers were unable to obtain financing. At that time, the attorney for the prospective buyers had told Cohasset selectmen that the new owners planned to spend $200,000 to remodel the inn.

This week's auction is another chapter in the history of the inn, as it nears the 300th anniversary of the building's construction.

According to local historians, Thomas James built the large colonial house on the site in 1704. His grandson Christopher converted it to the original Red Lion Inn about 50 years later. The property stayed in the James family until Eleazer James died in October, 1871.

Sometime after the Civil War, the building underwent a major change of appearance when the upper floors were added.

Its location on a coastal stage coach route that ran between Hingham and Scituate made it a suitable stop to refresh travellers and horses. The inn changed names several times and, for a time, was known as the Norfolk House. It advertised itself as providing "food, drink and lodging for man and beast."

However, there are 11 items that the new owner cannot buy.

Photographs and pictures that hung on the inn's dining room walls as recently as last weekend have mysteriously vanished. Cohasset police are investigating the disappearance of the old pictures of the building.

Annie Federico running for Democratic State Committee

Democratic leaders throughout the South Shore joined together Wednesday for a fundraiser in support of Democratic State Committee candidate Annie Federico of Marshfield.

Federico, 45, a legislative aide to U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds and chairman of Marshfield's Democratic Town Committee, said joining the state committee is a logical next step.

A lifelong Democrat, Federico first worked on Weymouth Democrat William Golden's campaign for state senate in 1982. She went on to campaign for everyone from state Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, to President Clinton, including Studds and U.S. Senator Edward M. Kennedy.

Now, for the first time, Federico has mounted a campaign of her own.

Born in Dorchester, Federico moved to Marshfield in 1978 with her husband Jim, a manufacturing manager at Teradyne in Boston, and their two children: Jim, 19, a freshman at Providence College, and Jennifer, 17, a junior at Marshfield High School.

As an aide to Studds she represents the concerns of communities from Quincy to Marshfield, she said. Local issues she has covered recently include the closing of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, the fight to save the Hull carousel, and the search for funds for community centers in Marshfield and Weymouth.

If elected to the Democratic State Committee - which mirrors the state senate - she would represent the Plymouth/Norfolk district to the state party. The district includes Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth, plus three precincts in Braintree.

The seat is now held by Norma Fenochietti of Marshfield, who is vice chairman of the state committee. After 20 years on the committee Fenochietti has decided not to run for re-election.

Karen DeTellis of Weymouth is also running for the seat. DeTellis' and Federico's names will appear on the March 5 presidential primary ballot.

Federico has won support from many local Democratic leaders and candidates, most of whom were expected to attend Wednesday's function at P.J.'s Country House in Scituate. For information on Federico's campaign, please call: Hingham: Kathy Norman (617) 749-0573 or Cohassset: John McNabb (617) 383-6202.

Skaters battle through frustrating slump

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

Dennis Walsh keeps reminding himself how just how young and inexperienced his Cohasset High hockey squad is.

As of Jan. 19, the Skippers were sporting a 1-6-1 record. Walsh admits dealing with the team's particularly close losses have been tough, especially when the Skippers have had strong chances to win nearly every game. But Walsh, who is originally from Canada where he first began coaching hockey at the of 15, is a realist.

"In some cases it's inexperience," said Walsh, "but a lot of it is depth too."

The Skippers are currently skating just two lines and have three defensemen. Walsh would like to see experience spread out throughout the whole. That happens, he says, when a crop of four to five freshmen go out for the team, stay with the program and develop over their high school career.

Cohasset was on a three-game skid, having lost to Hull (6-4), South Boston (4-3) and Hanover (7-5).

The losses were particularly frustrating. Walsh had to pull the goaltender in both the Hull and South Boston games, which resulted in goals for the two teams.

And against Hanover, the Skippers rallied from a 6-1 deficit only to fall just short of the 10-time South Shore League champs.

Pat Reynolds has continued his strong offensive play for Cohasset and Nevin Bunstein, has been moved back on defense to help out Adam Donovan and Matt O'Connor because of his strong stickhandling skills.

Walsh believes Cohasset must overcome its tendency to try too hard to generate offense. In past games the Skippers have neglected their defensive duties as a result and it has hurt them.

"They're combative and have been in every game," Walsh said. "When you're not winning you tend to try too hard."

Walsh, who has been at the Skipper helm for 10 years, said the lack of a youth hockey program in Cohasset has left the high school without a true feeder system. Budding players usually wind up playing for the South Shore Seahawks, an organization that winds up with much of the hockey talent of several local towns.

Walsh, though, still loves the coaching and teaching the game to the younger kids.

"I like the game and I like the kids," he said. "The kids are lucky to have a hockey team that is supported."

Hopefully, that little extra luck that has eluded the squad this season will manifest and lead to some victories.

One hundred point win caps hoopmen wild stretch

JIM O'SULLIVAN
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Skippers boys' varsity basketball team capped off a wild two-week stretch Tuesday night with a win against the East Bridgewater Vikings.

Two weeks before, Cohasset had trounced Hull, 104-38. The Skippers picked up their first league loss, with a lackluster effort against Carver.

Throw in a game canceled due to power failure at Norwell, a home game scratched because of a town meeting and the Skippers have seen it all.

Hull saw the Skippers in peak form, as this year's edition became the first Cohasset squad in the Ron Ford era to pour in 100 points. Cohasset got great games from every player on the team. Jared Hardwick finishing with 25, had scored 21 by half-time. Hardwick's points included a two-handed slam dunk, a slam which was only the finishing touch to a gorgeous post move. However, his game was not limited to scoring. Hardwick found teammates time and time again for baskets, showing his versatility.

Star center Ryan Bishop did not play due to a case of the flu, but watched from the bench, and one could only wonder what the score would have been had the big guy played.

Junior sharpshooter Burke Davis pumped in five three-pointers in the first half, and went on to finish with 23, and had a gorgeous behind-the-back pass to Paul-Michael Quintin, who laid it in.

Point guard Fred Howard also had a monster game. Playing tenacious defense, Howard somehow found the time to pick up 14 points of his own. Forward J.L. Williams also played well, hitting his shots from both the outside and the inside. Williams put on a clinic in the low post, tying up hapless defenders with head fakes and stutter steps, then blowing past for a layup.

Junior forward Brian Kilroy also helped the cause, scoring four, rebounding ferociously and being a nuisance on defense. Kilroy had the honor of scoring the hundredth point, which came when he hit a pull-up jumper. Matt Belson, another junior, also shone on defense and under the boards, while popping in two points off a turnaround jumper.

Grant Emde, a standout on the gridiron and the baseball diamond as well as the hardcourt, tossed in two points and tore down a rebound which resulted in two Quintin free throws. Emde's quickness headed off Hull's point guard's attempted drives and helped the Skippers in their transition game repeatedly. Lutz Grunwald, a junior exchange student from Germany, came in toward the end of the first half, helping stop a Hull mini-rally and sparking a Cohasset streak. Grunwald's passing also helped the Skippers slow the game down in the second half.

Quintin was another Skipper to get into double digits, scoring 12 along with a monstrous block. Classmate Justin McNamara, who has been swinging back and forth between JV and varsity this year, collected four points and played tight defense from his guard position.

Tuesday's victory against East Bridgewater was another big win for the boys in blue and white. Coming off the Carver loss, the Skippers needed a win. And win they did, beating the Vikings 72-61 in a game that wasn't close after half-time. Hardwick netted 33, Quintin added 11, and Bishop scored nine.

The Skippers play important home games against Norton, Friday; Abington, Saturday and Scituate Monday.

Rising costs mean tough times for newspapers

Newsprint prices soar

By DWIGHT F. BLINT
Special to the Mariner

The newspaper industry is watching and waiting to see if a recent dramatic climb in the cost of newsprint will continue into the new year. The two-year increase in the cost of newsprint has meant less profit for papers and higher costs for consumers.

Over the last year, the newspaper industry was forced to cut staff and raise prices as the cost of newsprint rose by 40 percent.

And the situation doesn't seem to be getting any better as three large suppliers last month announced plans to raise paper prices between 5 and 9.7 percent in February. Newsprint typically accounts for about 20 percent of a newspaper's expenses.

The only good news is that industry experts aren't sure if the price increases will hold.

"Whether those go through or not is hard to say," said Greg Rudder, editor of Pulp and Paper, a trade magazine based in San Francisco.

He said he has not talked to enough paper suppliers or buyers recently to make a comfortable prediction on where he thinks prices will go. But such large price increases could be hard to sustain.

"Some experts say those anticipated price increases are the highest since the 1920s. So they make for historic increases," he said.

In 1994, paper prices rose by 25 percent and then, in 1995, by about 40 percent, Rudder said.

"The cost of newsprint to Community Newspaper Company (CNC), the parent company of the the Cohasset Mariner, was up 40 percent over last year – close to $ 2 million in added expenses," said Nancy McNiff, production manager for CNC. "That's a huge increase in any business. It was definitely one of our biggest challenges in 1995."

McNiff added she does expect prices to increase in 1996, but not at the same rate as last year. She added that like most newspapers CNC had its own conservation efforts in place, but despite those efforts, there was a need to raise both advertising and circulation rates.

The market for newsprint is softening, said Luke Popovich, spokesman for the American Forest and Paper Association, based in Washington, D.C. He said because of rising prices companies have been buying more newsprint and using it more cautiously. As a result, many publications have large stockpiles and, therefore, less demand.

Popovich said newsprint wholesalers have had to cut deals with buyers to keep paper moving. However, he cautioned that this trend may not continue.

"If this is an inventory correction, or if this portends a coming decline or no increase in 1996, we don't know," said Popovich.

The rising cost of newsprint has had a detrimental effect on newspaper publishers over the last year.

Weekday circulation fell last year at seven of the nation's 10 biggest metropolitan daily newspapers, and industry experts say newsprint price increases were a key factor in the declines. They said newspapers have been forced to offset soaring newsprint costs by raising prices and reducing distribution of papers to marginal markets.

"I don't know when it's going to end," said John Coykendall, executive director of the New England Press Association in Boston.

If the price increases for 1996 do hold, paper manufacturers will be encouraged to try it again, he said.

Coykendall said retailers are coming out of a slow market and that could foreshadow less advertising revenue for newspapers to spend on newsprint. He said if that becomes a reality, consumers might see newspapers making another round of price increases.

"Certainly one way to offset it is to share the pain," said Coykendall.

He said newspapers which want to stay in business have little choice in combating the price increase.

Prompted by complaints from newspaper publishers, the Justice Department earlier this fall began examining companies that sell newsprint to see if rising costs might be caused by illegal price fixing.

Due to the recent federal shutdown, no one was available to comment on the status of the investigation.

"They are taking a serious look at it," Coykendall said, adding that an investigation might help to stabilize prices.

The paper manufacturing industry has been raising prices in an effort to make up for weak earnings during the recession. During the late 1980s and early 1990s, the demand for paper dropped to record-setting, post-war lows while manufacturers' inventories were high. In 1994 and 1995 the country was in an economic upturn which resulted in higher demand and lower inventories, and North American newsprint manufacturers were also supplying a growing overseas market. Most of the newsprint used in the United States is produced by about three dozen companies.

Minors arrested for alcohol

Police stopped a car on Rte. 3A near Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square Jan. 21 and charged its occupants, four Hull minors, with illegal possession of alcohol. Arrested were Thomas White, 19, 42 Massasoit Ave.; Robert Zitoli Jr. 18, 31 Massasoit Ave.; Alex Mann, 17, 26 Veterans Rd.; and William [illegible]resley, 20, 40 D Street.

Police also cited the driver, White, with speeding and defective equipment (one headlight out).

Driver cited after accident

Police cited Brian Billotte, 738 Jerusalem Rd., with operating to endanger, leaving the scene and travelling on the wrong side of the road following a single car accident Jan. 22.

Police said Billotte was travelling south bound in a 1989 Ford Taurus which rolled over and broke a utility pole in half on Jerusalem Road at about 2:29 a.m. When police arrived Billotte, 38, had left the scene.

"No one was there when we got there," Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

Plaza parking lot collision

A Hull woman sustained minor injuries following an accident at 1:28 p.m., Jan. 20 in the parking lot at Cohasset Plaza, police said.

Tami L. Santiano, 20, 148 Atlantic Ave., Hull, was transported to the hospital after the 1987 Ford Tempo she was driving collided with a 1991 American Jeep driven by Laura M. Rosano, 16, 191 Hull St., Cohasset. Rosano was exiting a parking space when her car struck Santiano's which was travelling through the lot, police said.

Latest police status report

Police Chief Brian Noonan said December was a busy month for the police department. The Dec. 19 storm kept the dispatch center and the police officers "straight out for several days."

During the month the department made 18 arrests. Seven were for outstanding warrants, four for protective custody, two for violation of a restraining order, two for minors in possession of alcohol and one for operating under the influence, one for uttering a false prescription and one for possession of a Class B controlled substance.

There were no "breaking and enterings" reported in December, he said.

During the month, the Emergency Dispatch Center received 103, 9-1-1 calls.

Officer William Quigley, a former seasonal police officer, started working full time Dec. 2. Through a waiver authorized by the Mass. Criminal Justice Training Council, he is able work until the availability of the next 18-week police academy, Noonan said.

School Notebook

STUDENT OF THE MONTH/Allison Ritts

Allison Ritts deserves to be named Student of the Month not only for her work since school began, but also for her dedication to Cohasset High School over the summer months.

In June, I wondered if I could get CHS students together to work on a new script over the summer, but was very skeptical about asking them to make a commitment during the vacation time of the year. Fortunately, I asked the right person to organize the effort — Alli Ritts.

We spoke briefly on the very last day of school, and on the first Wednesday of July, I drove to the auditorium prepared for one or two students at best. Instead, I was overwhelmed by the number of students ready to commit to a project that offered no school credit and no guarantee of ever reaching the stage. Alli had done her job and has continued to do more.

She wrote some of the most effective pieces in the show that we developed and that she named "Through Our Eyes." In addition, Alli served as my assistant director and was very active in that capacity, organizing and actually running rehearsals.

She also performed tasks as mundane as helping to type the script and as crucial as editing speeches and scenes that needed work. She also performed a musical number in the play. "Through Our Eyes" would not have come into being as a script and as a production without the effort and talent of Alli Ritts.

Alli also helped Miss Babaian and me organize the development of a suicide prevention presentation by the Peer Counselors. In addition to her out-of-school activities, Alli has performed especially well in my advanced placement English class. Her papers are always among the best in the class.

Over the years, I have been pleased to see a number of my nominations selected as Students of the Month; none of those individuals deserved that award more than Allison Ritts does now.

Workshop is Jan. 29

The Cohasset elementary schools' adjustment counselors, Ed Leonard and Frank Fitzgerald, will conduct a four-session parenting workshop offering parents a realistic approach to meeting the challenges of raising children today.

The first meeting is from 6:30 to 8 p.m., Jan. 29 in the Watermelon Room at St.Stephen's Church. There is no charge for the workshops but parents need to purchase "STEP, the Parents' Handbook" by Don Dinkmeyer and Gary McKay available at Buttonwood Books for $12. To sign up, call any school's office.

SandCastles open enrollment

SandCastles Childcare Center will hold an open enrollment, beginning Feb. 15, for summer and fall programs for infant, pre-toddler, toddler and pre-school programs. SandCastles, located at 152 King St., Route 3A, also has a nursery school program available.

Hours are weekdays from 7 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. For further information, call Michelle Manganaro, director, at 383-9987. Space is limited.

DARE graduates are honored

Hingham's DARE Officer Michael Peraino and Derby Headmaster Edward Foley awarded certificates to 39 sixth-graders at the school's second annual DARE graduation on Jan. 17. Guest speakers included State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, Jeff Granatino from Sen. Robert Hedlund's office and Hingham Police Chief Joachim-Ingo Borowski. Plymouth County District Attorney Michael Sullivan, parents and siblings attended the event.

As part of the 17-week program, students were asked to communicate the DARE message in a poster and through an essay. Kara Gaughen of Cohasset and Ian Jaffe of Marshfield were co-winners of the essay contest. They read their works and received savings bonds.

Students presented five skits: "Consequences of Using Drugs," "Eight Ways to Say No!," "Peer Pressure," "Conflict Resolution" and "Assertiveness."

Charlie Anderson, Kristen Deane, Siobhan Hart-Kelly, Emily Larson, Henry Roth and Katherine Schroeder, all of Cohasset, were among the DARE graduates.

Music festival on agenda

The Cohasset High School Band and Senior Chorus are planning a trip to Williamsburg, Va., to participate in a music festival.

A raffle will be held to help defray the cost of the trip. Students are soliciting items to be raffled, including gift certificates for restaurants and services, gifts, lodging at hotels, tickets to sporting events and art events and memberships to various activities.

The deadline for donations is Jan. 26. Call Joanne Greene at 383-6662 or DeeDee Nicynski at 383-1329 for further information or to donate an item.

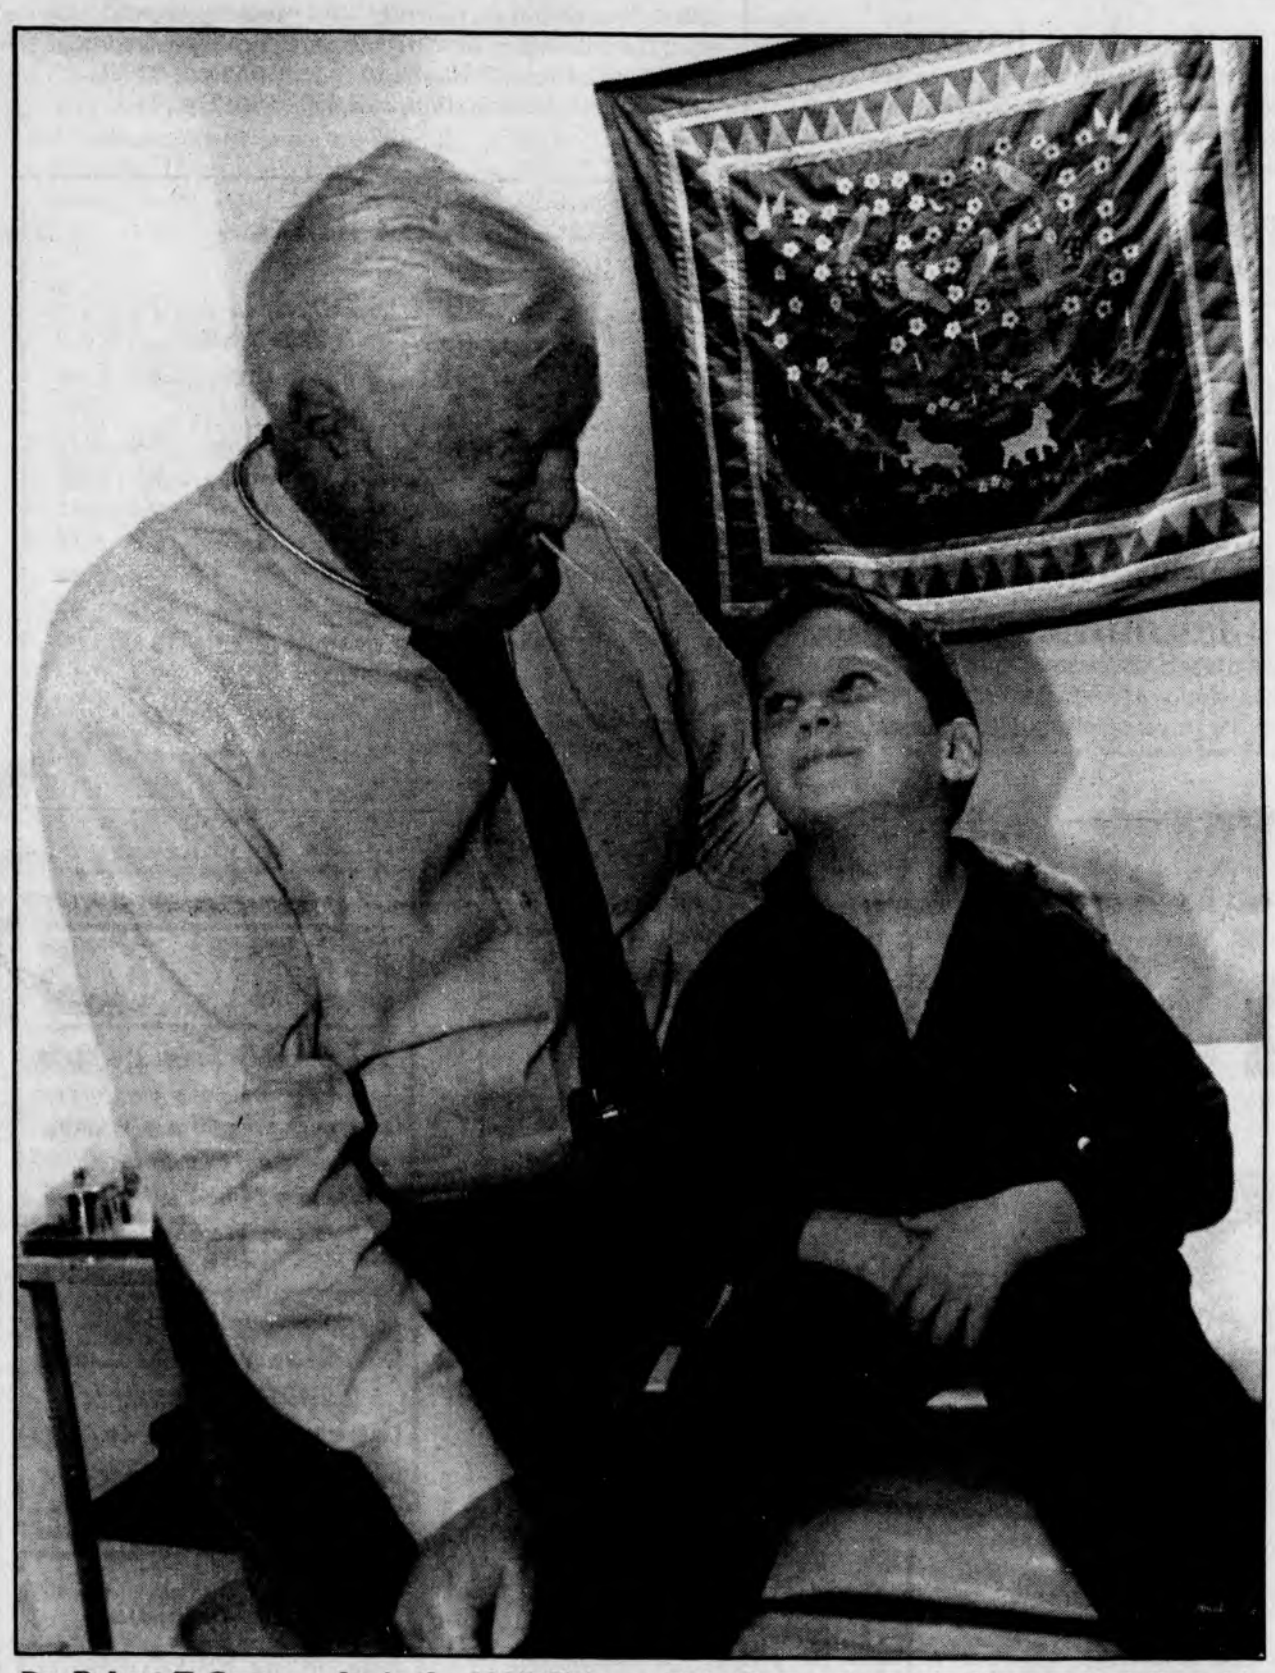
Cohasset's Citizen of the Year



Dr. Robert T. Sceery, who is the 1995 Citizen of the Year, gets a mischievous look from his grandson, Ivan, in his office at 95 Atlantic Ave.

Beloved doctor receives honor

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Forty-three years ago, Cohasset got lucky.

At the last minute, a young pediatrician with a growing family decided not to move to Centerville on Cape Cod even though he'd bought a house there.

"It was almost fated," recalls Dr. Robert T. Sceery. "The house on North Main Street was for sale and it was a little beyond our means."

Sceery remembers the couple who owned the home (and lived across the street) were so pleased that a doctor was coming to town, they traded Sceery the house at the corner of N. Main and Green streets for the one in Centerville, which they then sold.

"It cost me about 27 cents to make the transaction," Sceery says.

"So we had a big house with two kids and no furniture, just a bed and cribs."

That was the beginning of a relationship with the the town and its citizens, who grew to trust and revere this old-fashioned doctor — a man who now treats many of the children of his first young patients.

The affection and respect so many hold for Sceery led to his being selected as the 1995 Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year.

In her nomination Barbara Meehan of Ripley road wrote:

"Professionally and personally, Dr. Sceery represents all that is good about Cohasset. He and his lovely wife, Phoebe, raised an outstanding family. His grandchildren are spectacular young people.

"Dr. Sceery's kindness and attention to the goodness and well-being of Cohasset and its citizens is unmatched."

The five member selection committee — consisting of residents Chartis Langmaid, Steve Endris, Ann Whelan, and Hamilton Tewksbury and Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford — chose Sceery out of a field of 15 nominees submitted by 30 local citizens.

> 'Dr. Sceery's kindness and attention to the goodness and well-being of Cohasset and its citizens is unmatched.'

> — Barbara Meehan in her nomination of Dr. Robert Sceery.

After completing his undergraduate studies at Harvard, Sceery — who grew up in Hartford, Connecticut — served as a communications officer in the Navy from 1943 to 1946.

"I was in the first LST to land at Utah Beach on D-Day," Sceery recalls.

"We discharged the army and then had to wait for the tide to get back in. Fortunately there was a big cliff opposite where we landed and the German guns were not

Red Lion Inn repairs are promised soon

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Pledging to retain its colonial atmosphere, the owners of the Red Lion Inn plan a renovation which will include smoke detectors and address various other violations of town codes.

"We plan on correcting what needs to be taken care of," one of the new owners, Carl Akerblom told selectmen Monday night.

Akerblom, of Ft. Lauderdale and Humarock, and his partner Jerry Smith of San Francisco, bought the beloved old inn last week at auction for $300,000.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln said that although various violations were to have been corrected by Jan. 25, it is only fair to give the new owners an additional month.

The liquor license will remain in effect during that time.

Violations include a leaky roof, lack of smoke detectors in the guest rooms on the second and third floor.

Although the sale will not be completed until March 5, the new owners said

Potential candidates show election interest

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

The April 6 election is drawing interest as citizens continue to take out nomination papers for a range of offices.

Treasurer/Collector Elizabeth Ripley announced her resignation effective Feb. 16 to accept a position in Marshfield (see companion story). Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Avenue, has taken out papers to run for the position.

Pierson, who hosts the weekly talk show "Pierson to Person" and has been committed to public service since his Peace Corps days in the 1960s, says he can apply his business background to the position. Pierson has a career counseling practice in Norwell which he would run part-time if elected.

Richard Shea, 52 Margin Ct. and Owen O'Malley, 29 Sohier St., and Keith Knowles, 15 Border St. have taken out papers for the school committee seat currently held by Nancy Sandell, who is stepping down after three terms.

Cohasset's Week

DPW garage progress

According to Gary Gardner, the DPW garage committee has finished interviewing applicants for the design of the new DPW garage.

There were 17 applicants and the group interviewed four finalists.

Gardner said design work should be completed in February and a contractor hired soon thereafter.

Construction should start by mid-May.

He predicted the $750,000 facility would be built within five months, in time for next winter.

Town counsel search is moving forward

Eleven law firms have responded to the selectmen's advertisement for a town counsel.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said the applicants have varied backgrounds.

She said that although she thought the town might have received more applicants, she is pleased with the responses, since 11 is a manageable number.

The town requested that only lawyers with at leat five years municipal experience should apply, which probably limited the number of responses.

Selectmen agreed to review the applications and discuss naming four finalists at their meeting in two weeks.

They will also seek the opinion of town counsel Richard Henderson, who plans to step down once a successor is chosen.

Gjesteby reports on meeting

According to selectman Martha Gjesteby, state money for local school buildings is guaranteed.

She said that during the recent Mass Municipal Association conference, new Senate President Thomas Birmingham reported that some $11.2 billion for new school construction is in the state budget.

"So we're assured money for our new school if it is voted," Gjesteby said.

During last week's town meeting, the school committee said that the school construction project should be done this year to ensure state reimbursement.

Gjesteby wants to postpone part of the project.

Mosquito control openings

Due to expected resignations, the town's mosquito control committee will soon have two openings. Anyone interested should contact selectmen.

The committee monitors the town's mosquito population during the warmer months and helps coordinate remedial measures, such as cleaning out of brooks and other waterways, or spraying.

Rafferty named to board

John Rafferty is the fifth member of the water resources protection committee. Selectmen made the appointment Monday night at the request of Dean Rizzo, a committee member.

James Brook study awarded

Tutela Engineering will undertake the study of James Brook. Selectmen awarded the $14,600 contract this week.

Legal bills accepted

Some $10,000 in legal bills from Warner & Stackpole, special town counsel for the board of heath, were approved by selectmen Monday night.

Group makes donation to help stop landfill expansion

The Trustees of the Cohasset Conservation Trust have voted to contribute $10,000 to the Trustees of Reservations for the purpose of providing engineering and legal counsel in their efforts to prevent the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Ltd., currently under consideration by the Cohasset Board of Health.

The Trustees are concerned about the environmental impact of the proposed expansion on the Cohasset water supply and Whitney Woods, a Trustee of Reservations property in Cohasset.

The Trustees also voted to contribute $500 to SAFE, a local organization whose purpose is to prevent any further expansion of Cohasset Heights Ltd.

Property taxes are due

Property tax bills for the third quarter of fiscal year 1996 have been mailed and are payable no later than 7 p.m., Feb. 1.

Payments should be sent to the treasurer/collector's office. The owner of recently sold property should forward the bill to the new owner or return it to the tax collector's office, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset 02025.

For more information, call 383-9900, Ext. 113.

Lawyer can attend all landfill hearings

Attorney Kenneth Kimmell will probably attend all 12 of the health board hearings on the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

One conservation commission will pay his fees out of its $35,000 legal budget.

In an effort to save money, selectmen last week had asked Kimmell which of the hearings he did not have to attend.

Kimmell, who is being paid $135 per hour, cited three meetings he could skip.

This infuriated activist John McNabb, who fired off an angry letter, accusing selectmen of being penny wise and pound foolish and not doing enough to fight the landfill expansion request.

In part, McNabb's letter stated:"You would think that the selectmen would have gotten the message by now: the people of Cohasset want them to fight against the expansion of Cohasset Heights, and to win the fight. This is not the time to nickle and dime the fight against the expansion."

Conservation commission chairman Thomas Callahan told selectmen Monday night that Kimmell's presence is necessary to protect the town's interest.

"This is the most important thing we have facing the town," Callahan said.

He wondered why there are two lawyers representing the board of health at the hearings, Michael Leon, who charges $200 per hour and Michael Scott, who charges, $140 per hour, both from Warner & Stackpole.

In addition, the town is paying for engineers to be present, said Callahan.

Selectmen reacted angrily to McNabb's letter.

Michael Sullivan said he threw the epistle in the fire.

"Tell him (McNabb) to calm his jets," Sullivan told Callahan. "We're all going to lose out."

Jane Goedecke said she didn't know how many times the board would have to assure McNabb that they are opposed to the landfill expansion.

She also said the decision to have Kimmell reduce his attendance at the hearings was not arbitrary, but based on Kimmell's own recommendation.

She said Kimmell should attend only if he believes his attendance is necessary.

Goedecke further admonished Callahan to remind Kimmell that he is representing the town of Cohasset and not any outside group.

Merle Brown said that a member of SAFE, Stop Any Further Expansion, told him that McNabb was not representing the group when he wrote the letter on SAFE stationary.

Hagerty site on town warrant

The fate of the Hagerty property is likely to be one of the few controversial items on the March 30 town meeting warrant.

Selectmen will decide Tuesday Feb. 20 what to recommend be done with the Hagerty site, which includes several buildings located on the Harbor.

The board may ask town meeting to authorize sale of the showroom building for either commercial or residential purposes.

A zoning change may be required depending upon what selectmen recommend.

Appropriate articles will be inserted into the town meeting warrant after the selectmen vote on the property's future.

During their acceptance of town meeting articles Monday night, selectmen agreed to postpone consideration of seven separate articles outlining possible Hagerty property alternatives.

A proposal submitted by clean water activists to create a highway business district might also generate discussion.

As a zoning change, the article will require a public hearing.

The article was signed by John McNabb, Kevin O'Donnell, James Kinch, Nicholas Driscoll, Ansley Pearce, Mary Kelly, Mary Gainor, Charles Gainor, Linda Keller and Constance Afshar.

A suggestion from Manuel Salvador establishing term limits of nine years (three three-year terms) for those serving on appointed town committees and boards was also accepted.

In a Jan. 18 letter to selectmen, Salvador said, "In the case of the harbor commissioner, one time a chairman served over 15 years and we have the same people on this board for years and then they become dictators. The last time appointments came up for this board, eight people applied."

Selectman Merle Brown said that it often takes a while for people serving to become expert in the subject matter their committee deals with. However, selectman Jane Goedecke said it did not take more than two years to become effective.

The advisory committee and personnel board already have term limits.

The other articles do not appear controversial.

They include: $12,000 for consultants to assist in the preparation of an open space plan for the town; a joint effort with the state and town of Hingham to purchase land known as Turkey Hill for conservation; $5,000 for Cohasset's share of the South Shore Regional Refuse Disposal Planning Board; require sprinklers in lodging and boarding houses; institute a per bag trash fee; install air conditioning at the Pratt library; purchase school buses and remodel the high school gym and auditorium; establish a noise control by-law.

There will also be a special town meeting, with articles on the sewer, conservation funds and unpaid bills.

Cohasset treasurer accepts position in Marshfield

By KIMBERLEY KEYES
Cohasset Mariner

Marshfield has found a treasurer/collector.

Elizabeth Ripley will leave her job as Cohasset's treasurer/collector Feb. 16 to start work there Feb. 20.

"I thought it would be challenging and a nice change for me," said Ripley, a Cohasset resident who has been her town's treasurer/collector since 1984.

She said she wasn't looking for a job when she heard about the Marshfield position's vacancy. Former Marshfield town treasurer Donald Poyant resigned Dec. 15 to become Chatham's financial director.

Ripley, who holds a bachelor's degree in business administration from Northeastern University, will earn $45,147 in Marshfield. Her salary in Cohasset is $40,627, she said.

Ripley said she expects the management style in Marshfield to be different than in Cohasset, because in Marshfield the treasurer/collector is appointed. In Cohasset the position is elected.

When you're elected and working with people who are appointed, "it doesn't work as smoothly," said Ripley.

She said she likes Marshfield's "team approach" in which the town accountant, town administrator and treasurer/collector work together on financial matters.

"It's a nice way to do it," she said.

Four treasurer/collector candidates were interviewed by Marshfield officials who unanimously recommended Ripley.

Marshfield selectmen interviewed Ripley for about an hour last week before voting to hire her.

Although Marshfield is a bigger town and her office will have a larger staff, Ripley is already familiar with the town's computer system. Both Cohasset and Marshfield use Data National.

The mother of four said she will remain living in Cohasset.

"It's a very easy commute down (Route) 3A," she said.

Ripley said she will miss Cohasset's assistant treasurer, with whom she has worked for 13 years, and the assistant collector.

"We have a very cohesive group," she said.

The treasurer/collector collects, processes and reports all the money that comes in and goes out of the town, said Ripley, who is certified through the Massachusetts Collectors and Treasurers Association.

ELIZABETH RIPLEY
Will leave Feb. 16

Changes in position planned

After 11 years on the job, Elizabeth Ripley has resigned her position as treasurer/collector to accept a similar post in Marshfield.

The position of treasurer/collector is now elected in Cohasset, but appointed in Marshfield.

Selectmen will ask town meeting to make the post appointed in Cohasset as well.

Her resignation takes effect Feb. 16, the day after the deadline for taking out nomination papers. So far television personality Wigmore Pierson is the only candidate to take out papers for the position.

Town counsel will be asked about what affect the town meeting vote will have.

Selectmen praised Ripley's dedication.

"She's been a great service to the town. She's saved us a lot of money," through the careful issuing of bonds, Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby agreed, saying she is sorry Ripley is leaving, but glad about the new opportunity.

Potential candidates show interest

There is a three-way race for two seats on the board of selectmen. Incumbent Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Rd., has taken out papers for a third term. Former advisory committee chairman Nancy A. Roth, 7 Highland Ave., and conservation commissioner Roseanne McMorris, 89 Doane St., have thrown their hats into the ring. Incumbent Jane Goedecke announced recently she will not seek re-election.

Political newcomer, Roger Lowe of 90 Beach Street has taken out papers for library trustee and so have trustees Sheila Evans of 72 N. Main St. and Doris McNulty, of 80 Nichols Rd. As of Tuesday, Trustee Lucille McLaughlin had not announced her plans.

Other incumbents seeking re-election are sewer commissioner Edward M. "Ted" Guild of 365 Jerusalem Rd. for a fifth, three-year term and Town Moderator George L. Marlette Jr., 31 Rustic Dr., who seeks re-election to a three-year term.

Tom Wigmore, 32 Ash St., will seek re-election to a five-year term on the recreation commission; Town Clerk Marion Douglas, 404 A Beechwood St., has taken out papers for another three-year term. Other available positions are: assessors, one for three years; Cohasset Housing Authority one position five years; planning board, one position five years; and water commission, one position three years.

The last day to take out nomination papers is Feb. 15. They must be returned with a minimum of 50 signatures of registered voters by 5 p.m., Feb. 20, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

Many fine citizens nominated for annual award

Thirty local citizens and families nominated 15 citizens for the Cohasset Mariner annual Citizen of the Year award.

Gammons Road resident Dr. Robert T. Sceery was selected by a committee of five, consisting of Cohasset residents Chartis Langmaid, Ann Whelan, Steve Endris and Hamilton Tewksbury and Cohasset Mariner editor Mary Ford.

Other nominees were:

• Anna Abruzzese for the many things she does both for her family and the town of Cohasset, including teaching cooking classes for senior citizens and serving as a eucharistic minister at St. Anthony's, shuttle bus driver, member of the Village Renaissance Committee, helper at the Pine Street Inn and much more.

• Barbara Dillon for tireless work for her church, local Scouting programs, and schools; and for service on the historic commission, historical society, in the Daughters of the American Revolution, Community Garden Club and as garden club liaison to the Cohasset Lightkeepers' Corporation and member of the CLC executive committee.

• Fred Koed for providing strong leadership to improve the management and operations of the Cohasset Water Commission.

• Arthur Lehr Jr. for 50 years of service to Scouting in town, service on the recycling committee and as civil defense director and for past service on the zoning board of appeals.

• Polly Logan, one of the founders of the Community Garden Club, for supporting important causes over 40 years including the lightkeeper's residence and community center.

• Robert Martin for being a government watchdog, working to make Harborfest and other worthwhile projects happen, and for his positive involvement with the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

• Joseph McElroy for leadership, enthusiasm and unbounded optimism in turning a "deteriorating white elephant" into the magnificent lightkeeper's residence.

• Sue McNamara for countless hours on the PSO, art boosters, Appalachia Service Project, education foundation, and more.

• Dr. Alwin A. Merrill for tireless efforts given in the interests of senior men in the breakfast club which is enhanced by his personal attention and caring attitude.

• Wayne Sawchuk and Gary Vanderweil Jr. who combined their talents to create a grand, new athletic facility for the town.

• Richard Silvia for his skillful, tactful work chairing the school facilities committee.

• Louis Simeone for his good works with the Council on Elder Affairs and church affairs.

• Marjorie Steele for leadership and support of the Cohasset Food Pantry.

• Doug and Kathy Yeager for tireless efforts to inform citizens about the reality of restoration of the Greenbush line.

Inn repairs are promised soon meeting the 30-day deadline will not pose a hardship.

Lincoln also said that town meeting will be asked to consider an article requiring sprinkler systems in hotels and boarding houses.

Akerblom said he would save 50 percent of his insurance costs with a sprinkler system.

Smith said renovations will maintain the architectural integrity of the inn.

"It's a marvelous building, the key word is restoration," he said.

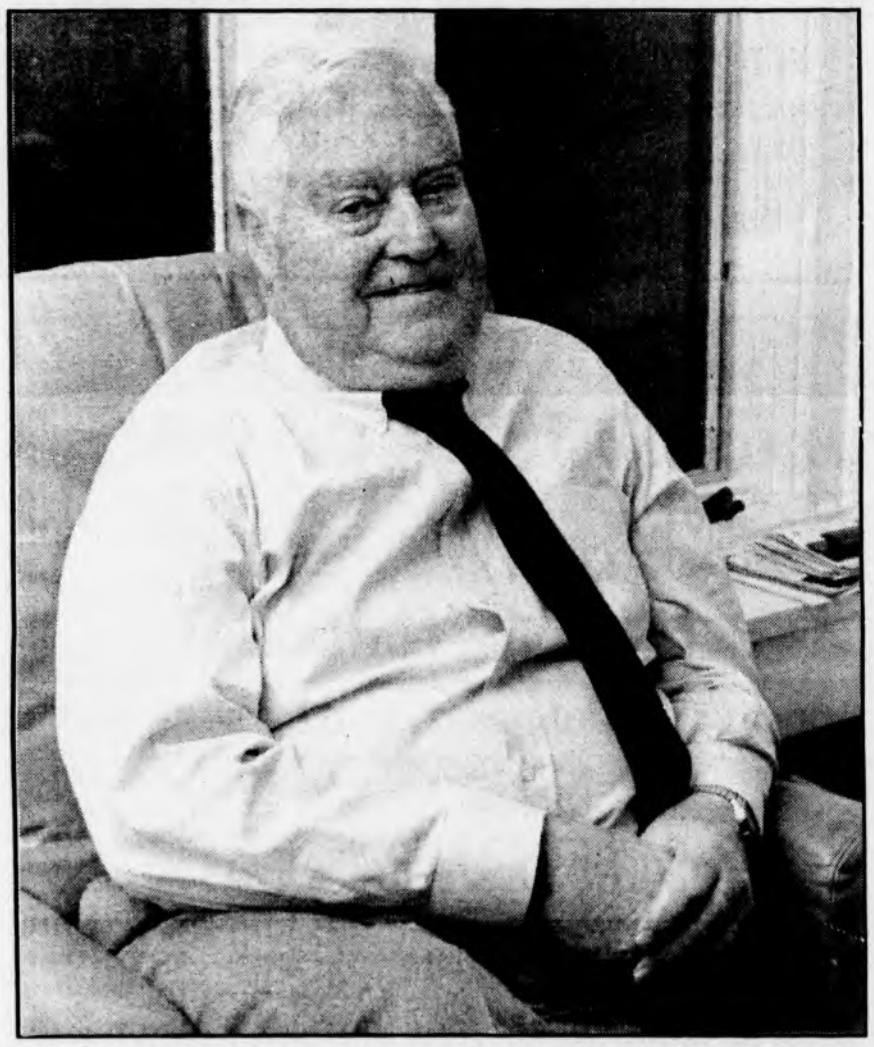
They plan to rearrange the entrance and install a downstairs restroom so dining room customers do not have to go through the bar or go upstairs.

Smith also said they would likely apply for an entertainment license in the future to allow a piano or guitar player to perform in the lounge.

Selectmen appeared pleased with what they heard.

"We wish you luck," said selectman Jane Goedecke. "It's a wonderful place." She suggested country & western music for entertainment.

Alan Dunmier will be the manager.



Dr. Robert T. Sceery has practiced pediatrics in Cohasset since 1953.

suppressed enough, so all the missiles landed astern." LSTs (Landing Ship Tanks) carried troops, tanks and equipment.

The GI Bill, which provided financial aid for college tuition to war veterans, made it possible for Sceery to attend medical school at Yale, where his mentor encouraged him to go into pediatrics.

Then it was back to Boston where he completed his residency at Massachusetts General Hospital. There he knew Dr. Leroy Eldredge, who, a year ahead of Sceery, started a pediatrics practice in Hingham and encouraged Sceery to come to the South Shore.

"He persuaded me," Sceery recalls. "It was very difficult (for Eldredge). There was no pediatric coverage."

So coupled with Eldredge's urging and the appeal of Cohasset — the Sceerys came to town in 1953 and haven't looked back since.

Sceery has operated his practice in three locations — 109 N. Main St., 89 Ripley Rd., and 95 Atlantic Ave. — but the service he provides hasn't changed. His devotion to his profession and willingness to make house calls, even in the middle of the night, have secured his place in the hearts of many families.

But as a young doctor starting out in town, he wasn't sure how quickly he'd gain acceptance.

"My first patient called on July 4, 1953 and I had to leave a party where people were trying to introduce me," Sceery recalls. "The child had a high fever with no other signs. So I said it's roseola and he'll have rash in three days.

"Then I sweated for three days until I was sure I was right."

As a result Sceery fondly remembers by "sheer chance" being able to start his practice as a doctor who knew what he was talking about.

The job was demanding and in the early years, the Sceerys had no answering service.

"I made house calls all over the place in Marshfield, Scituate, Hull and Norwell — my wife and I could never go anywhere together."

As time went on Eldredge and Sceery worked with two other local pediatricians, Dr. John Joseph and Dr. Vincent Sullivan, covering for each other over the years, enabling each of them to have some semblance of a personal life. Sceery is the last of the four still in practice.

He still loves its profession although it's changing.

Unfortunately today, Sceery says, health insurance companies have made the patient/doctor relationship a business arrangement.

"The insurance companies tell us what to do and I don't like it frankly."

But he points out that change hasn't been all bad. Thanks to research, many diseases which were life-threatening 40 years ago, such as leukemia, are now curable.

And despite the demands — Sceery, who is the father of six and grandfather of 13 — still finds pediatrics satisfying.

"You start with a youngster who is scared to death and hates to come ...," and Sceery points to a watercolor on his office wall painted by a former patient.

"He came in with acute appendicitis," Sceery recalls. "I made the diagnosis and got him to the hospital where he was operated on. Forever afterward he was my friend, he knew I helped him.

"It's that kind of turnaround that is very satisfying."

Since 1956, Sceery has been the Cohasset school doctor. He is responsible for all sports physicals, routine exams for those not seen by a private physician, and is in the schools one day a week visiting with the nurse, giving immunizations and helping to keep all the records up to date.

He served on the board of health in the early 1970s and helped lead the fight to start to get the town "sewered." Over the years, he has been a familiar figure at town meetings espousing causes such as the onset of zoning laws and most recently the proposal for a new elementary school.

Sceery, who turns 76 this year, doesn't have any plans to retire.

"My wife wouldn't know what to do with me around the house.

"I hope to continue working as long as I can and as long as I keep my health."

Privatizing ambulance pondered

Selectmen unanimously agreed Monday to a request from member Michael Sullivan to consider switching to private ambulance service.

Sullivan suggested that town administrator Gregory Doyon and town accountant Michael Buckley examine the cost of a private ambulance. The other selectmen agreed without comment.

Sullivan said the move was necessary because of "problems we've been having with the fire department."

Fire Captain Mark Trask recently dropped his EMT status.

In a telephone interview, Fire Chief Roger Lincoln declined to comment on Sullivan's proposal to study private ambulance service.

He did explain that firefighters hired before 1982 are under no obligation to re-certify in order to keep EMT certification, which is good for two years. Re-certification requires taking refresher courses which include a certain amount of training.

Trask, who did not re-certify, was hired prior to 1982, he said.

The chief said having all firefighters certified as EMTs is helpful.

"It is nice to have everyone certified because then there is enough coverage for the ambulance at all times," he said.

Sullivan has been upset recently about the number of "call backs" used to cover the station when the ambulance is out of town. Payment for call backs comes out of the fire department's overtime budget.

In other unrelated business, selectmen approved increases in ambulance fees recommended by the fire department.

An ambulance trip to the South Shore Hospital will now cost $213.01, a Medicaire approved increase of three percent over the previous $206.81 charge.

The cost per loaded mile increased to $9.53 from $9.25, while oxygen charges went to $39.24, up from $38.10.

They also approved a step increase in pay for ambulance administrator Jane Henderson.

In addition, selectmen also agreed to close the books on slightly more than $6,000 in duplicate ambulance bills.

Selectmen said that in cases where advanced life support equipment is used, the South Shore Hospital automatically generates a bill, collects the money and reimburses the town.

However, the town also generates bills, which become duplicates if ASL is used. These duplicate bills periodically must be wiped off the books.

Cohasset has an 88 percent collection rate from ambulance services.

The Mariner welcomes letters to the Editor.

It certainly was a relief to hear that the new owner of the Red Lion Inn has no plans to change it, other than what is needed to make it safe and sound. It has been there since 1704 — a true landmark — with even the sign outside being a true part of our history! We do hope that whoever took the photos and the pictures that were on the dining room walls will return them. They really are a part of the town's history that cannot be replaced.

That's the news for this week. Let me know what you are doing, where you are going and where you have been. We all are waiting to hear.

EDITORIAL

Citizen of the Year

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it is my pleasure to announce that Dr. Robert T. Sceery has been selected as the 1995 Citizen of the Year.

Dr. Sceery has spent more than 40 years practicing pediatrics in Cohasset and has accumulated legions of fans who readily share stories about his extraordinary service not only as a doctor but as a fellow citizen.

Throughout the six weeks that nominations were open, I read dozens of letters from readers who took the time to nominate someone, detailing his or her contributions which help make this town one we all love.

With a field of 15 nominees submitted by more than 30 citizens and families, the selection process wasn't easy.

Our thanks to residents Chartis Langmaid, Ann Whelan, Steve Endris and Hamilton Tewksbury for joining me at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham for the challenging and pleasurable task of poring over the nominations.

Regrettably, we can't recognize each of the 15 nominees with the Citizen of the Year award. And we thank all those who wrote such thoughtful letters and notes nominating their fellow citizens.

The selection committee narrowed the field to eight, then six, four, and finally to three. The final decision — although not reached without considerable discussion — was unanimous.

So we extend our heartfelt congratulations to Dr. Sceery, an old-fashioned doctor whose has earned the respect, trust and affection of so many families.

Barbara Meehan says it best in her nomination:

"Professionally and personally, Dr. Sceery represents all that is good about Cohasset....his kindness and attention to goodness and the well-being of Cohasset and its citizens is unmatched."

With this award, we offer recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unacknowledged. Too often people today look to the sports, rock, or movie star with envy when the real hero is the local police officer, doctor, parent, firefighter, teacher, or church leader.

The annual Citizen of the Year award is our way of taking our hats off to those unsung heros among us who help make Cohasset a better place.

Our schools need attention

To the Editor:

Believe me, I am not trying to convince anybody how to vote on the new school issue, but I have been asked and I am sure other people wonder "How you, the chairman of Cohasset Elder Affairs and an advocate for seniors, can support a new school for Cohasset?"

When I was asked to join the School Facilities Board this summer, I did thinking there was no need for a new school. After two tours of Joseph Osgood and many hours of studying the alternatives, I have changed my mind and believe the new school is the way to go. There is no way of doing nothing, and spending $3.6 million for a band-aid solution does not make fiscal sense when for $2 million more you can have a new school and renewed Deer Hill School for 50 more years.

Doing the new school first and then renovating Deer Hill would only add to the cost and stretch out the agony that much longer. People ask why everything at once (sewer, garage, athletic field, new school)? Remember, we have been putting these things off for the last 25 years and now it is catching up to us.

I will not be here to receive the benefit of the lower taxes in future years, but if the new school is built I can feel better about the safety of the children and the value of my house.

For seniors, who qualify, there could be some aid with real estate taxes through abatements or deferments. Call Elder Affairs or the Assessor's Office.

Please vote Feb. 10, and remember something has to be done about the schools, and whatever way we go it is going to cost money.

People need the entire picture

To the Editor:

Open letter to the Cohasset Capital Budget Committee:

I am disappointed with the Capital Budget Committee's not having made available to the taxpayers a written schedule of proposed and pending capital outlays and their impact on future tax rates in advance of the Jan. 22 town meeting on raising funds for a new school.

Aside from the merits of the school issue (and I have no quarrel with those) the effect of this neglect by the Capital Budget Committee was to deny the taxpayers an opportunity to carefully consider the significance of their vote by the presentation of a single issue completely isolated from other ongoing and inescapable tax obligations.

I do not mean that it was wrong to vote for a new school. I do mean that it was wrong to be expected to contemplate a capital expenditure of this magnitude without considering existing and future obligations such as athletic fields, sewers, etc. This combination of debt will subject the taxpayer to an unanticipated tax burden and one which may become a real hardship for some.

Forty odd years ago, when the town faced a similar log-jam of capital needs, the Capital Budget Committee was created to deal with it by anticipating and scheduling those needs. A schedule was drawn up, and the yearly tax impact published and mailed to the voters of the town who could then vote to raise funds with full knowledge of the likely effect of their actions. Until recently, this had been standard procedure.

Jan. 22, Mr. Whitley, chairman of the Advisory Committee, did his best to mend this oversight from the podium. However, there was neither time nor opportunity to digest or contemplate the significance of this complex of figures.

I hope the Capital Budget Committee will soon return to its assigned task.

Support of new school urged

To the Editor:

The time is now! A window of opportunity exists for us to make a wise, cost-effective investment to our town's infrastructure.

Approval of the town meeting endorsed school construction plan will enable the town to be placed on the state's funding priority list. Currently 90 projects are on the list and by June 1996 approximately 75 projects will be added. If we meet the June 1 deadline, the town will be placed on the list and we expect to begin receiving 60 percent state reimbursement for total project costs in four to five years. If we do not meet the deadline, reimbursement could be delayed for another four or five years. Presently the state legislature is reviewing the method of reimbursement for school construction. It is possible that Cohasset could be adversely affected by a change in the reimbursement process.

If construction is not approved, the town will face the problem of bringing the two elementary schools into minimal compliance without any state reimbursement. This will mean that Cohasset would have to pay 100 percent of these costs. In other words, the town would expend approximately $3.3 million and not have solved its facilities' problems.

The infrastructure of the town must be maintained. School buildings are assets that we must protect. Cohasset's reputation for excellent schools helps maintain our property values.

Any delay in the project will result in additional costs to the town. It is estimated that school construction costs will escalate by 5 to 8 percent per year. The 70-year-old Osgood School is overcrowded, unsafe and deteriorating. Any delay in construction will only exacerbate this deterioration. If construction is not begun, portable classrooms will be necessary to accommodate overcrowding at the elementary level and will result in additional expense to the town.

This project, when completed, will replace a costly, aging, inadequate facility with a new building that will have an estimated useful life of at least 50 years. The Deer Hill School will also be upgraded and added to and the result will also be a facility with a useful life of 50 years. These new and upgraded facilities will provide flexibility to accommodate future enrollment variations in our PreK-Grade 6 student population. Additional community space will also be made available.

We urge you to support the override Feb. 10, and as our long-time school physician stated at the Special Town Meeting, "Think with your head and heart and do what is right for the children."

Cohasset School Facilities/School Building Committee

Leadership is seriously lacking

To the Editor:

As long time residents of the town, we have tried not only to keep informed on relevant issues but also to express our opinions when we have felt it necessary.

It is for this reason that our experiences last week, when we attended two different meetings, are of serious concern. We wonder, for instance, why town meeting was held up for more than an hour after it was scheduled to begin. Like many others who sat waiting with us, we had rushed to be there at the appointed time. Was there a reason other than that of accommodating latecomers for the delay?

Even more disturbing was the treatment inflicted on some of the speakers. It is a sorry state of affairs if hissing and booing an individual has become an acceptable way of dealing with his or her differences of opinion. Are we wrong to believe that it is one of the responsibilities of our town moderator to prevent this?

Our next rude awakening was the manner in which the first hearing, on the proposed extension of the private landfill, was conducted. We found Attorney Shea's behavior to the landfill's representatives disgusting and his conduct of the meeting both arbitrary and insulting. To be told that private residents did not have the right to speak at a public meeting was far more than disappointing. It was alarming, especially since, as we understood, he is supposed to be serving as an impartial arbitrator hired to assist our own board of health and paid for with our tax dollars.

It is for these reasons we ask the questions so often heard in our community of late: what is happening to our town and where is the leadership and direction we have a right to expect from our elected representatives?

Senator Hedlund opens Jan. 25 landfill session

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

A sparser second session audience at Thursday (Jan. 25) evening's Board of Health hearing on the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) heard testimony in favor of, as well as rebuttal information on, the CHL application.

The hearings are held Tuesday and Thursday evenings in the town hall auditorium and the hearing process is expected to take approximately four more weeks before a decision is rendered.

State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, opened the session by telling board members his office has received "hundreds of letters in opposition from residents of Cohasset and Hingham" to the proposed landfill expansion.

He cited complaints concerning increased noise and potential traffic problems, possible water contamination and overall quality of life issues.

Concluding his brief statement, Hedlund told both sides that he had expressed his opposition of the project to the commissioner of the state Department of Environmental Affairs.

Opening witness for Cohasset Heights, Raymond Quinn, manager of the Environmental Engineering Division of SAIC Engineering, Inc., then went into a lengthy and detailed overview of the proposed expansion.

Of the 27.5 acres for which Cohasset Heights have applied, only slightly more than half (14.2 acres) would be used for the actual dumping of refuse materials. The remaining acreage (13.3) would comprise access roads, buffer zones and ponds for storm water retention.

The Material Processing Operation aspect of an expanded landfill drew the most attention.

The MPO would take in such construction related materials as crushed asphalt, wood, brick, as well as possible storm debris, items Quinn referred to as "society's waste." The facility would then break up, break down or crush these materials and recycle them by selling the end by-products.

Quinn explained how the MPO running at maximum capacity would have the capability to consolidate and process up to 100 tons a day, six days a week. As to its resale, he anticipated no problems and told the board that the market for such material would determine its subsequent monetary value.

Michael Leon, attorney for the Board of Health, questioned Quinn at length about the MPO, eventually prompting CHL attorney Anton Moehrke to object.

"There will be ample opportunity to discuss these matters over the course of the proceedings. This is a site assignment hearing and I don't want (it) to get into a cross-examination," he said.

Under questioning from Kenneth Kimmell, attorney for the town of Cohasset, Quinn stated that the landfill at present has a life expectancy of only another one to one-and-a-half years before it would have to be shut down if expansion is denied.

After citing an extensive record of violations against the landfill, Kimmell asked Quinn if he felt its operation over the years had been consistent and handled in a positive manner.

"Yes," he said.

CHL engineer grilled at hearing

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

Undergoing a second evening of detailed cross-examination, Raymond Quinn, consulting engineer for Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL), continued to express his satisfaction with regards to safety measures for the proposed expansion of the privately owned facility.

Tuesday's session (Jan. 30) was the third, of an expected 12, on CHL's application for the 27.5 acre expansion. The Board of Health is conducting the hearings and meets Tuesday and Thursday at 7:30 p.m. Sessions scheduled for Feb. 6 and 8 will be conducted at the Second Congregational Church, adjacent to town hall.

While Quinn spoke on a variety of concerns, the main thrust of opposition questions dealt with the overall safety of an expanded landfill.

Kevin O'Donnell, speaking as a representative of one of the 15 10-citizen groups opposed to the CHL application, engaged in an early exchange with Quinn over safety concerns.

O'Donnell asked for a guarantee that an expanded landfill "would not create any dangers" for the town of Cohasset.

"I don't think that's a fair question," Quinn responded.

This prompted CHL attorney Anton Moehrke to object, stating, "What does a guarantee mean? Can anyone in this room guarantee anything nowadays?"

Undaunted, O'Connell persevered. "I think we're dealing with a very serious issue. Is it absolutely safe?"

When Quinn hesitated, O'Donnell demanded, "Do you lack the confidence in your design?"

"No," Quinn said, "I don't lack confidence."

Asked specifically about certain materials, Quinn stated that Cohasset Heights had not addressed the subject of accepting low-level radioactive waste in their application but had reserved the right to apply at a later date for a special waste permit, issued by the Department of Environmental Protection, to accept asbestos.

Speaking on the make-up of a liner fabric, which would be used to permanently cover mounds of construction and demolition debris and reach a height of 200 feet, Quinn expressed complete reliance in the product.

The polyurethane material, he said, is state-of-the-art and similar to other linings which are currently in use in another section of the landfill. He further stated the manufacturer's warranty on such linings is usually 20 years.

Though O'Donnell got Quinn to admit, as with any product, "There might be some weak points that might fail."

Kenneth Kimmell, attorney for the town of Cohasset, strongly pointed out to Quinn, "Systems designed by humans will fail."

Quinn stated that while there has been some marginal ground water contamination from the current landfill, he foresaw no adverse effects to the surrounding wetlands if expansion is granted.

"There isn't a threat to the public water supply from this landfill," he said.

On a matter of housekeeping, Hearing Officer John Shea denied two motions from O'Donnell on behalf of one 10-citizen group. The motions were for a viewing of the current landfill and the gathering of evidence from within the landfill.

Shea suggested O'Donnell and Cohasset Heights see if they could mutually reach an agreement concerning the two requests.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

New school plan is supported

To the Editor:

It is so difficult to understand arguments against building a new school. Town residents needn't even look into their hearts – their heads alone should find the facts compelling.

Educational arguments aside (e.g. classrooms, gym, library, playground all below Mass. Education standards), and ignoring safety issued (a "lethal combination" of fire hazards per the Cohasset Fire Chief), it is still a financially sound decision to build a school now.

CHOICE A: VOTE YES

- $5.6 million spent for $13.9 million worth of school buildings built to last 50 years;
- Tax rates go just above $20/1000 and schools meet the needs for the next 50 years;
- Favorable borrowing rates now;
- Current construction costs, considered low by independent architects/engineers;
- Aesthetic new building on adequate acreage.

CHOICE B: VOTE NO

- $3.3 million needed for $3.3 million worth of band-aids to the Osgood school;
- Tax rates jump to almost $20/1000 due to the sewer, garage and other increases; town still has not addressed educational and enrollment needs;
- Unknown future borrowing rates;
- Inflated construction costs when a new school is eventually built;
- Trailers go up on current limited space.

The numbers have all been printed; taxes are going up anyway. For $111/year more (the average 25/year increase on the median Cohasset home), we could solve our school safety and educational needs for the next 50 years.

Vote with your head, and your heart will feel good too.

State's commitment is questioned

To the Editor:

What is happening to our town and where is it headed? Jan. 22, a Special Town Meeting approved a new school project of $13,985,000 plus interest. The interest cost and the potential for cost overruns were not discussed. These could grow our expenditure from approximately $14 million to $24 million to $28 million or more. The proponents stated that the state may participate with up to 60 percent of the costs.

I called the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation and spoke to Mr. Steve Adams. He stated that the state's outstanding debt in October 1995 was $9.6 billion, this does not include authority debt, i.e. MBTA, MTA, Convention Center, etc. He stated that in 1994 Massachusetts was ranked third in the nation for per capita debt and fourth in the nation for debt per $1,000 of income. He also stated that the debt grew from $4.2 billion in 1988 to $8.6 billion in 1991. Since then the debt has grown at a slower rate to $9.6 billion. He also stated that the "Big Dig" project is projected to cost $7.8 billion and that $4 billion has already been spent and that of the remaining $3.8 billion the state would be responsible for approximately $760,000,000 (20 percent) over the next seven years. However, today's newspapers state that Congress is threatening "....to block funding for the project until the state proves it can pay its share with 'the limited resources available.' "

Because of Mr. Adams' comments and the article in the newspaper quoting U.S. Rep. Frank R. Wolf (R-VA) it made me think about the state's ability to meet the 60 percent level of funding. In this year's budget the governor reduced this line item from $11 million to $9 million, the Legislature hasn't voted on it but, you can see that this is an area that is being reviewed.

At the Town Meeting, our state Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray stated that 89 cities and towns are already on the list of school projects and the state expects an additional 75 projects to be added to the list by June 1, 1996. Our state Senator Bob Hedlund stated at the meeting, that the state had at one time considered not reimbursing for the interest portion of these projects. With unprecedented state debt obligations, I really question that the state will meet a 60 percent participation in these projects and the four or five year lag time before they do participate. Remember that during the lag time we would pay 100 percent of the debt costs, supposedly to be reimbursed when the state participates, if they participate and for how much they participate.

Last week our Town Accountant, Michael Buckley, was quoted as having stated that the tax rate would increase by 40 percent due to projects already voted and projects to be voted on, namely, the new fields, the new public works garage, the new school and the $16,000,000. sewer project to be voted on in the next two years. The Sewer Project is also supposed to have state participation by formula.

I have serious doubts that the state will be able to participate to the current levels. These two projects will cost from $50,000,000 to $60,000,000. It is not known how much the town's participation will be ultimately. If these projects are voted through I feel that our tax rate will ultimately increase by much more than 40 percent because of reduced state participation and cost overruns.

We must proceed within reason. Our town cannot support these projected levels of debt. The proponents of the new school stated that real estate values would increase with a new school. With a huge debt, high taxes and many current residents being forced to sell their homes I think that real estate values will go down.

Denial of CHL landfill permit urged

To the Editor:

If your home was found to have structural problems, would you trust the contractor who built the flawed structure to correct the problem or build an addition? Of course not! But this is exactly what CHL is asking Cohasset to allow.

The same firm that told the Board of Health its storm water management systems would function properly to protect the town's water supply and the surrounding wetlands in 1992 is promising similar things for the systems it has designed for the proposed expansion. Had the original system worked, I might feel a lot more confidence in the proposed system for the expansion. Unfortunately, the original system was found to be failed by the Conservation Commission in 1994. The Board of Health is being asked to take CHL's word that adequate safeguards are in place.

CHL's past performance should weigh heavily in the Board of Health's decision. Public records indicate that by 1994 the landfill had been cited for violations more than 40 times! Let's assume for argument's sake that some of these violations were minor. Others, not so minor, were enumerated by the town's special environmental counsel, Kenneth L. Kimmell. These violations began in 1989 and continued through March of 1994.

January 94 ... The D.E.P. stated that "CHL has failed to properly install, operate and maintain the odor control system" at its current operation.

At a May 13, 1991, inspection by a member of the Conservation Commission he found that "It appeared that the tank underneath was simply overflowing." This tank would have been filled with leachate from the current landfill — leachate that is expected to be sent for special processing off site.

February '91 ... The Board of Health found that odor from CHL was a public nuisance. It had received a series of complaints including reports of eye-watering, shortness of breath and nausea.

Siltation, sedimentation, erosion and run-off problems were also mentioned by Mr. Kimmell.

Despite the fact that Mr. Kimmell had little more than a week to study the complex expansion issues, his investigations gave him the confidence to conclude that the Board of Health would find more than enough evidence to find the site unsuitable for expansion.

After listening to just a few of the many violations committed by CHL, I found it difficult to agree with Mr. A. Raymond Quinn, senior project manager from SAIC, when he said that CHL had a "consistent and positive record." Mr. Quinn has been involved with the CHL landfill design since 1988 — during the entire period that these violations occurred!

After explaining all the environmental protections for the proposed landfill expansion, Mr. Quinn stated, "Once constructed then it's up to the operator to maintain these systems to make sure they function as intended." Not only is it up to CHL to maintain these protections, but it is up to CHL to monitor itself!!! CHL hasn't properly maintained its current operation. What proof could it possibly offer that it would maintain/enforce the protections for an expanded landfill?

It makes no logical sense to locate a known pollution source so close to our water supply. Anyone who cares to follow the hearing process is sure to find a myriad of reasons to oppose the expansion.

I strongly urge the Board of Health to deny the site assignment for the proposed expansion of the CHL landfill.

Items on state needed

To the Editor:

I'm writing about the great state of Massachusetts in a research report for school. I have chosen your state because I've only heard good things about it. I am 10 years old and live in California. I would appreciate your help in getting information, pictures, maps, letters, postcards, recipes and other information from local residents.

Would you please publish my letter in your newspaper and send me a clipping of it, if you can? I would like to know why it is so terrific to live in Massachusetts.

Thank you.

This Was Cohasset's Bank for 100 Years!

Now, It Is Again!

We've been helping South Shore residents with their banking needs since 1834. As of Monday, December 11, 1995, we have a new home in Cohasset. We're located at 13 Elm Street in Cohasset Village, the site of the former Cohasset Savings Bank.

If you step inside, you'll see that extensive renovations have restored this building to its original character and charm; you'll find friendly, helpful people and personal service. This is the kind of service you just don't get from those big regional banks.

You'll also find a 24-hour ATM and a night depository.

If you step inside soon, you'll find out about our free offer for stadium blankets and canvas tote bags for qualified depositors.

As a locally owned and managed community bank, it's our goal to provide you with quality financial products and superior service. Your deposits help us provide loans for families and businesses right here in Cohasset.

Junior high coffee set

Parents of seventh- and eighth-grade students are invited to meet with Principal Curt Collins for coffee and discussion on Wednesday, Feb. 14, at 9:30 a.m. in the school's conference center.

Parents with questions or agenda topics are encouraged to call Allison Ulmer (383-2672) or Monica McKenney (383-1338).

Enrichment program was success

On Jan. 17 and 18, Osgood children in grades 1-3 and parent volunteers participated in activities such as quiltmaking, drawing to music, creative movement, mathematical problem-solving, conflict resolution and cultural awareness projects.

Parents shared their expertise and knowledge in a wide range of subjects, including travel in and outside of the United States, southwestern landforms and artwork, music, dance and cooking. The program was part of a project initiated by the Osgood School Council to reach out to the rich resources available in the community to provide enrichment experiences for children while supporting the need for teacher professional development time.

As students worked with parents, grade-level colleagues had the opportunity to collaborate on common curricular goals, such as enhancing instructional strategies that incorporate Gardiner's Multiple Intelligences and further developing reading and writing themes.

The enthusiasm of the children and parents has encouraged the Council to consider continuing the project in the spring.

Hardwick is unstoppable in hoop victories

By JIM O'SULLIVAN
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset High basketball team played two home games last Friday and Saturday and came out with a pair of victories, handily dispatching the Norton Lancers, 76-64, and the Green Wave of Abington, 67-51.

The Skippers were led by a relentless Jared Hardwick, who scored a grand total of 56 points over the two-game stretch. Burke Davis tossed in 17 and 10, and senior point-guard Fred Howard added 10 and 9.

Against Norton, Davis began the game by sinking a three-pointer, after taking a pass from junior center Ryan Bishop (seven points). Hardwick followed with a pull-up jumper and Davis put the Skippers out in front 10-6, with two free throws and a three-pointer. Howard slashed to the hole for a bucket and sophomore Paul-Michael Quintin hit a medium-range jumper. Hardwick poured in four straight points and junior forward J.L. Williams sank a trey from the outside, giving the home team a 21-17 edge. Davis knocked down a three-pointer of his own, and Hardwick dropped in a finger roll and two free throws.

Junior forward Brian Kilroy hit a jumper and fellow classmate Matt Belson hit a layup, despite getting clobbered on the way up. coach Ron Ford would later call Belson's layup "one of the biggest plays of the game." Williams fought his way through traffic to net a layup and Howard hit a jump shot at the buzzer to give Cohasset a 38-32 half-time lead.

Hardwick started the second half with an offensive putback and a layup. Howard

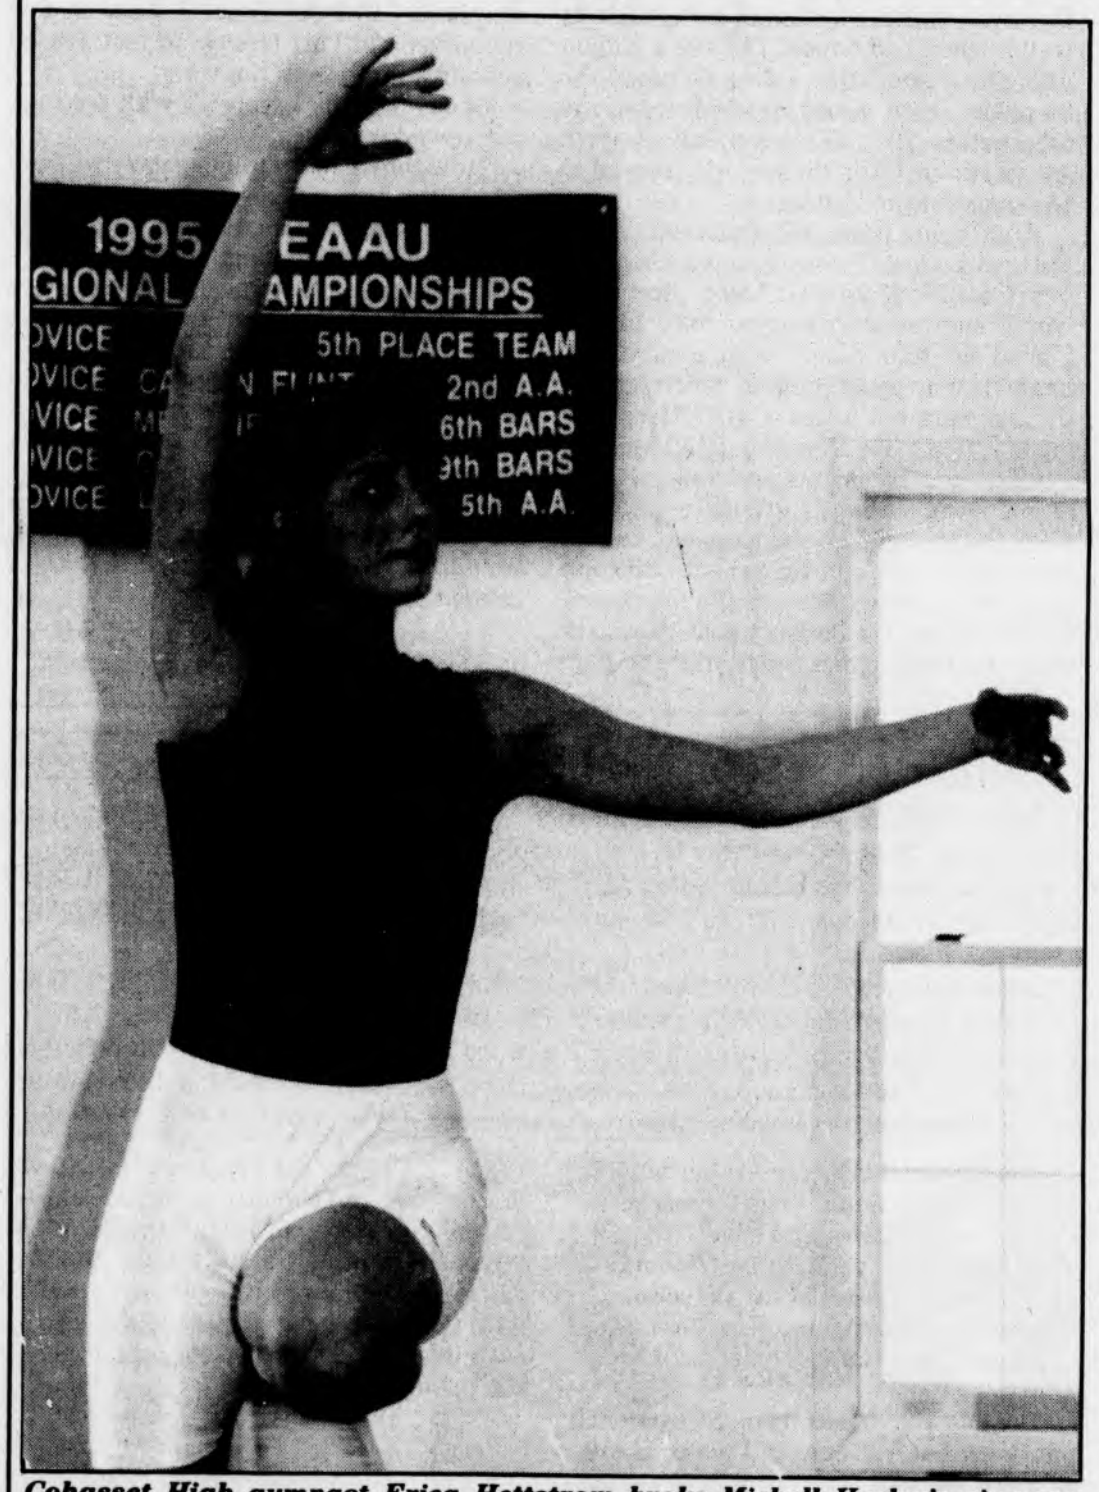
Three-peat is all sewn up



Cohasset High gymnast Erica Hettstrom broke Michell Harley's six-year school record on the balance beam with her 8.6 in Monday's 123.2 — 108.9 win over Duxbury. The victory clinched at least a tie for the South Shore League title, the Skippers' third in a row.

Gymnasts clinch share of title and extend streak

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

The "Three-peat" has been signed sealed and delivered and there'll be another banner going up on the wall of the Cohasset High gym.

Led by Erica Hettstrom's record-breaking performance on the balance beam, and sweeps in three events, the Skippers clinched at least a tie for their third consecutive South Shore League title with Monday's 123.2 — 108.9 victory over Duxbury. The win boosted Cohasset's record to a perfect 10-0 and extended the team's unbeaten streak to 31 meets.

The Skippers won the title without a key member of the squad. Meghan Pratt decided to bypass the meet because of a bad cold. She was expected back in time for Cohasset's tri meet against Hanover and Norwell.

The Duxbury meet featured a slew of personal records and season bests from a handful of Skipper gymnasts.

Hettstrom was the big winner, breaking the school record on the balance beam with an 8.6., as she led the Cohasset sweep. Her score erased Michelle Hartley's six-year record of 8.55.

Second-place finisher Jodi Colwill just missed breaking the record with her 8.5 performance. Colwill's mark was also a personal best. Captain Tafana Fiore rounded out the sweep with a 7.7.

Hettstrom, Colwill and Lauren Genovese took the top-three spots on the bars. Colwill set another personal best with a 7.5 while Hettstrom's 7.6 was her best mark of the season.

Colwill tied for first on the vault at 8.0 and Kristen Reynolds placed third with a 7.8.

On the floor exercise, Tara Hettstrom edged out Erica and third-place finisher Genovese with a score of 8.3. Erica received an 8.2 and Genovese put together a superb performance which netted her a personal best of 8.0.

Erica won the all-around competition in a personal record of 32.0 while Colwill's second-place showing of 31.5 was also her best score ever.

Head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni was certainly pleased with the victory but was concerned so many of the girls had developed colds and weren't feeling 100 percent.

"I'm a little concerned the girls aren't feeling well," she said.

Ardizzoni also said she wasn't completely comfortable with the tri meet format scheduled for yesterday. She explained that with three teams competing it is much tougher to keep an ongoing score through the meet.

"You really just don't know who's ahead," Ardizzoni said.

Beyond the meet setup, Ardizzoni also was concerned with Hanover, which has improved its scores dramatically as the season has continued. The Indians, led by Renee George and Kim Richardson, have been consistently scoring between 120 and 123. George recently set a league best of 33.2 in the all-around. Erica Hettstrom is the lone Cohasset gymnast with a league best. Her new record of 8.6 on the balance beam has yet to be bettered by anyone in the league.

In Cohasset's 30th consecutive victory, last Saturday's easy 122.95 — 83.7 decision over Thayer Academy, Ardizzoni juggled the lineup around, using some of the girls in events they don't usually compete in.

Ardizzoni's experiment proved to be a success as Genovese (28.6) and Carolyn Pratt (27.95) took the top-two slots in the all-around and the Skippers went on to sweep every other event.

Colwill took first on the beam (8.1), vault (7.9), and finished third on the bars (7.15). Tara was second on the bars (7.2) and won the floor exercise (8.25) ahead of Erica (8.2) and Fiore (7.8).

"We were just trying to see where some of the kids could excel in different events," Ardizzoni said.

American Legion baseball team to be resurrected

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

After a 15-year hiatus, American Legion baseball will be resurrected in Cohasset this summer.

A series of four to five tryouts for the George H. Meally Post 118 squad will be held for Cohasset, Scituate and Hull prospects in April or May. A 24-game schedule will get underway in late June after the end of the high schoo! season with playoffs beginning in early August. All the games will be nine innings long, a step up from the seven innings the players from the three high schools are more accustomed to playing.

"I'm very excited about it," said Scott Arnold, a legion member who has been instrumental in forming a team for the summer. "I think we're going to get a lot of fan support and people coming to the games."

Arnold said the players picked for the squad should be ready to commit themselves to playing hard all summer.

But he believes motivation shouldn't be a problem.

"These will be kids who love baseball and have it in their blood," Arnold said.

The team was disbanded 15 years ago because of a lack of interest. But in the past several years the summer baseball programs have flourished in all three towns, paving the way for the new team.

then pulled up for another jumper. Hardwick sank two free throws and Davis drove strong to the hole for a layup. Bishop tore down an offensive rebound, put it back in for two, got fouled and made his free throw, igniting both the Cohasset squad and the Cohasset fans. Bishop's block at the other end led to his layup for two more. Howard's drive and layup put the Skippers up 54-43.

Davis twisted his way to the hole for two more and Quintin's swish from beyond the arc all but sealed the Lancers' fate. Kilroy's perfect pass to Hardwick resulted in two more for the big forward and Howard's pass set up Hardwick for a rim-shaking slam dunk. Bishop tore down a rebound and tossed a touchdown pass to Hardwick, who opted to take it easy on the hoop and guided in a layup.

The game was then stalled after a Norton player suffered a lacerated cheekbone with 4:05 left to play. When the game resumed, Bishop sank two free throws. Quintin took a pass from Hardwick on the fast-break and took it in for a lefty layup. He was fouled on the play and hit the free throw. Howard finger rolled a layup and Hardwick's block was picked up by Williams, who threw a long pass to the streaking Davis for the layup. Williams closed out the game with a free throw, making the final score 76-64.

"Tonight, we gave a solid effort," Ford said. "Fred Howard had one of his best games, he really played well for us. Jared proved tonight that he's one of the best players in the league; I think he is the best player in the league. He's certainly playing like it. Belson gave us some strong minutes that we really needed. He played well defensively and did a great job under the boards."

On a rare Saturday night performance, the Skippers and Abington made up a game previously postponed due to snow. Following the JV game, the varsity saw Jamie Buick and Pat Hurley each score 19, and Andy Hamilton chip in 12. Hurley calmly sank two free throws with five seconds left to give the Skippers the win. The game began when Davis knocked down a three-pointer and Hardwick picked up two points with a runner. After several buckets by Bishop and Hardwick, Howard's free throw made it 12-9 and Hardwick tacked on three more the old-fashioned way. Bishop's two free throws and a Quintin three gave the Skippers a 20-17 lead with 5:30 to go in the half. Bishop snaked another rebound and picked up two more with another basket. Hardwick then went on a spurt, scoring on a vicious slam dunk and then picked up a few more points, including a dramatic buzzer-beater from 30 feet.

Bishop dished to Davis, who hit a layup to begin the second half. Bishop then sank two from the charity stripe and Hardwick hit a layup to make it 37-31 in the Skippers' favor. Quintin had a nice move in the lane that got him a bucket. Davis made a rush for the basket, going strong and using some nifty ball-handling to avoid defenders. Hardwick hit a layup and the resulting free throw. Kilroy stood his ground and took a charge, getting the Skippers the ball and firing up the squad.

Howard showed a little flash, squeaking by all five Abington defenders, and finishing his coast-to-coast run with a nifty layup. Howard then dished to Hardwick for two and Williams got on the board with a strong low-post move and nice finishing touch. Hardwick reeled off six straight points and added a finger roll after Howard nailed a free throw. Howard hit two more from the line to make it 63-47. Davis popped in two more foul shots and Belson tore down a rebound to keep Abington from scoring again. The game ended after a hustling Grant Emde, speeding from one end of the court to the other, made a diving save and somehow passed the ball to Davis, who clinched the win with a layup.

Hardwick was pleased with his team's performance and looked forward to playing Scituate. "We played very well," Hardwick said. "I think we stepped it up tonight. I think we're ready to go against Scituate, we've got the momentum. We've improved every game since the Carver game and now we're ready to face Scituate again." Bishop was also pleased, noting that he thought the team had found itself an identity and adding that "now it's time for Scituate to find us."

Ford said that his team had done a lot of "growing up during the game. But, we regrouped at half-time, decided to come out and play like a team and we did; played great team basketball, executed very well. Now, after this win tonight, we've set ourselves up and we'll go out there on Tuesday night with the league title on the line."

Cohasset did face Scituate on Tuesday night, but didn't come out of the contest as well as they had hoped. Despite a gallant effort by Bishop, the Sailors defeated the Skippers, 68-48, a loss which dropped the Skippers to 10-4. Scituate's Sailors were led by senior Chris Brown, who tossed in 18 points for the visitors.

After going down 4-0, Cohasset got on the board when Howard banked a layup in heavy traffic. Hardwick had a nice dunk which knotted the score at four. Bishop picked up four points with a nice left-handed layup and a jumper, which pushed the Skippers out in front, 10-8. Hardwick made a nice move from the right block for a basket and Davis knocked down a three of his own. Bishop's offensive putback made the score 22-17, the Skippers' largest lead. But a 20-3 run by Scituate, despite good defense from Kilroy and a nice block by Bishop, put the Sailors up 37-25 at halftime. Hardwick picked up his third foul on a dubious charging call, and started the second half in serious foul trouble.

Yet, the Skippers came out swinging. Hardwick hit a layup and Bishop added one of his own with a strong move to the hoop. But Scituate proved to be too strong and they were ahead 41-29 until Bishop knocked down a foul shot. Howard made a nice play, following his own shot and hitting a layup over the outstretched hands of three Scituate defenders. Howard hit Hardwick for two layups and Hardwick made a nice steal of an inbounds pass for another layup.

Howard sank a lefty layup despite getting hacked. Hardwick then hit an off-balanced runner from the right side for two. Bishop nailed a free throw and Howard hit two, making it 58-45. Quintin's quick hands got him a steal, which resulted in a Bishop free throw. Quintin scored the Skippers' final points of the game by hitting a pull-up jumper. Heroic efforts by Belson, Emde and Justin McNamara couldn't salvage the game for the Skippers. Belson hustled for a few rebounds and Lutz Grunwald just missed sinking a three from the wing.

Belson was disappointed with the loss, but vowed revenge.

"Tonight we had a tough game," he said. "They didn't want it anymore than we did, but they outplayed us. However, come the tournament, it'll be tougher for them."

Ford praised Scituate for its excellent play. "Scituate proved that they were champions tonight," he said. "They outplayed us in every aspect of the game and did what had to be done to win the game."

Cohasset will trek to Abington on Friday to face the Green Wave for the second time in less than a week. Heading into the game with a 10-4 record, the Skippers are hoping to notch another one in the win column.

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept late registrations for Blue Hills ski lessons for youngsters ages seven and over at the recreation office, town hall.

John Carr, a former president of the Cohasset Youth Baseball Association who will be coaching the team, said on Tuesday that he planned to talk with Hull baseball coach Mike O'Donnell later that afternoon to get a bead on prospective players.

Carr will also be speaking with Cohasset coach Ron Ford and Scituate High Athletic Director Leo Liatsos.

"We're looking for input from the varsity coaches from Cohasset, Scituate and Hull," he said.

Carr said the players who do make the team will not be riding the bench the entire season but see ample playing time.

"Of the 18 kids who make that team," Carr said, "all of them are going to play."

Carr will be looking for a seven- to eight-man pitching staff and intends to concentrate on improving the players' fundamentals and the mental aspect of the game. Baserunning and intelligent hitting will be priorities with Carr.

"We're stepping up in terms of intensity and commitment," he said. "We're going to try to put together the best team we can. We want them thinking instead of just going out there and throwing the ball."

Carr knows the team will not be an overnight success and has "realistic expectations" for the first season. Eventually, however, he would like to see the squad compete against the best teams on the South Shore.

"Braintree and Morrisette Post have good teams every year," Carr said. "We're hoping to eventually compete at that level."

Carr in no way tried to sugarcoat the effort and commitment he expected from his players.

"We're going to try to be as fundamentally sound as we can. If the kids work at it they can be as good as any team."

Carr, however, won't be asking for anything more from his players than he himself will be putting in coaching them.

"It's going to be a time commitment and sacrifice," he said, "but I love the game and sports in general.

"We'll battle. I don't care if we're down 10-1. They'll play just as hard as they did in the first inning."

Anyone interested in trying out for the team who will not have turned 19 years old by Aug. 1, should call Carr at 383-0331 or Arnold at 545-1896 immediately.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

NEARLY IDEAL INVESTMENT

QUESTION: Why has the ownership of real estate been such a good investment over the years?

ANSWER: Historically, real estate has been nearly the ideal investment. During inflation, real estate's value has increased faster than the general price rise. In times of recession, real estate has maintained a higher value than most other assets.

When we combine the growth forces of real estate with the advantages of leverage (using other people's money) and then add the incomparable tax benefits, we can readily understand why more millionaires are made in real estate than in any other endeavor.

Businesses may relocate to old Bergson's

Two Cushing Plaza tenants may relocate to a building across the street, to make way for the shopping center remodelling and the new Shaw's Supermarket on Route 3A.

Cohasset building inspector Robert Egan said Cohasset Harbor Travel and dentist Katherine McArthur may move to this building.

However, the management at Cohasset Harbor Travel and a spokeswoman at McArthur's office said Wednesday, they had not been told anything officially.

Representatives of Shaw's Supermarket could not be reached for comment.

Egan said Shaw's Supermarkets purchased the 2,000 square foot building, located next to the Autohaus car dealership, at the same time it acquired the shopping plaza and Bergson's restaurant site across the street. While it has been used as office space, the building was formerly occupied by Bergson's restaurant.

Egan said he initially was asked about the feasibility of locating the Dunkin Donuts shop at this location. The town's zoning by-laws would require a special permit application to the board of appeals for restaurant, but the use as office space would be allowed without a hearing.

Planning board chairman Alfred Moore said this is an existing retail building, and a change in tenants will not necessarily change the use of the property.

He said the number of parking spaces should be adequate, with 10 spaces required for each 1,000 square feet of building space.

Correction is noted

A police brief in the Jan. 25 Cohasset Mariner should have listed the address of the man cited following a Jan. 22 single car accident involving a telephone pole on Jerusalem Rd. as 589 Jerusalem Rd. The Mariner incorrectly reported his address as the house (in front of which the accident occurred) at 738 Jerusalem Rd.

Burglaries are reported

Police said they suspect the same individual is responsible for two recent burglaries at homes on opposite ends of Beechwood Street. The first occurred between 10:45 and 11:30 a.m., Jan. 22. The resident reported a VCR and video camera were stolen. The second burglary, in which Sega video games and Sega machine were stolen, took place around noon on Jan. 25. In both incidents, the perpetrator entered through an unlocked door.

Police said people saw a tall, white, teenaged male with light-colored hair in the vicinity. The burglaries are under investigation. Police ask residents to report anyone acting suspiciously and to remember to lock their doors even if they are going out for just a short time.

Limited power outages

Police called in a second dispatcher during Saturday night's wind storm to handle emergency calls about downed trees and electrical wires causing scattered power outages.

Eastern Edison spokeswoman Ruth Stetson said the company went into its public safety phase and sent repair trucks to area towns to be there "when the winds hit the fan." However, the winds were "sectionalized" with the highest gusts in cells. Cohasset and Scituate were not hard hit, she said.

Peak wind gusts were estimated between 45 and 65 mph, knocking down many tree limbs and even some weakened trees in the area, according to weatherman Bob Skilling of Hingham.

Tablescapes exhibit at art center

The South Shore Art Center announces the seventh annual presentation of "Tablescapes," a collection of more than 20 tablesettings by New England artists and designers inspired by a work of art or artistic period. This year, Hingham artist Susan Kilmartin will be painting a work in progress of the tablesetting designed by Specialties of Scituate.

The Tablescapes exhibition runs Feb. 6 to 11 in the Bancroft and Dillon Galleries at 119 Ripley Rd. The event is open daily from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. Tickets are $10 at the door.

Music theater to hold 'Sound of Music' auditions

Hingham Civic Music Theatre will hold auditions for "The Sound of Music" on Monday, Feb. 5 for children and Wednesday, Feb. 7, for adults at 7 p.m. in Hingham High School Auditorium.

"The Sound of Music" tells the true adventure of the world-famous Trapp Family singers, who escaped to America and finally settled in Vermont, where they continue to live.

Men and women of all shapes and sizes and vocal ranges are needed. Adults will play neighbors of Captain von Trapp, nuns, novices, postulants and contestants in the Festival Concert. The von Trapp children consist of two boys and five girls.

Auditioners will be asked to sing 16 measures of an upbeat song and 16 measures of a ballad. Neither song has to be from the show.

The play will be presented in Hingham High School Auditorium on April 19, 20 and 26 at 8 p.m. and April 21 and 28 at 2 p.m.

For further information, call Annabelle Berlenbach at 749-7254.

Override vote is Saturday

70 percent turnout predicted

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Town Clerk Marion Douglas went out on a limb this week by predicting that about 70 percent of Cohasset's 5,049 registered voters will cast ballots in Saturday's special election.

Voters will decide whether or not to hike their taxes to pay for a new elementary school and additions and repairs to the Deer Hill School.

Payment for the $13 million project — which officials say will be reimbursed 60% by the state — requires a debt exclusion Prop. 2-1/2 override.

If the ballot question authorizing the town to borrow to pay for the project passes muster with the voters, owners of the typical home valued $242,000 will see an increase of about $111 a year in their property tax bill averaged over the life of the bond issue.

The tax bill will be higher in the early years of borrowing and would gradually decline thereafter as state aid kicks in and the debt is paid off.

The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Town Hall.

Douglas couched her prediction by saying she wishes everyone would vote while at the same time showing some concern about what the weather might do to the turnout.

She said absentee voting was high which is often a barometer of voter interest.

The override is necessary because the price tag of the project cannot be absorbed within the constraints of Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the annual tax levy for municipalities at 2-1/2 percent.

Under Prop.2-1/2 rules, debt exclusion override ballot questions do not include the dollar amount because the figure cannot report the true cost of borrowing plus interest charges.

Money plowed into snow budget

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

Although it won't make the snow go away faster, state officials said Cohasset will receive assistance with its snow plowing expense.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said this week, Cohasset will receive $12,805 from a supplemental budget approved to help towns that have exhausted their snow removal budgets.

In addition, the Federal Emergency Management Agency said towns in Massachusetts are eligible for reimbursements for snow plow expenses that resulted from the blizzard on Jan. 6 & 7, and a subsequent snowstorm on January 12.

FEMA spokesman Carl Suchocki said towns can apply for up to 75 per cent reimbursements of their expenses for clearing snow from emergency routes, such as those used by

Accountants award town 'A' for money management

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset is an unusually well-run town, according to independent auditors who have examined the town's books for the past several years.

A 12-page report by the accounting firm of Tucci & Roselli states, "The town in our opinion is efficiently managed."

Tony Roselli, a principal of the Lexington firm, told selectmen Monday night that he was pleased to see that officials have corrected various problems he had cited in past reports.

In many other towns, the audits end up in drawers ignored and accountants face the same problems year after year, Roselli said.

But Cohasset has been different. "The financial results were staggering," he stated.

"You're doing a lot better," he said. "I had to search for things (to complain

The Cohasset High gymnastics team accomplished its first and foremost goal of the winter season. And along the way the Skippers turned in the greatest team performance in the school's gymnastics history.

The Skippers won its first South Shore League title two years ago, finishing in a tie with Scituate. The Sailors had a virtual lock on the league championship since 1982. Cohasset has since won the title outright the past two years.

Cohasset swept all four events and finished 1-2 in the all-around to capture its third consecutive SSL championship with a 125.7 — 111 victory over Duxbury.

The winning score broke the all-time school record (125) set by the '94-95 squad.

Tara Hettstrom turned in a strong showing, winning the bars (7.5), floor routine (8.5) and finishing second to her

Census forms mailed

The town census has been mailed to each household, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said. The local census is primarily used to maintain voting and jury lists but it also aids in school enrollment projections and public safety and senior citizens' needs, she said. The local census also establishes proof of residency, which is often needed for certain privileges, such as transfer station stickers and cemetery rights, certain veterans' benefits, and reduced tuition rates at state colleges and universities.

Dog forms were enclosed. The license are valid through Dec. 31, 1996. If you did not receive a census form, contact the town clerk's office at 383-9900. Forms are due back by Feb. 23.

Charter school money

Cohasset will receive $37,000 in state money as reimbursement for tuition the town spent sending local youngsters to the charter school, selectmen announced this week.

Clarification on billing

Last week's article on the town ambulance incorrectly reported that the town has written off $6,000 in ambulance bills because they were duplicate bills.

According to Jane Henderson, who handles ambulance billing, the contract between the hospital and the town allows the hospital to take a 20 percent share of the Medicare transportation cost paid the town.

Most of the accounts included in the $6,000 fall in that category, Henderson told selectmen in a recent memo.

Primary voter registration

The last day to register to vote for the March 5 presidential primary is Wed., Feb. 14, when the town clerk's office will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Registration forms are also available from the Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. This form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

Louis Bailey thanked

With DPW crews working hard to keep ahead of all the snow this winter, the volunteer plowing done by resident Louis Bailey, has been greatly appreciated.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said during Monday night's selectmen's meeting that Bailey should be publicly commended for helping the town out.

Memorial tree planted

Selectmen Monday night agreed to allow a Quincy family to plant a tree in town in memory of Scott Sandblom who grew up in Cohasset, but passed away suddenly in California last fall.

The location of the tree has yet to be decided upon.

Sandblom "was a wonderful young man with many ties to the town," said selectman Jane Goedecke.

Water fees skyrocket

The 300 households in the Forest St., Jerusalem Road, area, north to Hull St., which receive water from the American Water Co. in Hingham face a 164 percent increase in fees, selectmen reported Monday.

Selectmen deplored the size of the increase and suggested that eventually the affected residents could be tied in to the town's water supply instead.

Winter reminder is offered

The Cohasset Highway Department reminds all residents that it does not have the funding or the manpower to open up driveways that have been plowed in by snow plows while clearing the roads.

It is suggested that residents wait until the roads are cleared before shoveling the ends of their driveways, whenever possible. The Highway Department regrets any inconvenience this might cause.

Landfill expansion hearings set

Site assignment hearings by the Board of Health on the proposed 27.5-acre "Area V" expansion of Cohasset Heights landfill have been scheduled. Hearings are held on either Tuesdays or Thursdays from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. at either Cohasset Town Hall or the Second Congregational Church. Meetings are as follows:

Feb. 8, Second Congregational: Traffic & Hingham impacts; Feb. 13, Town Hall: Wetlands, Whitney Woods impacts, Weir River ACEC, wildlife; Feb. 15, Town Hall: Wetlands, Whitney Woods impacts, Weir River ACEC, wildlife; Feb. 20-22: No hearings; Feb. 27, Town Hall: Water supply protection issues; Feb. 29, Town Hall: Water supply protection issues; March 2 (place and time to be determined): Statements of individuals who on Jan. 23 requested to speak; March 5, Second Congregational: Need for facility and recycling issues; March 7, Second Congregational: Closing statements by parties.

It should be noted that the meetings are not public hearings. The only people allowed to speak are the parties, who may present evidence for the record through expert and lay witnesses. Parties who have been accepted for the hearings are: Cohasset Heights; Town of Cohasset (Board of Selectmen, Conservation Commission and Water Commission), represented by environmental attorney Ken Kimmell; Town of Hingham (Board of Health and Conservation Commission); Trustees of Reservations and a consolidation of the Ten-Citizen Groups, represented by Kevin O'Donnell, John McNabb, Jim Kinch and David McMorris.

The Board of Health, since it is now in a quasi-judicial role, is taking no advocacy role in the proceedings. On March 2, Cohasset and Hingham residents who petitioned to participate in the hearings will be allowed to speak.

The hearings will be broadcast live on Cohasset Cable Channel 3.

Buttonwood readies for temporary move in plaza

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

Renovations of Cushing Plaza on Route 3A are underway, with the remaining tenants relocating their businesses in preparation for the new Shaw's Supermarket that is planned for the property.

Buttonwood Books & Toys owner Betsy Detwiler said her business will move within the month to a store next to Walgreens. She expects business as usual following the move and during the shopping center construction.

"We're a destination store for a lot of people," she said, explaining her confidence that customers will follow them to the new, temporary location. She noted that her sales for this past Christmas and her after-Christmas book sale did not suffer while the shopping center is being renovated.

To alert her customers to the move, Detwiler said flyers were distributed at the counter, with a map showing where the store will be. She expects to occupy the temporary store at least through the Christmas shopping season.

With good visibility from Route 3A and ample parking immediately in front of the store, she's very pleased with the location, and noted that Shaw's management has been very cooperative throughout this process.

"They've been wonderful," Detwiler said. "They've been responsive to our needs and they're always accessible."

As part of construction of the new Shaw's Supermarket, the block of buildings where the Buttonwood Books is presently located will be demolished. From plans Shaw's has shared with the businesses, Detwiler said the new supermarket will be built at the rear of the property, facing Route 3A. The new Buttonwood Shop will be located to the left of the supermarket; a new Walgreens will occupy a store to the right of the supermarket. The Cohasset Consignment shop with eventually open its store to the left of Buttonwood Books.

Last summer, the Consignment Shop was one of the first shops to be temporarily relocated within Cushing Plaza.

But an actual construction date for the new building has not been determined at this time, delayed due to a neighbor's appeal of the special permit Shaw's received from the board of appeals.

Shaw's spokesman Bernard Rogan said the company is anxious to begin construction of the new supermarket in Cohasset, but he does not know how close the parties are to resolution of the appeal.

He would not comment on plans to relocate two Cushing Plaza businesses to a building Shaw's owns across Route 3A.

Last week, building inspector Robert Egan said he has had inquiries about a local dentist and a travel agent moving to the building next to Autohaus, formerly occupied by Bergson's Restaurant.

Rogan did say that these two businesses moving to the old Bergson's property, "sounds like a logical step," but would not elaborate.

Once construction begins, the new supermarket is likely to be open six to seven months later.

"We're anxious to have it move along," Rogan said. "It's costly to the town and an inconvenience to the customers."

Edison efforts praised

Eastern Edison Co. officials will be invited to attend an upcoming selectmen's meeting and will be told that the town appreciates the improved service from the company.

Last summer's extensive tree pruning effort has reduced the number of branches along power lines which has helped the situation this winter.

"Good work has been accomplished," said selectman Peter Pratt. "They moved the whole issue forward dramatically."

In the past Cohasset officials have been less than pleased with the performance of Eastern Edison Co. during storms, charging that the town was frequently left without power days longer than other communities.

Accountants award town 'A' for money management about.) This was a difficult letter to write."

The report, which covered the 1995 fiscal year, which ended last July 30, specifically cites several areas of financial health:

• the $1.2 million in the general fund "is considered healthy by the bond rating bureaus, given the size and budget," of the town;

• the water department's $103,000 surplus was called "a big turn around," considering the department had a $400,000 deficit a couple of years ago;

• a tax collection rate of 98 percent by June 30, which is "very healthy," and favorably contrast with other towns the firm audits, which average 3.7 percent of taxes uncollected;

• Cohasset's asset to liability ratio is 2.1 to 1, which is one of the highest of the 16 municipalities audited by the firm;

• the town's $821,000 in recent contributions to the retirement trust fund represents 13 percent of that unfunded liability and is "healthy;"

• accounting of police special details has caused problems in other towns, but in Cohasset the system is now computerized.

Roselli did say that the $1.3 million estimated cost of capping the town dump and an additional $20,000 per year in post closure costs should have been listed as liabilities.

The board of health has not been audited separately and should be reviewed in the future, the auditor said.

Cohasset's bond rating is A1, below AA.

Because Roselli is familiar with the town, the report cost less than in past years, some $8,000.

Selectmen were delighted with the report and praised town accountant Michael Buckley and treasurer/collector Elizabeth Ripley.

In other business, selectmen awarded Tucci & Ross an additional audit of the treasurer/collector's department.

The audit's cost will not exceed $2,000.

Ripley explained that since she is leaving Feb. 16, (see related story) state law requires an audit to verify the status of the various accounts for the incoming treasurer/collector.

Wastewater treatment facility not required at new school site

The Cohasset School Facilities Committee and the Cohasset School Committee conducted a further investigation of the need for a new wastewater treatment facility to be built on the site of the new Pre-K-3 elementary school.

As a result of a study prepared by Judith Nitsch Engineering, Inc., the site engineer for the new school study, and review of the State Environmental Code – Title 5, and contact with the Cohasset Board of Health and the Department of Environmental Protection's Southeast and Northeast Regional Offices, it was concluded that the $525,000 wastewater treatment facility will not be necessary to build on the new school site. The elimination of the treatment facility reduces the overall cost of the $13.9 million school building program. It will also reduce the town's $5.6 million share of this new school project.

For further information, call Robert Beggan, Chairman of the Cohasset Schools Facilities Committee, or Stephen Hart, Superintendent of Schools in Cohasset, at 617-383-6111.

Treasurer/collector organization plan approved by selectmen

Until a new treasurer/collector takes office, assistant treasurer Sally Lincoln and assistant collector Linda Litchfield will split the job.

The change starts Feb. 16, when treasurer/collector Elizabeth Ripley departs for a similar position in Marshfield, and will last until the April 6 election.

Selectmen approved the policy Monday night, after Ripley praised her assistants, saying that each could concentrate on the areas of expertise while treasurer/collector's post is vacant.

"They both do their jobs very well," she said.

In addition, Ripley will return to help out on Thursday nights to answer questions and probably take care of accounts payable, including the town payroll.

Ripley also said that she will handle the trust fund transfers, making short-term investments, so the money can earn interest while the position is vacant.

Selectmen plan to make the position an appointed one, which may not require approval by the state legislature if no candidate runs for the post.

Local television personality Wigmore Pierson has taken out nomination papers for the April election, however.

ambulances to reach regional hospitals.

Cohasset town administrator Gregory Doyon said Cohasset will apply for the funds, but he had not seen the application form as of Monday.

So far this winter, Cohasset has spent almost $100,000, excluding the costs for the recent weekend snow. This amount is $55,000 beyond the original appropriation of $45,000.

Noise pollution threat discounted by expert

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

While the outside frigid air provided a deafening silence to an early February evening, inside Cohasset's Second Congregational Church the topic of noise levels warmed the Feb. 1 session of the Board of Health's hearings on the proposed 27.5 acre Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) expansion.

Wrapping up the second of an expected six weeks of hearings, the board heard further testimony from CHL's engineering consultant, Raymond Quinn, and acoustical expert David Keast.

Speaking to the subject of potential nuisances, Quinn outlined five areas CHL has designated, as well as solutions which the landfill would take to control these situations.

The areas are: dust, litter, vectors (vermin), bird hazards to air traffic and the Materials Processing Operation (MPO).

Quinn stated dust would be controlled by watering down debris on a needed basis and because the landfill would accept only construction and demolition debris, not trash or solid waste, litter would pose no problem in the new facility. Consequently, vectors would have no food sources to feed off, thereby eliminating their presence. The application of a daily cover to landfill debris would also be added. As the current landfill offers no hazard to air traffic, Quinn basically rendered this point moot. The MPO, the recycling arm of an expanded landfill, would be policed daily by employees assigned to the facility.

Landfill hearings continue

Keast, a self-employed acoustical consultant, then detailed his findings on potential noise problems. A graduate of MIT, with more than 40 years in the acoustics field, he stated his findings, revised for these expansion hearings, were from an original study CHL's engineering firm (SAIC) had commissioned from him in 1992.

His conclusion was that noise from an expanded landfill would not have an adverse impact on area residents. In fact, he said, vehicle traffic at peak volume hours along adjacent Route 3A generate more noise than would machinery operating in the MPO of the landfill.

Under questioning from Kenneth Kimmell, counsel for the town of Cohasset, Keast did say that at certain locations noise would exceed acceptable Department of Environmental Protection levels but "that would be at the (landfill) property line."

He further stated that seasonal conditions would also play a part in noise or lack thereof. Winter's crisp conditions tend to amplify sounds while the summer season, with lush foliage and softer ground, tends to muffle sounds.

When asked to describe the type of noise an MPO rock crusher would make, Keast described it "like a giant eating Doritos."

Attorney for the Board of Health, Michael Leon, asked whether Keast knew of any hazards for area wildlife due to increased noise.

"I'm not aware of any guidelines for wildlife," he said, adding to Leon's follow-up question if he (Keast) was a wildlife noise expert, "No, and there aren't any. I'm as good as anybody you'll get."

Leon then produced his own noise expert. Marc Wallace, an environmental scientist from the firm of Camp, Dresser & McKee, Inc., refuted Keast's testimo[illegible] stating that landfill noise levels would be much greater in his opinion.

Though under biting cross-examination from CHL attorney Anton Moehrke, Wallace admitted he had less than a quarter of Keast's working experience and that his (Wallace's) only viewing of the landfill had been on his drive past the site en route to the hearing.

Moehrke reasoned this "little more than a drive-by observation, in the dark, with rolled-up windows" was far from adequate for an effective study on the subject.

When pressed if, in his opinion, the MPO operation would pose any significant dangers to the safety of residents or the environment, Wallace was subdued.

"I can't say," he stated.

On a housekeeping matter, Hearing Officer John Shea stated that the 267 individuals who had petitioned to participate in the hearing proceedings "propose a unique problem for us."

Citing a potential 22-hour Saturday, March 2, session for individuals to speak their concerns, Shea asked anti-expansion advocates to seek a "creative solution" to alleviate this possibility. He requested suggestions be submitted to him prior to the beginning of the Feb. 13 hearing session.

Landscaping is focus of February 6 session

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

The ability to see as well as the potential to smell a landfill dominated the Board of Health site assignment hearings Tuesday, Feb. 6, on the proposed 27.5 acre expansion to the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

In the longest session to date, nearly four hours, board members heard testimony from experts on what an expanded landfill might look like at its closure (approximately five to six years) and what the potential for hazardous/dangerous gasses might be at that same time.

Local architect Keith Moskow, testifying on behalf of the Consolidated 10-Citizen Groups, stated that it was his opinion CHL's landscape renditions of an expanded landfill were not true to scale.

Speaking to the 200-foot mounds of covered construction and demolition debris which would eventually be CHL's legacy, Moskow stated that they would be "overscaled for the environment."

"The shape does not represent a true natural shape. The view will be aesthetically unpleasing to the residents of Cohasset," he said, adding, "It will absolutely be visible to those who use Route 3A."

As to Moskow's drawings of a future landfill, CHL attorney Anton Moehrke challenged the perception of a visual eyesore. Noting that his (Moskow's) drawings depicted a landfill still in operation and not a closed facility, Moehrke called Moskow's rendition into question.

Moehrke stated the grass and natural vegetation covering which CHL's engineers have designed for the landfill at the time of its closure would be beneficially appealing to the surrounding area.

At various points the cross-examination grew a bit testy. Moehrke took exception to Moskow's testimony as an expert witness, as well as being on the list of 267 individuals who have petitioned to participate in the hearings.

"You are opposed to this proposal for a whole bunch of different reasons," Moehrke bluntly stated.

"Do you have any special insider knowledge to look at the picture you've drawn and say it is aesthetically unappealing? Are you a Registered Landscape Architect?" Moehrke demanded.

"No, I'm not," Moskow replied.

Undaunted, Moskow concluded it was his opinion that the end result would not be a visual contribution to the town of Cohasset.

Testifying for Cohasset Heights was landfill gas management specialist Frederick Rice. A self-employed consultant who has worked for the past 22 years in the field of collection and dispersal of landfill gasses, Rice offered testimony on the possibility of gasses escaping from the landfill.

Saying that on review of existing opinions gathered from within documents provided him by Cohasset Heights, he foresaw no significant danger to the surrounding area from escaping landfill gasses. Rice based his testimony on the relatively small scale of CHL's proposed expansion, as well as the absence of any municipal solid waste in the new area. These two factors, he reasoned, would generate gas emissions in only a very limited capacity.

Though under cross-examination Rice admitted that he had not undertaken a specific study of potential gas hazards at the landfill, in fact his only site inspection had been on the previous day.

Still, when asked by Board of Health attorney Michael Leon if the landfill would pose any type of threat to the public health, Rice responded that it would not.

When pressed as to how he could be so sure of this point, Rice stated that, once it was installed and properly running, an enclosed burn-off flare would eliminate 99 percent of all potential gas hazards and subsequent odors.

Rice further detailed his comprehensive knowledge of landfill gas techniques and standards, but under questioning from citizen group representative attorney Kevin O'Donnell admitted there were no hard figures for his totals and that presented percentage estimates were little more than guesses based on his years of experience.

Greenbush train advisers have identity crisis

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

After more than a decade of meetings, the Greenbush train advisory committee is nevertheless again seeking to define its role.

During a recent meeting at Cohasset Town Hall, Terry Fancher, chairman of the Citizen's Advisory Committee, agreed to write secretary of environmental affairs Trudy Coxe, seeking clarification of the group's role.

Fancher, and other committee members who favor restoration of rail service to Greenbush, maintain that the committee's role is to review and comment on the environmental report made by the MBTA.

"Our job is to see whether the T has done its job or not," said Fancher, who is also general manager of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

He read from a letter from Coxe stating that she will not take a position on the train.

In particular, the committee expects to consider whether specific local situations, such as grade crossings or proximity to wetlands and buildings needs further attention from the T.

However, the appointment of three new members to the CAC could change the scope of the committee, as anti-train activists seek to keep alternatives to the train, such as expanded bus or boat service to Boston, in the public eye.

Ilana Marks of Scituate, Brian Noble of Hingham and Kevin Dasey of Braintree were recently named by Coxe to serve on the CAC.

Also a candidate for Scituate selectman, Marks has been a leader of the anti-train movement.

During the meeting she repeatedly stated that other alternatives should be considered.

She criticized an MBTA study which listed nine transportation alternatives, and rejected expanded bus and boat service because projected ridership would be too low to justify their cost.

"We're only looking at the train, we should be looking at the alternatives," said Marks, who was periodically applauded by some 75 people in the room.

Marks also claimed that Coxe had also criticized the MBTA report for making conclusions based on insufficient data.

She said that was evidence that more information was needed before the $215 million Greenbush rail project is approved.

However, some committee members pointed out that Gov. William Weld announced before Christmas that he would support the rail service.

Alexander Macmillian of Hingham asked whether legislation creating a private commuter rail authority would change the financing of the project.

"Under current law there will be no cost associated with having a train in your communities," he said. "We would be interested in knowing what those costs are."

Other speakers said they feared that the communities through which the train will run - Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate - will wind up paying a disproportionate share of the costs.

Marks also asked about the governor's plan to turn the MBTA into a private agency.

Martha Gjesteby of Cohasset stated that privatizing the T is very speculative. She pointed out that the legislature is reportedly "cool" to the governor's reorganization plan.

Joseph Connor of the MBTA called any potential reorganization speculative and said the committee could not base its work upon uncertainties.

Consultant Barry Faulkner stated that the existing commuter railroads in other Boston suburbs are already run by private companies.

Several committee members did not want to discuss the finances.

Jean Oulette said the group should concentrate on local mitigation to the train. "That's where we're the strongest."

Duxbury's Richard Prone urged that the meeting follow its agenda.

However, Deborah Cook of Cohasset felt the finances were important.

"We supported on the train on the economic aspects," she said. "We absolutely have to have the financial information."

There was also considerable discussion about the proposed train yard at the end of the line at Greenbush.

Kathy Donohue of Scituate, who does not live far from the location, presented photographs showing the area slated for the train yard is often under water.

She said the site is inappropriate because it is in an environmentally sensitive wetlands area, subject to regular flooding and is near residential areas.

Donohue said she showed Coxe photos of the site last fall, and that the environmental secretary said, "Why are they putting it there?"

Connor and Faulkner said that the entire site is not considered a wetland.

Connor also passed out a tentative schedule, showing that the MBTA plans to send letters to selectmen in affected towns asking them to designate a contact person on train issues.

By early March, the MBTA hopes to meet with selectmen in the five Greenbush towns.

A report on local mitigation steps should be ready by July, with a final environmental impact report likely by Labor Day. The public comment on the report will end in early December.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Let's schedule a grandparents parade this spring!

Jan. 11 was a special day for the Nedrow family — that's when Emily Ruth Zimmermann was born! Emily weighed eight pounds, 3 ounces and was 19-1/2-inches long. She is the pretty daughter of David and Jill (Nedrow) Zimmermann, who are living in Rochester, N.Y. Hopefully we will all get to see Emily when she comes to visit her grandparents, Ruth and Joe Nedrow. All of us Cohasset grandparents should get together and have a grandchild parade when spring finally gets here. We could all parade strollers around the duck pond!

Tara Volungis, a first-year law student at the University of Florida in Gainesville, received the Book Award (highest grade) in her first year writing class and has been invited to write for "The Journal of Law and Public Policy." Tara, daughter of Judy and Dan Volungis of Forest Avenue, is a 1990 graduate of Cohasset High School and a 1993 graduate of Boston University.

Congratulations to Dean Volungis, who made the dean's list for the first semester at Boston University where he is majoring in computer engineering. Dean also was recognize for his outstanding academic performance on the basis of his Advanced Placement achievement exams, earning the designation of Advanced Placement Scholar with Distinction. The award is granted to students who achieve grades of 3 or higher on at least five full-year AP examinations and whose average AP exam score is at least a 3.5.

You can congratulate Dean in person on Feb. 16, when Fun in the Kitchen, featuring Dean, Kevin O'Donnell and Mike Equi will perform a concert at Cohasset High School auditorium. There will be five local bands serving up a mixture of funk, punk, industrial, dance and hard core music. The cost is $5 at the door.

Megan Chastain, a pupil at Deer Hill, is performing as an orphan girl in Boston Ballet's production of 'Tales of the Arabian Nights' through Feb. 11 at the Wang Center. Megan, who has always had a love of dance and has performed with the Nutcracker for three years, started ballet training in Atlanta and has been a student at Boston Ballet school in Norwell for four years.

Patricia Barbara Bigham could be part of the procession! She was born Jan. 12 to proud parents Peggy Litchfield and Carl Bigham. She joins big brother Jamie, who is nine years old. Patricia's grandfather, Harold Litchfield, will now have both snowstorms and crying to keep him awake at night!

March 2 is the date spring comes to bloom at Second Congregational Church with a display of more than 50 quilts and a luncheon featuring a choice of shrimp, ham or vegetable souffle, salad, rolls and an elaborate homemade dessert cart. The hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and the cost is $8.

The group is still accepting quilts for display. (Call Carol Sandblom at 383-1812 or the church office at 383-0345.) A limited number of tickets are available by calling the church office.

This is the third annual Quilt Show and Luncheon. Everyone knows how great it is, so reserve your ticket now.

Support the new school

You've let the upkeep to your house slide. Now, the roof leaks, the paint is peeling, appliances are on the blink and when the cold weather hits, you hope the furnace will hold out.

There's no question, the time has come for some major, expensive repairs.

Just like the owners of that old house — Cohasset residents are faced with paying for several large projects at once. Projects that have been delayed so long that now there isn't any choice.

The town is under a court order to solve its sewer woes, its current highway garage is so rickety it may not last under the new one is constructed, and it's too late to take back the athletic field, which is built.

There's no question the Osgood School needs to be replaced. It's inadequate and outdated.

Saturday, voters will be asked to dig into their pockets and support borrowing upwards of $13 million for the new elementary school.

With current state reimbursements, the town's share of the project is about $5.5 million.

The argument we hear most often against the new elementary school is timing. There's no doubt paying for the new school on top of the other projects, which the town is obligated to, will be painful.

To some, the pocketbook issue is enough to earn a 'no' vote. And while we are sensitive to the legitimate fear that many residents have about their tax bills rising — the fact is, a new school is needed and putting it off won't make it any cheaper.

The tax rate is going up with or without the new school.

And we can assure you that potential Cohasset home buyers will be turned off far more quickly by inadequate and deteriorating school buildings than higher property taxes.

While the new school proposal appears to have come up quickly — we are confident that the school facilities study committee did its homework. Yes, it would have been nice for the taxpayers to have more time to digest the project, but the committee apparently realized quickly that the situation has reached the critical stage.

Cohasset Common is so pristine that movies are filmed there.

Don't let the schools reveal an ugly side to this lovely town. The Osgood School is in appalling condition.

It's not now or never to replace Osgood. It's now or later.

So bite the bullet, Cohasset and make the right choice Saturday. With the state's share, this may be the best deal you're going to get.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

School shouldn't be delayed

To the Editor:

Like the child who won't eat his vegetables unless his mother makes him, over the years this town has shown its unwillingness to spend money for the things that it needs to stay healthy unless the state delivers a mandate, or it's shamed into action.

Well, the state has mandated that Osgood School "is not a feasible educational facility" and our fire department has determined that the state of its condition is "lethal." Money will have to be spent, and it will be a burden (at least in the first few years of the loan) felt by almost everyone in Cohasset; a burden the citizens have chosen to put off for years so that they could continue to enjoy unusually low property tax rates.

The letters to the editor I've read against the upcoming override have had one thing in common; all agree that Osgood needs to be replaced. An independent committee of nine citizens, representing every varied perspective in Cohasset, examined many options which we were all able to consider at open meetings. They, too, saw the need and made their recommendation for a new school. In addition, they demonstrated the kind of intelligent foresight that sees a need to make upgrades at Deer Hill in order to maintain the building and accommodate changing educational and student population needs that will be felt as soon as next year.

Neither of these are needs that can be delayed, or met piecemeal. To do so will only cost us more overrides, more money, and put more "temporary" classroom trailers in the Osgood and Deer Hill parking lots. In fact, we'll have a lot less to show for those greater expenditures because we won't get the state's 60 percent reimbursement.

Rather than welcoming a new trailer park to our bucolic town, we have the opportunity to correct the mistakes of the past and make a wise investment in our fiscal future and the future of our children. They don't understand that vegetables are good for you, but we should. Please vote "YES."

What was not disclosed at town meeting

To the Editor:

FACTS

1. New school driven by a 40 percent cost and the state is supposedly paying 60 percent. Nothing in Article II said the school committee has to even apply for state funding. Once we vote an override the town will be totally responsible for the entire $25,000,000 cost of the project.

2. The Town of Cohasset's debt payments will more than quadruple in two years, from $572,952 in 1996 to $2,005,533 in 1998 per year. Debt service is the principle and interest the town pays for completed projects. The average Cohasset taxpayer will see an additional $425 per year added to his tax bill for five to 10 years until the state starts paying its share for the new school.

3. Before town meeting, the school committee, advisory board, and town accountant all agreed to use 6.1 percent interest on figuring the cost of the school. At town meeting the school group went against the professional advise and used 5.6 percent interest rate to make the project appear less costly to the taxpayer.

4. Architects' fees for the new school are $850,000 to $1,100,000 for the project. How can they be impartial?

5. The architects and engineers will have less than three months to do the site studies and development of plans for a $14,000,000 school. This small window leaves no opportunity for impute from the taxpayer.

6. The town's cost to operate our schools is approximately $8,000,000 or 53 percent of our operating budget in 1996. In 1998 it could be approximately 55 percent, or approximately $9,600,000.

7. The actual cost of the new school to the taxpayer over 20 years will be approximately $25,000,000 not $14,000,000 as you have been told. Forty percent of this cost will come from your real estate taxes and 60 percent from your income taxes when and if the state has the money.

8. Construction costs and interest costs are very important to a large project like a new school but the ability to pay by all members of the town is much more important.

9. If the school supporters could wait and develop a new school design we all can live with and fit the project into the town budget when we pay off the town hall, fire station, high school, science labs, school classrooms, transfer station, ambulance, and two other school projects in a little over four years from now, the whole town would support the new school. And the net effect of the cost would only increase the tax rate approximately $00.20 per $1,000.

10. As our tax rate approaches $20 per $1,000, new potential home buyers will not be looking at our new school, they will be looking elsewhere thus causing the value of your homes to go down and very difficult to sell.

New school is long overdue

To the Editor:

Even though we no longer have children enrolled in the Cohasset public schools, we wish to endorse the construction of a new elementary school and the renovations of the Deer Hill School. In our opinion, this has been a much-delayed project which requires immediate attention.

In 1972 we were members of the School Facilities Committee which attempted, to quote from the 1972 Town Report, "to solve the space problem at the elementary level...a space problem which involves not only enrollment projections, but also the need to accommodate modern educational methods." Our committee recommended renovations and additions to the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools at a cost of $1.4 million. The committee's recommendation did not receive the required two-thirds vote at Town Meeting.

Twenty-five years have passed, educational space requirements make existing school space even less appropriate, and the buildings have deteriorated further. Leaving the schools as they are is not an option. The proposal before us is the most cost effective solution to the school facilities needs for the children of Cohasset, for today and for many decades ahead.

We urge all concerned citizens to support this project at the Feb. 10 override election.

No vote on override urged

To the Editor:

At the recent Cohasset Special Town Meeting, fewer than 10 percent of Cohasset's registered voters set in motion an expenditure package that, together with already committed and/or mandated tax obligations, will prove burdensome to many of our taxpayers and a real hardship for some.

Most of us are satisfied that our town officers and employees do a conscientious job in running our town – and they do. But occasionally a board, working enthusiastically and hard to solve a particular problem, fails to consider the effect of that problem in conjunction with all the other problems that simultaneously confront us; they cannot see the forest for the trees.

As was pointed out at the meeting by Roger Whitley, chairman of the advisory committee, the median assessed house (an equal number of houses above and equal below) is $242,000. At today's rate of $14.50 per $1.000, its tax bill is $3,509. The $2.6 million bond issue for playing fields, DPW garage, and the Hagerty property, to all of which we are presently committed, will add $111 to that tax bill next year. The landfill capping should add $39. The $4 million sewer project will add $43 and the $12 million sewer project will add $155. (The state's share of sewer funding differs from the rest and users will be paying betterments.) These last three outlays are mandatory.

Because the town must fund the state's agreed upon share for the school project at least through 2001, the school override will add $288 per year to fiscal 1998-2001. Together with the allowed 2-1/2 percent tax increase to cover town employee contracts and other contingencies, that present $3,509 tax bill will have increased during that five-year period to $4,564 without the school override, a 30 percent increase; with its added $288 that tax bill would become $4,852 for a total increase of well over 38 percent.

The initial publicity on the school project offered the voters a choice ranging from immediate approval of the whole package to spreading out the cost, thereby lessening an already dangerously heavy tax load. That choice was denied to us.

Despite the school people being prepared to offer several alternatives in the event the original article failed to pass, they presented the voters with a single all or nothing article – immediate acceptance of the entire package, the alternative being to deny our children a decent education.

Most of us agree that the Osgood School needs to be replaced – and soon. Would most of us agree that it was wise to shoot the works without regard for the consequences, had we been fully aware of those consequences? Might we not have opted for doing the most needed part now and the remainder when the state has begun to pay its share?

That can only be brought about by the taxpayers turning down the override Feb. 10 and bringing about a reconsideration of the issue at the Annual March Town Meeting. The stakes are high for everyone. They are especially high for people paying off a mortgage while raising a family and for people on a fixed income.

We are rightly responsible for the education of all of our town's children and we are responsible for the well-being of all of our people. It will not be easy, but surely a way can be found to spread out the tax burden to make it a little more bearable. I think we are entitled to expect that from those to whom we entrust our town's affairs, and I think we are entitled to be fully informed in advance as to what we are voting for.

Too many questions need answers

To the Editor:

The School Facilities Committee and their consultants are claiming that our town's school population will increase to 1,448 by the year 2005 and there have also been statements made that our town population will increase to 7,700 by the year 2005. Our 1994 Town Report lists our census as 7,055 and our school department lists our school population as 1,177.

What formula was used by the committee to project our town population and school population? The last time our town and school populations reached what they are projecting was in the year 1981. That means that by 2005 they feel that something will happen to our town to increase our census to what it was back in 1981. Will it be the sewer project? Will it be the train? What if our taxes increase by 40 percent (per town accountant Michael Buckley) or by a greater percentage because the state and federal governments may not be able to participate to the levels stated? The state has $9.6 billion in debt with an additional $760 million coming on the books for the "Big Dig" alone (per the Mass. Taxpayers Foundation). If the state doesn't come through with their percentage how many homes will we see for sale in our town? If the tax rate increases by the projected 40 percent how many of our fixed income neighbors will have to sell and move out? Will this cause our real estate values to increase, as the committee stated? Or will we see real estate values plummet because of the number of homes on the market and the high taxes? Can this town support $50 million to $60 million in debt from just two projects, a school and the sewer? We know we will have cost overruns with both of these projects. Look at the "Ted Williams Tunnel," some congressmen are threatening to withhold federal participation because the costs are out of control, what would we do?

The committee has not really explored or told us what the impact will be from charter schools in the area or from a voucher program, if one is adopted. What will happen to education if the level of communications change? How will that impact on teachers and students? What happens if we build a school and the population projections are not met? Our high school is underpopulated now.

According to an article in the February 1996 Reader's Digest titled "How Fair Are Our Taxes" by Rachel Wildavsky, she claims that most Americans feel that 25 percent of a family of four's total income is fair to be paid for all taxes. She shows that Americans are now paying, on average, 39 percent of total income for all taxes. We are standing on the precipice. Do we let this committee push us off into the abyss or do we turn around and say no so that we can really review what is happening and make a well informed decision instead of being forced into a quick decision with many unanswered questions?

I urge everyone to VOTE NO Feb. 10. This is the most costly project ever put forth in the town's history and we must look at all aspects of this proposal and what the impact will really be on our town when combined with current and future projects that are being contemplated.

Time is right for new school

To the Editor:

When is the right time?

The year is 1972 and the Town of Cohasset commissions an independent study of their school facilities. The study results in a recommendation to replace or completely renovate the Osgood School and to upgrade the Deer Hill School. The cost of that project would have been $1.3 million with 65 percent state reimbursement. The town voted this project down.

The year is now 1996 and again we face the same issue. Unfortunately, the Osgood has deteriorated to a degree that the state will not support any renovation and the cost of the project is now $13.9 million with 60 percent reimbursement.

The opponents to this project in 1996 say on one hand that we need more study to find a better economic solution and better assurances about state funding, while on the other hand, complain about local officials that have not managed our town's public works schedule properly. We hear politicians say that we are pushing into the future our burden of debt onto our children.

Well, the future is here! I was a fifth-grade student at Deer Hill School. Feb. 10, a "yes" vote will begin to correct the errors of the past, make the present better and ensure an adequate educational facility for our children for the next 50 years.

Water rate hike protest urged

To the Editor:

The Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities held a public hearing in Hull to allow ratepayers to discuss the 165 percent increase proposed by the Massachusetts-American Water Company.

There are approximately 220 Cohasset residences from the northern side of Forest Avenue to the Hull Street section of Cohasset who will be affected by this 165 percent increase.

This exorbitant amount is to pay for a new $39 million water treatment plant, originally expected to cost $17 million, until "a change in location of the new plant from Free Street to Main Street" increased the facility costs.

State Sen. Robert L. Hedlund attended last week's hearing and called the rate increase "overly exorbitant" and questioned the Massachusetts-American Water Company's "excessive spending." Sen. Hedlund and state Rep. Murray are drafting a letter to the DPU to oppose the rate hike.

As of Sunday, Feb. 4, I am the only Cohasset resident rate payer who contacted Rep. Murray to express my opposition to this rate hike.

If you are one of the 220 Cohasset residents who are customers of the Massachusetts-American Water Company, please call Sen. Hedlund at 617-722-1646, and/or Rep. Murray at 617-722-2400.

'Shocked' by state CHL action

To the Editor:

When I received the informative leaflet left at my door by members of S.A.F.E., I was at first stunned, followed by unbridled anger, disgust and helplessness. The CHL expansion issue dragged on so long and was so outrageous, I wrongfully thought it had been stopped in its tracks or "was being taken care of," as we would expect our elected officials to do. It is unthinkable that our water supply is threatened (where is our board of health?). But just ponder the sight of a huge pile of waste as one leaves Hingham and enters Cohasset. Also, think of potential odors and possible vermin. Will Cohasset become known as the town one holds its nose while passing through?

Lastly, if none of this horror impresses you, what of your real estate values? Who would buy a house in Cohasset? The CHL must be stopped in their expansion before a picture appears on the front page of The Boston Globe — not of a woman trapped in an elevator as happened a short while ago, but of a huge pile of waste pointing to the sky.

Blood drive help appreciated

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Red Cross, the organizers would like to express their thanks for the generous number of donors and workers who participated in the Cohasset Community Blood Drive Wednesday, Jan. 17, at the Unitarian Parish House. The Red Cross had experienced a decrease in blood donations because of storms in December and early January. In Cohasset, more than 120 individuals arrived to donate blood that day. The list contained a few students from Cohasset High School.

In addition to the donors themselves, many workers assisted with this successful drive. The roster of promoters who individually called prospective donors to schedule appointments contained Bill Adams, Mary Brennock, Vernita Bryant, Retta Dwyer, Karen Gammon, Charles Mundhenk, Carol Riley, Wayne Robbins and Jen Vacca.

Workers at the blood drive helping with administration and the canteen included Mary Brennock, Mary Davis, Polly Doggett, Tony Finnegan, Jean Higgins, Ozzie Ingraham, Lynn Layman, Patsy Leggat, Shirley Marten, Mary McCarthy, Frances O'Toole, Jeff Steele and Joan Trask.

Carol Cicciotte, school nurse at the high school, organized a number of workers as escorts, including Courtney Brown, Kate Buckley, Stefanie Hubbell, Liz Kidder and Kristen Moore who also helped out on the canteen and did some babysitting as well.

Girl Scouts Dierdre Bigley, Kristen James and Rachel McElroy from Junior Troop 4773 were organized by Mary McElroy and provided babysitting for some of the mothers and dads who donated. As always, Corinne Cahill and Al Odermatt provided tireless support and enthusiasm both in preparation and on the day of the blood drive itself. Everyone has reason to be proud of their part in this successful community event.

Citizen selection of Dr. Sceery is applauded

To the Editor:

Although there were many deserving people on your list for "Citizen of the Year," I applaud your choice of Dr. Sceery. Since I was his office nurse for 15 years and school nurse 10 years prior to that, I know firsthand about his expertise as a physician, his compassion and his generosity. It was a privilege to work for him. Our children, and now two of our grandchildren, are cared for by Dr. Sceery. We all love him and wish him only the best.

Police, fire are praised

To the Editors:

Once again we cannot praise highly enough the efficiency of both the Cohasset Police and Fire Departments.

They performed their jobs with speed and courtesy and we will never be able to thank them enough.

We hope everyone realizes the need to have an ambulance in Cohasset when it is essential to have the response to an emergency as quickly as possible.

Thanks to Deer Hill band sponsors

To the Editor:

The Deer Hill Music Parents' Association wishes to express its appreciation to this year's Deer Hill School Band sponsors.

A special thank you to the following businesses and organizations: American Legion Post #118, Bank of Boston, Cohasset Permanent Firefighters Local 2804, Cohasset Police Association, Inc., Goodwin Graphics, Inc., and Wilbur's Ice Cream.

The donations contributed by these organizations will be used to purchase 90 new T-shirts for the fifth- and sixth-grade band members, which will be worn in the upcoming baseball and Memorial Day parades in Cohasset.

So, when you make a deposit at Bank of Boston, or see a Cohasset Firefighter, Cohasset Police Officer, or a Veteran, see Ron Goodwin around town, or stop by Wilbur's for your favorite cone, don't forget to thank all of these generous and thoughtful people.

Established in 1994, the Deer Hill Music Parents' Association has a membership of more than 100 members and provides support to the band and chorus directors and programs of the Deer Hill School.

Thanks for help finding Bubba

To the Editor:

The day before Thanksgiving our year-old Chow, Bubba, broke his collar near the Cohasset golf course and ran into the woods. We asked for help to find him through this newspaper and with flyers left on countless doorsteps in Cohasset and Hingham.

The good news is, on the Friday before Christmas, due largely to the efforts of Christine from Cohasset Kennels and my brother Bill from Vermont, Bubba was found in good shape in the woods in Cohasset and has been returned to us.

During the month he was gone, we received help and support from neighbors and friends, from dog owners, from animal control people in Cohasset and Scituate, and from many, many people who live or work here. We'd like to thank you all for giving us the best Christmas present possible.

Landfill contracts are awarded

As the battle over the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill, continues, selectmen this week awarded two more contracts for engineering studies to press the town's case.

McDonough & Scully, a traffic engineering firm, has been awarded a contract of between $4,500 and $6,000 to study the traffic impact of the expansion.

The money will come out of the budget already set aside for Camp Dresser & McKee, the main engineering firm representing the town's interests.

Generosity is truly appreciated

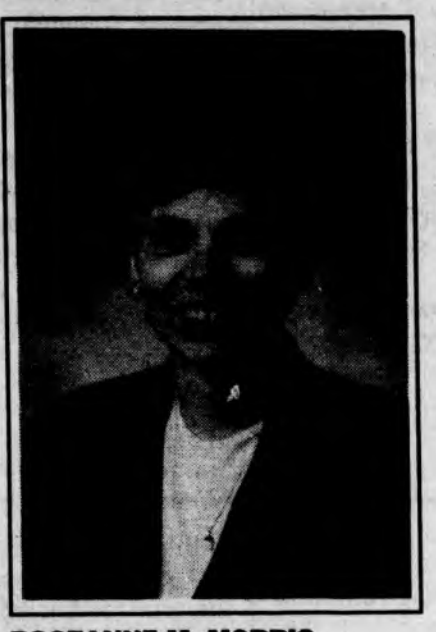
McMorris announces candidacy for selectman

Roseanne "Ronnie" McMorris announced that she is a candidate for the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. McMorris is the mother of four school-age children and has served on the Parent School Organization (PSO) Executive Board in fundraising and community relations. She currently serves on the Conservation Commission and is its past chairman.

"My priority on the Board of Selectmen will be a planned approach to policy as well as financial matters. Given the town's fiscal constraints, it is necessary to prioritize needs and phase in improvements. Taxpayers deserve this degree of security and fiscal responsibility."

She also stated, "This is a time when our community is facing major challenges. I see a greater role for the selectmen in coordinating the expertise of the town's boards and committees. By focusing on the overall picture, we can manage money and achieve goals more effectively."



ROSEANNE McMORRIS

"While on the Conservation Commission," McMorris said, "my priority has been respect for the property rights of homeowners. At the same time, I have worked to protect our valuable natural resources."

An attorney, McMorris is a graduate of the New England School of Law and is trained and certified in mediation. She has a B.A. in political science from the SUNY College at Brockport.

Ronnie and her husband, David, have lived with their children at 89 Doane St. for the past 10 years. For more information, call Ronnie McMorris at 383-1219 or call the Committee to Elect Roseanne McMorris, Ned Tebbetts, treasurer.

Richard Shea is school committee candidate

Richard "Rick" Shea has announced his candidacy for the Cohasset School Committee. With three children, one in each of the Cohasset schools, he is deeply committed to excellence in public education.

As a founding director and President of the Cohasset Education Foundation, he has worked to develop innovative resources for the public schools, raising more than $65,000 for major projects.

Shea offers a strong business and financial background. He is the Controller at Genetics Institute Inc., a major biotechnology firm and is a C.P.A. He worked previously with the accounting firm Coopers & Lybrand for 10 years, two years in Europe.

"I believe that the goal of the School Committee is to provide all Cohasset students with the highest quality education, but cost effectively, recognizing the town's budgetary constraints," Shea said. "I intend to provide leadership in applying the best current management practices toward achieving this goal. The combination of my financial experience and my public management and teaching background will help me to meet this challenge."

While working as a financial analyst for the Mass. Dept. of Social Services, Shea attended Boston University's Public Management Program and earned an M.B.A. with high honors. He received his B.A. and teacher certification in social studies from Princeton University. Following graduation, he taught for two years at the Burke High School in Dorchester.

Shea volunteers as a coach in the local youth soccer and basketball programs. He also continues his lifelong interest in music, playing bass guitar with "The Grateful Dads," a local rock group, which has performed at numerous community benefits.

Rick and his wife Gitte have lived in Cohasset for seven years.

"Gitte and I have established our roots here, and I would like to contribute my skills toward providing an excellent public education system for our students and for our town."

Town election continues to draw interest

John P. Rafferty, 4 Stoneleigh Lane, has thrown his hat into the ring for the seat on the water commission.

The April 6 election is drawing interest as citizens continue to take out nomination papers for a range of offices.

Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Avenue, has taken out papers to run for the position of treasurer/collector.

Richard Shea, 52 Margin Ct. and Owen O'Malley, 29 Sohier St., and Keith Knowles, 15 Border St. have taken out papers for the school committee seat currently held by Nancy Sandell, who is stepping down after three terms.

There is a three-way race for two seats on the board of selectmen. Incumbent Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Rd., has taken out papers for a third term. Former advisory committee chairman Nancy A. Roth, 7 Highland Ave.,

Last day to take out papers is Feb. 15

and conservation commissioner Roseanne McMorris, 89 Doane St., have thrown their hats into the ring. Incumbent Jane Goedecke announced recently she will not seek re-election.

Political newcomer, Roger Lowe of 90 Beach Street has taken out papers for library trustee and so have trustees Sheila Evans of 72 N. Main St. and Doris McNulty, of 80 Nichols Rd. As of Tuesday, Trustee Lucille McLaughlin had not announced her plans.

Other incumbents seeking re-election are sewer commissioner Edward M. "Ted" Guild of 365 Jerusalem Rd. for a fifth, three-year term and Town Moderator George L. Marlette Jr., 31 Rustic Dr., who seeks re-election to a three-year term.

Tom Wigmore, 32 Ash St., will seek re-election to a five-year term on the recreation commission; Town Clerk Marion Douglas, 404 A Beechwood St., has taken out papers for another three-year term; and James Lagrotteria, 104 Howe Rd. will run for re-election to the board of assessors. Other available positions are: health board (one position, three years); assessors, one for three years; Cohasset Housing Authority one position five years; and planning board, one position five years.The last day to take out nomination papers is Feb. 15. They must be returned with a minimum of 50 signatures of registered voters by 5 p.m., Feb. 20, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

New DPW machine

Special town meeting voters will be asked to consider the purchase of a $27,000 lawn mower which will also be used as a snow blower and sidewalk sweeper.

Peter Laugelle, tree, park and cemetery superintendent, and Harold Litchfield, highway supervisor, explained to selectmen Monday night that the new machine will be more efficient since it can perform various duties.

All aboard at Osgood?

If the outcome of Saturdays Proposition 2 1/2 override is favorable and the town proceeds with plans to replace it with a new school building, selectmen plan to appoint a committee to study how to put the Osgood School on the tax rolls.

Selectman Michael Sullivan, who made the suggestion at last week's selectman's meeting, recommended that the property be used for some type of condominium housing, either market rate or subsidized.

Selectman chairman Merle Brown wondered if the property might not make a good train station.

The rail line will run next to the school and many residents have requested a station in nearby Cohasset Village, which the MBTA has said may not be possible because of limited space for a station.

Police academy costs

The Commonwealth will soon start billing communities $1,800 for every new police officer who attends the criminal justice training program.

Monday night selectmen agreed to ask Police Chief Brian Noonan to discuss how the town should handle the new policy.

Town Administrator Gregory Doyon recommended requiring each new police officer to remain on the Cohasset force for five years or to reimburse the town for the $1,800.

Doyon said that would allow the town to spread the cost of training out over five years.

Selectman Michael Sullivan felt that five years is a long time.

After some discussion the other selectmen agreed to seek Noonan's opinion on the matter.

Flagpole article approved

A town meeting article proposed by Wayne Sawchuk has been placed on the warrant by selectmen.

The article would amend the current height restriction of 35 feet and allow flagpoles of up to 75 feet high to fly non-commercial flags.

Sawchuk wants to erect a 65 foot high flagpole at Milliken Field at the high school.

Since five feet of the pole would be in the ground, the total visible height would be 60 feet.

The article would require flagpoles to be an equal distance from the lot line as their height.

The planning board will hold a hearing on the article prior to town meeting.

Sewer article slated

Authorization to make $200,000 in "value effective repairs" to the sewer system will also face voters at the upcoming March 30 town meeting.

Mosquito board openings

Calling its work important, selectmen Monday night announced that the mosquito control committee has two openings.

They accepted with regret the resignation of Vincent Dunn from the committee and urged interested citizens to contact town hall immediately.

The mosquito control committee monitors the mosquito situation and helps coordinate any remedial measures, such as spraying.

Cohasset editor receives award

Mary Ford, editor of the Cohasset Mariner and The Hingham Journal, has won an award in the 1995 New England Press Association Better Newspaper Competition.

Contest winners were announced to newspaper publishers, editors, staff, and guests at the awards banquet Feb. 2 at the Boston Marriott, Copley Place.

The contest, the largest regional competition in the nation, presented 538 awards to New England Newspapers. More than 200 newspapers throughout New England submitted 4,379 entries in the 1995 competition.

Ford won second place in the best Editorial Writer category in the Weekly 1 Class (weeklies up to 5,999 circulation). Ford submitted a sample of three editorials she wrote for The Hingham Journal in the 12 months of the contest period from August 1994 through July 1995.

In commenting on Ford's award, judges said: "Well-rounded writing. Writer shows ability in tackling a range of subjects. After reading other editorials on the dog issue, her column 'Dog Etiquette' provided a refreshing alternative view. Owners should manage their own dogs. How novel!"

Ford's 'Dog Etiquette' editorial about problems with dogs at World's End also appeared in the Cohasset Mariner.

The Hingham Journal also placed second in the best Sports Page or Section category in the Weekly 1 Class. The sports section is edited by Dave McKee and designed by graphic artist Nancy Small. Photographers for the winning issue were Alan Chapman and Buzz Wadsworth.

Mariner Community Newspapers, the parent company of the Cohasset Mariner and The Hingham Journal, won a total of 13 awards. Other winning categories included feature writing (Braintree Forum & Marshfield Mariner), best editorial (Hanover Mariner), column writing (South Look), and photography (Norwell Mariner, Braintree Forum, & Weymouth News).

This year's award is the second for Ford, who also won for a story in the Norwell Mariner in 1989.

'Super Subs' a winner for project

Cohasset High School student volunteers for the Appalachia Service Project prepared more than 360 submarine sandwiches, Greek salads, and bowls of chili for Super Bowl Sunday to raise funds for their summer project. The project thanks everyone who placed orders and to the students and adult advisors who prepared and delivered the food. Special thanks are due to Carmine from the Strawberry Parfait, who donated the Greek salad dressing, also to Stop & Shop for donating the containers for the salad, dressing and chili.

The 84 high school students and adult advisors work all year to raise more than $40,000 to cover the cost of their construction materials, transportation, and living expenses for a week's work repairing homes for needy families in Appalachia this summer.

New production company is the Force

Cohasset High grads start new venture

By DOREEN LEGGETT
Special to the Mariner

Three college students relax in a large room cluttered with instruments, speakers, original paintings, couches and a phone — their jamming room/ office.

The trio, who all go to college in Boston, use a Cohasset home on Wood Way as the base for their independent record label and booking company, Force Productions, and their punk/ funk/hip hop band, Fun in The Kitchen.

As Kevin O'Donnell and Dean Volungis, who both graduated from Cohasset High last year, and Mike Equi, who graduated two years before them, talk animatedly about their company and band, it is clear that they have forged a close, supportive relationship.

"We all skateboarded in town, part of a select outcast few," said O'Donnell with a smile. "We were basically forced to know each other."

They teamed up about three years ago and formed Fun in The Kitchen. O'Donnell plays the guitar, Volungis the drums and occasionally bass guitar, and Equi the bass guitar. In fact, Volungis taught Equi how to play the bass. Volungis' family also supplies the basement.

Though they all contribute, O'Donnell is the backbone for the vocals; however, in terms of writing lyrics and music they all create equally.

Volungis said that one band member usually comes up with an idea and the other two add on until the lyrics and music work together as a song. The songs on their last album were mostly "goofy," which one of their titles, "I Love My Sk8 Better Than You," hints at, but had deeper elements to them as well.

"(The songs) have underlying meanings, completely serious yet completely unserious," said Equi.

The bands newer songs, for which they solicited the help of an additional drummer Dave Norton, differ markedly from their old songs.

"We like to keep people on their toes," Volungis said. "The newer (songs) are more serious, but we still like to have fun."

Band members said that their style appeals to all ages and that there are at least 350 people on their fan list.

To better showcase their unique sound they formed their own booking and production company last year. The company wasn't only formed to front Fun in The Kitchen. The idea behind the company is to empower all bands to exist on the basis of their own individuality, without tampering from outside sources.

Equi said that Fun in The Kitchen had been approached by "X" record company.

" (X) tried to pigeon-hole our sound, forcing us to play a certain style," Equi said.

The group turned down the contract and decided to create an independent record label. A label "where complete individual freedom" is encouraged, said Equi.

O'Donnell added, "Force Productions, in a way, is a life preserver in a business where the band is at the bottom of the totem pole. "

In addition to Force

Mike Equi (at left) and Kevin O'Donnell jam in the Volungis' basement. Equi, O'Donnell and Volungis said they formed Force Productions to empower all bands to exist on the basis of their own individuality.

behind Cohasset band

Dean Volungis studies engineering at Boston University when not playing drums for Fun in the Kitchen.

Productions being a record label, which will record Fun in The Kitchen's upcoming 14-song album as its first project, it also books shows for local bands.

The company works with bands and puts dances together on the South Shore by booking high school auditoriums and Knights of Columbus, Sons of Italy, and Veterans of Foreign Wars halls.

Equi said that it is often difficult for a band to secure a "gig", especially if a band member calls up. He said it is a lot easier when the band is represented by a company. Force Productions has a Cohasset "doing business as" certificate.

"So we are legal," Equi said.

He added that a lot of bands are content just playing for themselves.

"They are all sitting on their buts in basements," said Equi.

"Which is what we were doing for two years," interrupted O'Donnell.

Until, the three agreed, they decided to take some initiative and make things happen for themselves.

So far the strategy seems to be working, Fun in The Kitchen has played at The Rat and The Middle East twice, as well as other Boston spots. Force Productions has also set up close to 10 local shows.

Volungis said that for most of those local shows Force Productions donates some of the proceeds to a charity or a worthwhile organization. For example, the company donated money to the Alternative "Alt" School at Cohasset High and to the skate park in Scituate.

"We like to give back to the community, they let us play and they support us," said Volungis.

O'Donnell added that sometimes it wasn't easy to book a place because of the negative labels some people attach to bands. Force Productions is extremely careful in making sure that its shows are safe and well-run.

Because if they aren't, said O'Donnell, "another arrow goes towards not letting bands play. Not letting kids go somewhere on a Friday night. "

All three said that they took the business of Force Productions and the band very seriously.

"More than I've ever learned in school, more than anything else in my life I've learned through this band," said O'Donnell.

All money that the band or Force Production earns goes right back into the company.

The three also use their individual talents and schooling to promote the band. Equi is a third-year film/video major at the Museum School and creates music videos of the band and also takes care of other promotional aspects. He also painted the artwork that adorns the walls of their office.

"It is a beautiful medium of expression," said Equi. "The band with art."

Volungis, who is a computer engineer major at Boston University, views the band in a more practical light.

"It is a good stress reliever," he said.

Volungis added that he would have no problem playing in the band as a career, but has other options to fall back on. He has created a Fun in The Kitchen web page on the internet.

"All the college kids have accounts on the internet — they click on things all day," said Volungis. "This is easy way to get in touch with (the band.)"

O'Donnell, who is a film major at Emerson College, has taken public relations and business courses to be better prepared.

"I'll always be involved in music, I could never work for someone else," he said. "This is a great learning experience. It is up to us, no one else but us."

For more information on Force Productions, call 824-7680, or 748-9727. To view the web page, type http://acs.bu.edu: 800/~spl/ fitk. html.

Jan Brett, author of 'Armadillo Rodeo,' visits Derby Academy in Hingham. With Brett is Emily Larson, a sixth-grader from Cohasset who rides horses and was the model for Harmony Jean, one of the book's main characters.

Derby hosts Jan Brett

Derby Academy students from prekindergarten through Grade 3, wearing their finest Western gear, welcomed Jan Brett, author of "Armadillo Rodeo," on Jan. 19. Sarah Derby Hall was decorated with cowboy boots and rodeo scenes drawn by the students.

Helping children understand the creative process is a highlight of Brett's presentations, and animals are her favorite topics for stories and pictures.

Students were interested to learn that Emily Larson, a sixth-grader at Derby who rides horses in her spare time, was the model for Harmony Jean, one of the main characters in "Armadillo Rodeo." Faculty and students presented Brett with a Western shirt hand-appliquéd by Derby sewing teacher Alice McWilliams with scenes from the book.

Cultural events at the school are sponsored by the Derby Academy Parents' Association, which works with the faculty to select programs that supplement the curriculum and fulfill the school's mission to promote an appreciation of cultural diversity.

Mariner Sports

Hoopsters continue SSL tear with easy wins

JIM O'SULLIVAN
Special to the Mariner

After wins against the Norwell Clippers and Abington Green Wave last week, the Skippers marched into Hanover Tuesday night and challenged the Indians. Norwell's game saw the Skippers triumph 54-42, and the JV win in double-overtime, with heroics from Pat Hurley and some superior three-point shooting by Eric Wenmark. Cohasset controlled the Hanover game as well, defeating the Indians 72-62.

The game was never in much doubt.

Fred Howard started the game with a layup and Jared Hardwick followed with one of his own, followed by a free throw. Ryan Bishop and Paul-Michael Quintin both made nice moves to toss in layups. Bishop took a nice pass from Burke Davis and hit the turnaround. Davis sank two free throws to make it 11-9, Cohasset. Brian Kilroy, threaded a perfect pass to Hardwick, who capitalized with an easy basket. J.L. Williams nailed a three-pointer to put the Skippers up by five.

Hardwick pulled up for a jumper over Hanover's Brad Baronas, then drove to the hole for two on his next trip downcourt. Williams swished another trey and Kilroy again found Hardwick for a pair. Hardwick made the halftime score 30-26 with a three-pointer and a layup.

Davis hit a jumper and Quintin knocked down two three-pointers in a row to put CHS up by seven. Howard found Hardwick for two points and Hardwick scored again with a drive on the Skippers' next possession. Davis iced a three and Howard hit a nice pull-up jump shot. Hardwick hit a foul shot, a three-pointer, hit his layup and drew a foul. His shot was good, running the score to 54-43.

Bishop and Quintus both made layups, Quintin getting his after some great fast-break passing by Howard. Davis tossed in a jumper and Bishop hit a teardrop in the paint. Davis made a nice pass to a slashing Williams, whose layup made it 64-45. Good passing by sophomore Justin McNamara set up Davis for two from the line. Howard then hit two from the same spot. Howard and Hardwick both sunk two more each.

Cohasset's Matt Belson, Grant Emde, Lutz Grunwald and McNamara helped stifle a mini-run by Hanover and preserved the victory, 72-62. The Skippers' next game will be Friday, when they host the Hull Pirates.

Bittersweet week for grapplers

Skippers win two meets, lose Gledhill for season

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

They scored a 48-point victory and rang up eight pins in the process, but you can bet the stomachs of the Cohasset High wrestling team were in knots during Monday's 54-6 drubbing of Don Bosco.

The Skippers, now 10-4 on the season, will be without teammate Tucker Gledhill for remainder of the winter campaign after the popular grappler sustained a broken cheekbone during practice last Sunday.

Gledhill, a South Sectional champion and fifth-place finisher in the All-State meet last season was on pace for even bigger things this time around, according to head coach Torin Sweeney.

"I don't think there was any question he was going to be in the top four this year," he said. "This is a major blow to the team."

Gledhill, who finished second in the Cohasset Wrestling Tourney, had registered 16 wins on season before the injury. He wrestled at a higher weight class on several occassions when Sweeney needed a quality man to fill the capacity.

Sweeney said the injury is a first in his 13 years of coaching.

"It's the first time I've been since I've been coaching that I've lost a kid to a season-ending injury," Sweeney said. "He's in a lot of pain right now."

The Skippers obviously didn't bide their time in defeating Don Bosco. The meet turned into a blitzkreig from the start.

Mike Baird (112 pounds) raised his dual-meet record to 13-0 with a pin victory, kicking off what was to be a long night on the mats for Don Bosco.

Eighth-grader Adam Friedman (119) recorded a pin victory along with teammates Ben Littauer (125), Jordan Fiore (130), Kevin Duffy (135), Doug Sheerin (140), Kevin DeVito (145), Mike Rossi (152) and Adam Sasso (189).

Cohasset did much of the same against Hanover in a South Shore League showdown last Wednesday. The Skippers won eight of 10 matches by pin to drop the Indians, 54-18.

Baird overwhelmed his opponent for an 8-1 win and Heavyweight Nate Caldwell won a close 2-1 match.

Gledhill, in what turned out to be his final match of the season,

Time for Cohasset to follow Hanover's lead

By JOE REARDON

McKEE

REARDON

Let me tell you about a tale in a land not so far from Cohasset. The place is called Hanover and its residents are true backers of their youth sports programs.

What makes Hanover different from Cohasset you may ask? Every Monday, I come to work and Hanover editor Helen Graves dumps a pile of envelopes from the town's various drop boxes on top of what I'm doing. And that's just the first wave. Later in the afternoon Helen comes by again on her second sortie with even more mail.

Take a guess what's in those envelopes?

First-grade basketball results.

Squirt hockey results.

Girls basketball travelling team results.

Second-grade basketball results.

The result is at least a full 1-1/2 pages of young sports action. We get so many game results, when it comes time to put the paper together the paginators are forced to drop the print size down to nine instead of the 10 point you're reading now.

Should I go on? Are you starting to get the message folks?

Coaches, parents, league directors and fans of the sport are taking the time to sister Erica in the all-around (30.9).

Erica Hettstrom led the Skippers to a sterling all-around effort on the beam with her winning score of 8.4. Cohasset was close to flawless in the highly difficult event, easily the team's best performance on the apparatus all season. Not one gymnast fell off the beam and the Skippers had the top-four scores.

Kristen Reynolds and Jodi Colwill tied for second with fine 8.2 scores and senior captain Tafana Fiore grabbed the third position with an 8.0.

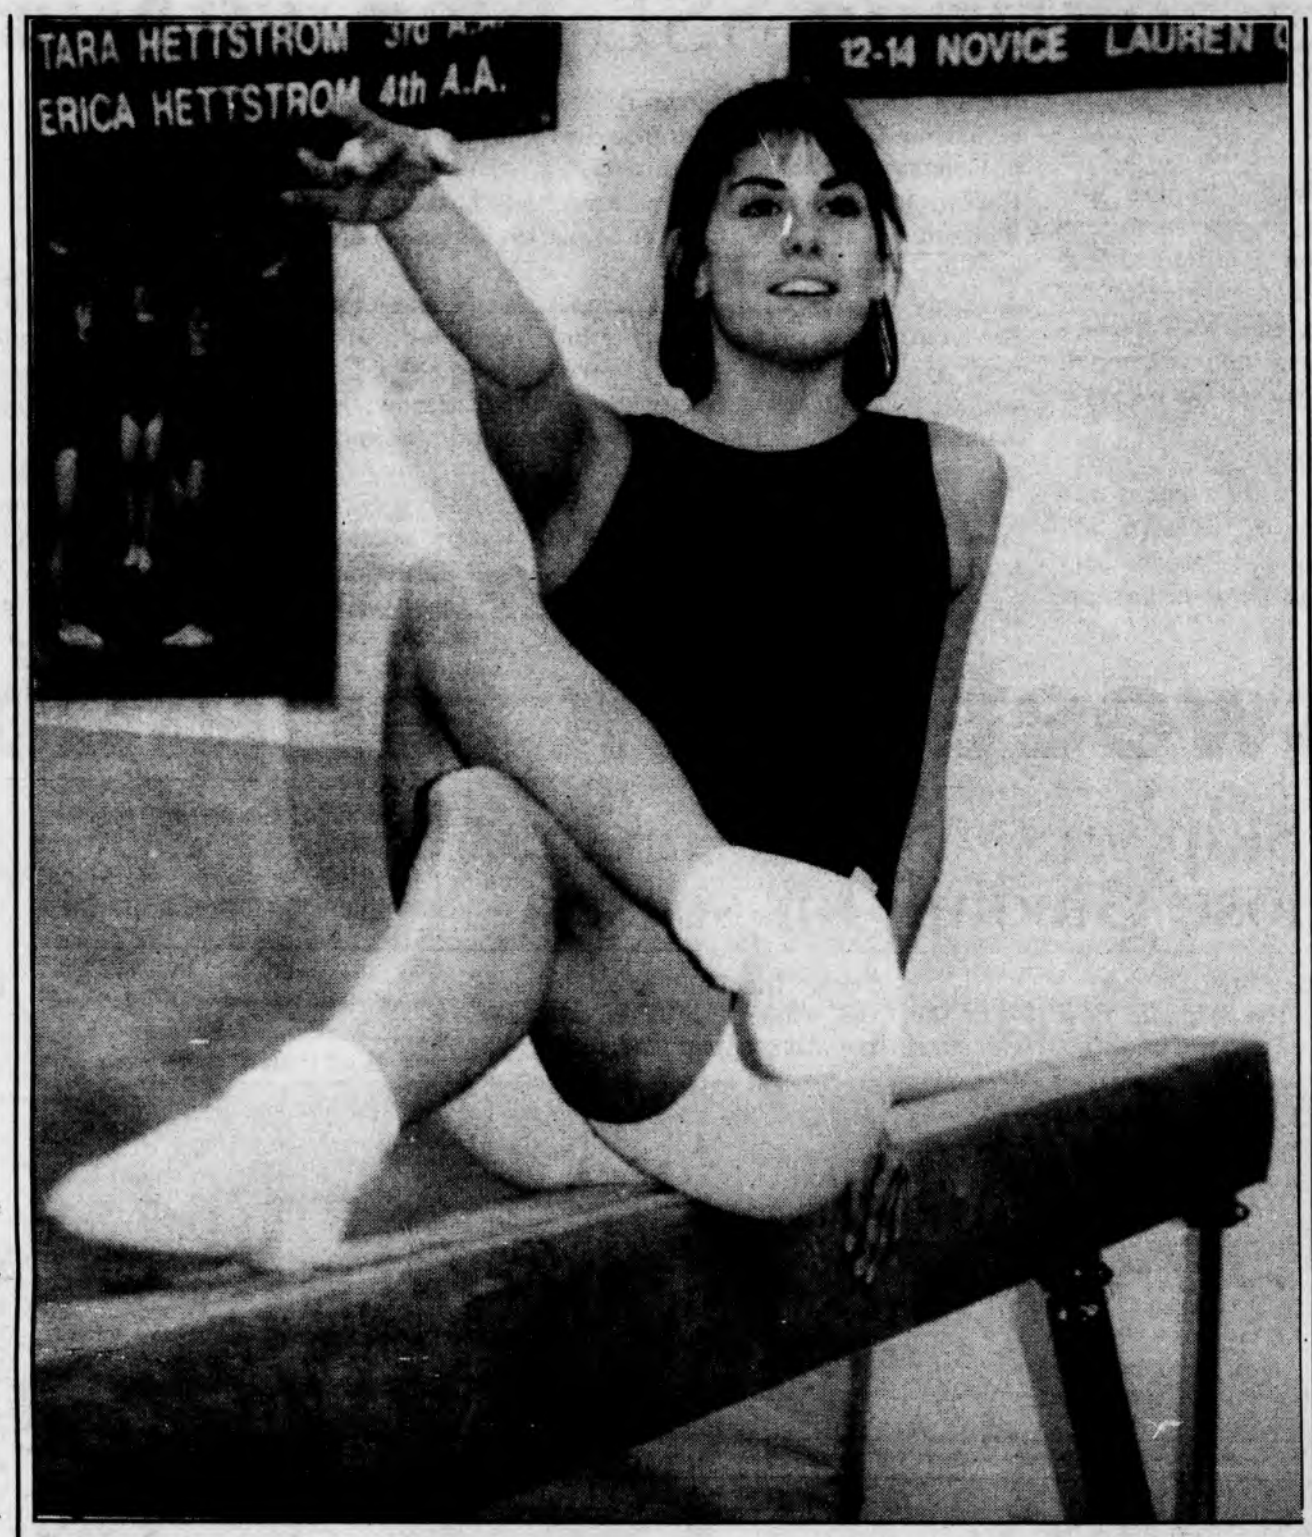
Colwill was the winner in the vault (8.0) with Reynolds taking second (7.8) and the Hettstroms finishing in a tie for third with their 7.7 score. Carolyn Pratt pulled off her prettiest vault of the season which scored her a 6.8.

The Skippers were equally dominant on the floor exercise as Lauren Genovese's third-place score of 8.2 netted her a personal best. She finished just behind Tara Hettstrom's 8.3. Erica Hettstrom took first and Megan Pratt recorded a solid 8.0 for fourth.

Erica Hettstrom's 31.7 in the all-around beat out Tara Hettstrom's 30.9 second place.

Head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said the title-clinching win takes the pressure off the team which could lead to even better performances.

"They want to make sure they have a high average," Ardizzoni said. "We'll be pushing to hit another 124 to 126 in the All-League meet for a good standing in the South Sectionals."



Cohasset gymnast Erica Hettstrom appears relaxed on the balance beam during a recent Skippers' workout. Hettstrom played an instrumental part in Cohasset's third consecutive South Shore League title.

Special to the Mariner/Ruthann Ardizzoni

Cohasset scored a 123.8 in its next meet against Hanover, but a rough night on the balance beam allowed the Indians to pull out a 124.1 score and the victory.

The loss snapped the Skippers' 31-meet winning streak and left them with a final regular-season record of 11-1.

The Indians have improved steadily all season after there was a fear that the program would be cancelled because there was no coach. But Dan Hannigan stepped forward and Hanover has gone from scoring in the 116 range to consistent results over 120.

Ardizzoni said she has a great deal of respect for Hannigan and the Hanover gymnasts, and is happy with the way their season has taken shape.

"We were happy it was Hanover who beat us because they improved so much over the season," Ardizzoni said.

The Skippers' only win came on the floor exercise where Erica and Tara Hettstrom tied the Indians' premier gymnast, Renee George, with an 8.4. Genovese took third at 8.0.

Colwill placed in three events with a second on the beam (8.2), third on the vault (8.2) and one of her best all-around performances ever (31.2) which gave her third place. Colwill's score was just short of her 31.5 personal best. Colwill has the distinction of being the lone Cohasset gymnast to set a personal best in every event this season.

Erica Hettstrom finished third on the bars (7.6) and Fiore's 7.9 on the beam

I would be wrong to say Hanover cares more about its young athletes than Cohasset. But I do believe those associated with youth sports in Hanover go that extra yard to give the high school stars of tommorrow the credit they deserve.

So what do you say folks? The fax number is 1-617-837-4843. As long as you're going to be at the next game, why not jot down some names, scores and highlights.

The other pin victors included Fiore, Duffy, Sheerin, Rossi, senior captain John Whitehouse, Luke Caldwell and Justin Buckley.

Cohasset faced Rockland and Holbrook in a tri meet, yesterday in Holbrook. Sweeney said earlier that morning that Rockland would provide the stiffer competition of the two teams.

"If everything goes right we could nip Rockland," he said. "It's going to be tough."

Cohasset Business

Cohasset jobless rate for Nov. is 3.1 percent

In Cohasset, the November unemployment rate was 3.1 percent (3,820 employed and 121 unemployed.)

A month earlier, the Cohasset jobless rate had been 3 percent. In November, 1994, it was also 3 percent.

Overall, the Massachusetts unemployment rate dropped to 5.1 percent in November.

Deputy Commissioner Richard T. Sullivan of the state Department of Employment and Training said that the jobless rate had decreased from the 5.3 figure in October.

Meanwhile, the national rate of 5.6 percent rose slightly from 5.5 percent in October.

Sullivan said, "This monthly survey, conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau, shows 6,000 more people in the labor force, 10,000 more working, and 5,000 fewer unemployed than there were one month ago."

Sullivan also noted that the payroll survey of Massachusetts jobs in October showed an estimated total of 2,974,800 jobs. This represented 34,900 more than in October of 1994, or a 1.2 percent growth.

In Norfolk County, the November unemployment rate was 3.9 percent (326,507 employed and 13,287 unemployed).

Norfolk County's unemployment rate a month earlier was 4.2 percent (324,162 employed and 14,086 unemployed.)

This had represented an decrease from the August rate of 4.3 percent and the November, 1994 rate of 4.4 percent.

January kept police department busy

Police Chief Brian Noonan said January was an "extremely busy" one for the police department.

"The blizzard of the eighth, the rain and wind storms of the 19th and 27th caused numerous power outages throughout the town," he said. "The outages were caused by fallen trees, damaged utility poles and exploding transformers."

Noonan said dispatchers received 106, 9-1-1-calls last month along with all the other business.

"We were also forced to double up on our personnel on the eighth, 19th and 27th," he said.

In January the police department made 11 arrests: three for outstanding warrants, four for minors in possession of alcohol, two for operating under the influence of alcohol, one for violation of a 209A restraining order, and one for a major motor vehicle violation.

"There were three breaking and enterings at residences," Noonan said.

Police program offers teddy bears to children

With little children, it is often the little things in life that count most.

Perhaps no one knows this better than Cohasset police officers who respond to accidents and domestic abuse cases involving children.

The department has a practice of handing out teddy bears to young children shaken by an injury or domestic troubles. When the department recently ran out of teddy bears, long-time Cohasset resident Donald Staszko stepped in and donated a new supply — colorful, cuddly OshKosh B'gosh bears, police said.

"The teddy bears work great," Officer Lisa Matos says. Matos is assigned to domestic violence cases. "Once a threat is over, the children are confused; the bears help settle things down."

Matos says the bears are a wonderful distraction.

"Often children don't remember the injury or the incident; they just know that a friendly police officer gave them a bear."

Bears work wonders at the scene of an accident, says Chief Brian Noonan. "I would like to thank Donald Staszko for this thoughtful gift. It is encouraging when civic-minded people come forward to assist. It is donations like this that help the police department go beyond just responding to a call."

Last year, Staszko donated $2,000 towards the department's PALS for Wellness program, which works with school children on a variety of issues — from preventing abuse to discouraging the use of drugs, alcohol, and tobacco.

Chief Noonan will gladly accept contributions from the public.

"It is difficult to put something like teddy bears in a budget and yet they have such an important impact on the children.

"We are always grateful when a resident steps forward to help," he says.

Winter break must wait

School vacation week is in March this year

By DOREEN LEGGETT
Cohasset Mariner

As the traditional February vacation quickly approaches, Cohasset students have one thing to look forward to — March.

For educational reasons the school committee unanimously voted in November of 1994 to combine the February and April vacations into one March vacation.

Lack of support in virtually every quarter convinced the committee to switch back to the two-vacation model this November. The two-vacation system will be re-instated for the 1996-1997 school year.

"We feel educationally (the one vacation) is a better schedule," said Supt. Stephen Hart. "But obviously the majority of people did prefer the traditional (vacation schedule)."

The school committee stands by its decision that the one-week system made more educational sense, but the divisiveness of the issue outweighed the benefits.

At a school committee meeting last May, more than 50 students and a few parents gathered to express outrage at the switch to a March vacation and the fact that they had no say in it.

Nichole Santoro, student body president then and now, spearheaded the student protest.

"The major problem," she said, "was

Cohasset wins with lottery aid boost

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

Over the years, the state Lottery Commission has made winners of thousands of Massachusetts residents.

And if Gov. William Weld's proposed fiscal year 1997 budget, which includes a $42 million boost for local communities in state lottery aid gets the green light from the legislature, cities and towns all over the Commonwealth will win big too.

Originally created to generate more state revenues for local communities, lottery revenues have been diverted since the late 1980's from Massachusetts 351 cities and towns and into the state's coffers.

Lottery Commission Media Director Deirdre Coyle explained that since 1988 there has been a cap on lottery revenues that has limited the amount of funds that go back to communities throughout the Commonwealth.

Governor Michael Dukakis instituted the cap that year, allowing $306 million in lottery revenues to go to local cities and towns, said Coyle who noted that

School loses by inches

Proponents may call for vote

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

The photo finish didn't make defeat any easier for the handful of school officials and citizens Saturday who stayed until the final tallies were read.

But the electorate had spoken and the $13 million new school project appeared dead, at least for the time being.

"As a parent I'm very disappointed," said school committee member Jim Kirk.

"As a school committee member, I'm frustrated that a good investment in education was not recognized by the town and as a taxpayer I'm angry because my home will be worth less and this would have saved money in the long run."

School officials said the state will not reimburse the town for upgrading the 70-year-old Osgood School because it would not have a useful life of 50 years.

Saturday's vote was 1162 to 1134. Precinct one voted 606 to 537 in favor of the override and precinct two voted 625 to 528 opposed. The school proposal lost by 28 votes. There were 40 blanks, which prompted a call for a recount.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said

Census forms mailed

The town census has been mailed to each household, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said. The local census is primarily used to maintain voting and jury lists but it also aids in school enrollment projections and public safety and senior citizens' needs, she said. The local census also establishes proof of residency, which is often needed for certain privileges, such as transfer station stickers and cemetery rights, certain veterans' benefits, and reduced tuition rates at state colleges and universities.

Dog forms were enclosed. The license are valid through Dec. 31, 1996. If you did not receive a census form, contact the town clerk's office at 383-9900. Forms are due back by Feb. 23.

Osgood School on table

Selectmen will meet with the school committee and the school facilities committee to discuss what to do about the Osgood School on Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m. at the high school audio visual room.

During Monday night's meeting, Merle Brown, selectman chairman, told several people who apparently wanted to discuss the defeat of the override, that the subject would not be brought up at that time.

Last weekend voters narrowly defeated the proposal to build a new school (see related article.)

Mosquito vacancy has selectmen buzzing

For the third week in a row, selectmen have asked for volunteers to serve on the mosquito control committee, which monitors the mosquito situation and helps coordinate any remedial measures such as spraying or the unblocking of stagnant waterways.

There is one vacancy on the committee and anyone interested is urged to contact selectmen immediately at 383-9900.

Some of the 46 percent of Cohasset voters who cast ballots in Saturday's special election wait to sign in at the polls at town hall. The override question allowing the town to borrow for a new school was defeated by a margin of 28 votes.

Red Cross month noted

March will be Red Cross month in Cohasset, according to a selectman's proclamation Monday night.

Eastern Edison progress noted

Stating that they are pleased with improved service offered by the utility company, selectmen plan to send a letter to Eastern Edison. Earlier, they had intended to meet with Edison representatives, but recently received a letter from the company answering many of their questions.

Professional bills approved

Selectmen this week approved bills from Civil Designs, Inc. of about $1,000 for work connected to the Hagerty Property project. In addition, a bill from RDA Construction for $38,430 was also approved.

Town history to begin

Voters at the upcoming annual town meeting will be asked to support a resolution calling on the historical commission to begin work on a new town history.

The current history ends some years ago and must be updated.

Noel Ripley, historical commission chairman, asked selectmen to accept the resolution on Monday night.

Cohasset's Week

MBTA officials discuss train

In what could become a lively exchange, MBTA officials will discuss the restoration of train service to Cohasset with selectmen Monday, March 4 at 9 p.m.

According to Gregory Doyon, town administrator, MBTA engineers have been in Cohasset recently to preliminary work on the construction project.

Treasurer/collector reorganization is finalized

It's now official: Sally Lincoln has been appointed acting treasurer and Linda Litchfield is the acting collector. Selectmen made the appointments Monday night.

An opinion from town counsel Richard Henderson is still needed in order to determine when the treasurer/collector position may be made permanent.

An act of the legislature may be required, but that body has been traditionally reluctant to make a change if someone is running for or has been elected to a position.

Wigmore Pierson, Judy Volungis, and Joseph Buckley have taken out nomination papers for the post, which is now vacant because Elizabeth Ripley resigned to take a job in Marshfield.

Speeding concerns addressed

In response to a question from selectman Martha Gjesteby during Monday night's selectman's meeting, Police Chief Brian Noonan agreed that a sign should be posted along Jerusalem Road near Windy Hill Road.

Noonan said the sign will probably say "slippery when wet/icy."

Residents in the area have been concerned about the dangerous curves along Jerusalem Road for years and long sought remedial action from the town.

Water increase fight is on

Town counsel Richard Henderson will be asked to file a brief with the state Department of Public Utilities in an effort to stop a 165 percent rate increase facing the 300 Cohasset households receiving water from the American Water Co. in Hingham.

Selectman Peter Pratt recommended fighting the proposed increase, stating that because the pipes are so bad, Cohasset consumers should pay less than those in other towns.

Term limits are opposed

Although they accepted the article for town meeting consideration last week, selectmen this week decided to oppose a by-law limiting those serving on town committees and boards to three terms.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said if someone is serving too long, then selectmen should not reappoint him.

"We need to make judgement calls on who should step down," he said.

The vote was unanimous, with selectman Jane Goedecke absent.

Jerusalem Rd. subdivision hearing is 8 p.m., March 6

The planning board will hear plans for a potentially controversial subdivision, called Jerusalem Road Estates, on Wednesday, March 6 at 8 p.m.

Developing the 45-acre parcel of land has already aroused some opposition from neighbors.

Houses in the proposed development will likely hook into the sewer line once it is extended to the Strait's Pond area.

Windy Hill Road resident Virginia Ferenz has written to planning board chairman Alfred Moore suggesting that existing houses should be connected to the sewer line before new construction is approved.

She said that if the sewer line reaches capacity before all existing homes are connected, then the project will not reduce pollution in the pond.

The subdivision is being proposed by Steven Cory of Jerusalem Road Ltd. Partnership, Liberty

Snow deficit increases

Town administrator Gregory Doyon reports that the snow budget is now overspent by $63,000, according to the latest figures.

Fire department overtime request is put on hold

At the request of selectman Michael Sullivan, selectman have postponed approval of an additional $17,000 in overtime for the fire department for the current fiscal year.

Fire Chief Roger Lincoln is seeking the money in a transfer request at the special town meeting which will be held prior to the annual.

But, saying that he wants to hold costs down, Sullivan said he wants time to discuss the overttime with Lincoln.

Lincoln explained that originally, he had requested $110,000 for overtime. With the ratification of the new contract, that amount was increased to $118,000.

But because of the snow storms and the early Janaury fire on Highland Ave., the overtime budget is being used up faster than anticipated.

"I call it a bad year all around," Lincoln said.

However, Sullivan questioned the policy of calling in additional firefighters in anticipation of a major storm.

Lincoln replied that the policy is standard in most communities because fire fighters often cannot arrive at work during snow storms and must be on hand in the event of emergency.

Police training policy ok' d

With selectman Michael Sullivan dissenting, selectmen agreed Monday night to require new police officers to stay on the job for five years or agree to reimburse the town for the training costs.

Police Chief Brian Noonan explained that the state now charges municipalities $1,800 for each cadet attending the police academy.

The town has the right to seek reimbursement of that cost.

He said that Scituate deducts the cost from the officer's pay.

However, he recommended that Cohasset require the officers to stay with the town for five years or be liable to repay the fee.

Sullivan said that the town does not charge other employees for training.

Selectmen Martha Gjesteby, Peter Pratt and Merle Brown voted to institute the agreement. Selectman Jane Goedecke was absent.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

EXTENDING INVESTMENT

QUESTION: Now that my wife and I have owned our home for ten years, we can see what an excellent investment it was. We are now looking for a new investment. How does investing in additional property look in today's environment?

ANSWER: The value of property keeps pace with the economy, and for many years the trend has been upward. Historically, real estate values have always increased faster than the cost of living during inflation and decreased slower in recessions. It's an ideal inflation hedge. Judicious investment in income property offers safety, stability, and opportunity for income profit and tax savings.

New school proposal fails at ballot box

Tuesday that school proponents have inquired about a recount. The petition must be signed by 10 registered voters in each precinct and submitted by 5 p.m. the 10th day following the election, which is Feb. 20.

Douglas said it could cost about $500 to pay registrars and town counsel to conduct the recount in which all the ballots are counted by hand.

Once the petition is submitted and signatures verified, the recount must be conducted within 30 days, Douglas said.

"But I would do it as soon as possible," she said.

Douglas explained that the voting machines do not read ballots that haven't been punched through but the machines will pick up "any light at all."

School Committee Chairman Ralph Kidder said he was very disappointed by the vote.

"It just makes replacing the Osgood School much more difficult and costly," he said. "We will replace it, it is just a matter of time."

School officials said the state would reimburse the town 60 percent of the cost of building a new school if the project was filed before the end of this fiscal year.

Kidder that the school committee will meet with the school facilities committee this week to determine the best way to proceed.

The school project would have added about $111 a year, averaged over the life of the bond issue, to the property tax bill of the typical Cohasset home valued at $242,000.

The tax hike would be in addition to other projects the town is committed to such as capping the landfill and upgrading the town's sewer plant.

Clark Chatterton, who lobbies for the new school, greets voters on the way to the polls Saturday. Behind him is Roy Fitzsimmons who has been an outspoken opponent of the project. When the votes were tallied Saturday evening, the school project had lost by 28 votes. Forty-six percent of the town's registered voters went to the polls.

More citizens opt to run for elected office

Last day to take out papers is Feb. 15

The April 6 election continues to draw interest as citizens take out nomination papers for a range of offices.

This week Joseph D. Buckley, 28 Linden Dr., and Judy Volungis, 234 Forest Ave., have taken out papers for the treasurer/collector's post. They join Wigmore Pierson, 123 Atlantic Avenue, in seeking the position being vacated by Elizabeth Ripley who recently resigned.

Terry Atherton, 34 Clay Spring Rd., has taken out papers for an open seat on the planning board. Incumbent Jean Simonds has decided not to seek re-election, town clerk Marion Douglas said this week.

Richard Shea, 52 Margin Ct. and Owen O'Malley, 29 Sohier St., and Keith Knowles, 15 Border St. have taken out papers for the school committee seat currently held by Nancy Sandell, who is stepping down after three terms.

There is a three-way race for two seats on the board of selectmen. Incumbent Martha Gjesteby, 81 Old Pasture Rd., has taken out papers for a fourth term. Former advisory committee chairman Nancy A. Roth, 7 Highland Ave., and conservation commissioner Roseanne McMorris, 89 Doane St., have thrown their hats into the ring. Incumbent Jane Goedecke announced recently she will not seek re-election.

John P. Rafferty, 4 Stoneleigh Lane, has thrown his hat into the ring for the seat on the water commission and could get some competition from Richard Muncey, 377 S. Main St., who has also taken out papers for the seat held by William Montuori, who has decided not to seek re-election, Douglas said.

John Muncie, 377 S. Main St., has taken out papers for re-election to the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Incumbent sewer commissioner Edward Guild may get some competition from Jack Noble, 80 Summer St., who has taken out papers to run for Guild's seat. Guild plans to seek re-election.

Roger Lowe of 90 Beach Street has taken out papers for library trustee and so have trustees Sheila Evans of 72 N. Main St. and Doris McNulty, of 80 Nichols Rd. As of Tuesday, Trustee Lucille McLaughlin had not announced her plans.

Incumbent Town Moderator George L. Marlette Jr., 31 Rustic Dr. is seeking re-election to a three-year term.

Tom Wigmore, 32 Ash St., will seek re-election to a five-year term on the recreation commission; Town Clerk Marion Douglas, 404 A Beechwood St., has taken out papers for another three-year term; and James W. Lagrotteria, 104 Howe Rd. will run for re-election to the board of assessors. The board of health board has one position for three years on this year's ballot. That seat is held by Robert V. Davenport of Sohier Street.

The last day to take out nomination papers is Feb. 15. They must be returned with a minimum of 50 signatures of registered voters by 5 p.m., Feb. 20, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

Cohasset wins safety award

For the second year in a row, the town of Cohasset has been awarded a Certificate of Achievement for its superior commitment and effectiveness in risk management by the Massachusetts Interlocal Insurance Association. Cohasset was one of three towns chosen for the award from among 280 municipal entities participating in MIIA's workers' compensation program.

Cohasset was praised for its initiative and leadership in loss control activities, including thorough investigation of accidents and extensive employee training in safe practices and preventive measures. MIIA commended Executive Secretary Greg Doyon for developing the town's safety program and the town's safety committee for its commitment to inspect town buildings twice annually.

The efforts of communities like Cohasset have enabled MIIA to reduce workers' compensation costs for its members and return surplus in the form of dividends. Cohasset will receive more than $5,700 as its share of the dividends announced at the MIIA annual meeting.

Cohasset wins with lottery aid boost

every year since then, the cap has allowed for a greater portion of the funds to go where they were originally intended.

For fiscal year 1996 the cap was up to more than $442 million and Coyle said by the year 2000 the cap will be lifted altogether.

Locally, Hingham's slice of the 42 million will be about $944,239 in 1997 which represents a nine percent increase over last year. In Cohasset, which will also receive a nine percent increase, the lottery aid will add up to about $287,310. Both Hingham and Cohasset's town administrators said the increased aid will be welcome.

"It's always nice to have additional state aid," said Hingham Town Administrator Charles Cristello, who hopes the figures are solid before town meeting so that the impact on the town's budget picture will be more clear."

Cohasset's Town Administrator Greg Doyon agreed.

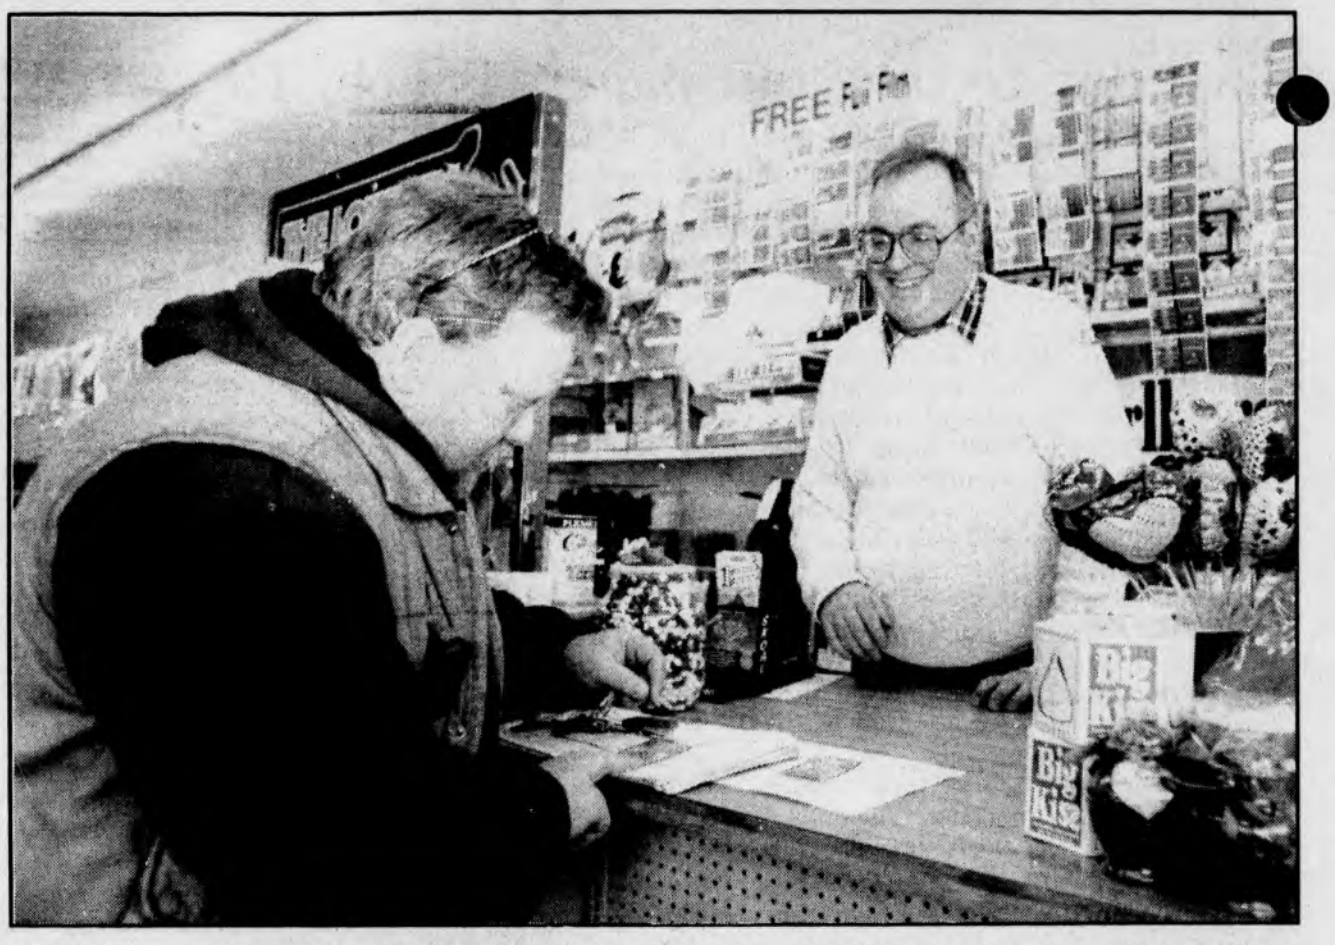
"The additional aid is welcome. I can't say it will have a dramatic impact on our budget this year, but the additional monies will help," Doyon said.

The formula for figuring how big of a slice of that lottery pie local towns receive is based on property values and population figures said Coyle, who noted the idea behind that is to give larger entitlements to less affluent communities. The amount of aid has nothing to do with a community's lottery sales figures, Coyle added.

Last year Cohasset lottery retailers brought in $1,974,900 and the town received $233,512 in state lottery aid. In Hingham, those figures were $6,192,570 and $775,158 respectively.

Josie Boles, owner of Cohasset Food Mart said her business couldn't survive without the lottery.

"Without it, trust me customers would go elsewhere," she said.



Todd Sorgman plays his scratch ticket and Don Moran waits to see if he's a winner at Cohasset News on Brook Street.

In addition to the five percent Boles and other lottery retailers receive on sales and the one percent cut they get on redemptions, Boles said scratch and lottery tickets bring her constant business.

Customers, playing Megabucks or scratch tickets (Boles has 24 varieties), often buy a cup of coffee or something else while they're in the store.

And patrons just stopping in for a gallon of milk aren't held up because Boles is sure to have additional staff on hand to handle all customers.

"Lottery sales are very labor intensive," she said.

Owner Rick McGaughey of Hennessy News in Hingham said his store was one of the area's first lottery agents and like Boles, McGaughey said selling lottery tickets brings in business.

"No one's going to get rich on it," said McGaughey of the commission retailers receive for being an agent.

"Still, I wouldn't want not to have it," he added.

Weld's budget proposal, which also includes a $243 million increase in state education aid and a $7 million increase in water and sewer relief, is on its way to the House Ways and Means Committee for review and re-drafting where the committee is expected to finish its work on the proposed fiscal 1997 budget by the end of March.

Turkey Hill purchase near

Cohasset's share of the Turkey Hill land purchase will likely be between $100,000 and $120,000, conservation commission chairman Thomas Callahan told selectmen Monday night.

He said the 55-acre parcel will likely cost between $800,000 and $900,000 to purchase and create trails for public use.

Some 25 acres of the land are in Cohasset, the other 35 acres are located in Hingham.

That town's share will likely be close to $200,000.

The remainder of the money will come from a state grant and from the Trustees of Reservations and other private conservation groups.

Callahan also said that it is unlikely the sale will be ready for town meeting approval until the fall, but recommended selectmen leave the article on the annual town meeting warrant in case the situation changes.

In addition, conservation commissioners will seek $12,000 to conduct an open space plan which is required for state aid to purchase open space land.

The plan need not be completed while the Turkey Hill purchase is underway because Hingham already has an open space plan.

Regional waste request

After some discussion Monday night, selectmen agreed to support at town meeting article requesting $4,000 for the regional refuse program.

John McNabb, who represents Cohasset on the board, explained that the ten towns in the district have some grant money and additional funds to pay for a solid waste consultant who is examining the issue from a regional perspective.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said he was concerned that the project has been going on for ten years and hasn't shown any results.

McNabb said they should not stop in the middle of their work.

The other selectmen agreed to make Cohasset's expenditure contingent upon the participation of at least seven other towns.

B-E-E Prepared all you top spellers out there!

The president of the Cohasset Education Foundation, Rick Shea, has announced — B-E-E Prepared for the second annual Cohasset Spelling Bee sponsored by CEF, which will take place on Wednesday, Feb. 28, in the CHS cafeteria at 7 p.m.

The spelling bee is organized in teams of three members each, composed of neighbors, alumni groups, professionals and companies. Each team pays $150 to play (tax-deductible), and CEF expects to raise more than $3,000 to support teacher training and curriculum enrichment programs.

Pizza and soft drinks will be served. Entry forms may be picked up and mailed to CEF. If you have questions, call Pamela Speed at 383-2572 or Midge Stone (383-2281).

Alexander Gaston, a freshman at the Holderness School in Plymouth, N.H., has been named to the honor roll for the fall semester. Alexander also took part in the school's campus-wide student jobs program, sang in the school chorus and ran as a member of the boys cross-country team that won a league title and placed seventh in the New England prep school championships. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gaston III of Cohasset.

We really do have a super-sleuth in this town who is always on the look-out for a good story. Mr. Ingram called last week to ask if we had seen the column in the Boston Globe asking if there was any way to repair an old yearbook. There had been a flood in the individual's basement and all of the pages had stuck together, ruining the entire yearbook.

The year was 1985, the owner of the yearbook lives in Washington, D.C. and the initials are "P.C." Okay, would-be detectives, I am sure we can find another yearbook if you can find P.C. in Washington, D.C. Let us know!

Boston University awarded academic degrees to 1,060 students this winter, and there were two Cohasset residents among them! Congratulations to Richard D. Pierce, who earned a BA in English, and James F. Rosano Jr., who now holds a BA in economics.

We recently let an important day go by. Feb. 1 was National Women and Girls in Sports Day, founded to celebrate the girls and women who participate in sports and their contributions to athletics. On Friday, Feb. 2, this special day was celebrated in Massachusetts. Hundreds of high school athletes chosen to represent hundreds of eastern Massachusetts high schools packed Boston University's Case Center to take part in the event.

Representing Cohasset High School were seniors Chloe Chittick and Tammy Maitland, who were individually recognized and received certificates of appreciation. It is really a great thing that our successful women in sports are recognized, and we applaud them!

We all join the President of the United States, Bill Clinton, in wishing Bob Leonard a happy 80th birthday. Mr. Leonard and his family went to Stars for their celebration, and a great time was had by all! He really is a living legend. He played baseball for Gillette (remember the "blue blades" safety razors?) and is in the Hall of Fame museum. He's an awesome man, and we are ever-so-proud of you! We most assuredly hope your birthday was the best one yet, with many more to come.

Cohasset's own athletic director will be honored next month. Clark Chatterton has won the MSSADA President's Award, in recognition of the fact that his "long and dedicated service to Cohasset High School, the South Shore League and the Pilgrim Conference has not gone unnoticed." The President's Award will be presented to Clark at the awards dinner on Wednesday evening, March 20, in the Bass River Room. Congrats!

Hats off to Thomas M. Reardon, who was named Harvard University's new vice president for alumni affairs and development. Tom has held a number of fundraising and development positions at Harvard since 1975, and is a former political reporter for WEEI and one-time press secretary to former Gov. Francis W. Sargent.

Don't forget that applications for the 20th annual Cohasset Road Race By-the-Sea, sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, are now available. The 10K race will take place on Sunday, March 31, at 1 p.m. in Cohasset Village. with check-in at the South Shore Community Center. The entry fee is $10, and there will be medals for winners and shirts for the first 700 runners who check in.

Anna Abbruzzese has done it again — another brainstorm! She and her Gourmet Club are going to hold a "Stone Soup Day" Feb. 21, the first day of Lent, at the South Shore Community Center. There will be two varieties of soup served, along with assorted breads and a special dessert. The cost is $5, and those attending are asked to bring a can of vegetable for the Food Pantry. Doesn't that sound wonderful? See you at noon on that appointed day!

Hats off to the Second Congregational Church for holding a Valentine's party last Sunday. Guests wrote letters to our soldiers in Bosnia, made cards to send to shut-ins, decorated cookies to give out through the Cohasset Food Pantry and recorded an audio tape of Valentine hits for a shut-in. Isn't all of that the true meaning of love?!

Most of us have heard of the show, "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," starring Donnie Osmond. Well, Cohasset will have two stars in the Colonial Theatre production! Elizabeth and David Ingber will be in the chorus, performing four times per week. Elizabeth is in the seventh grade at CHS, and her brother is a sixth-grader at Deer Hill School.

That's it for this week. Hope to hear from you with your latest happening!

The Mariner welcomes letters to the Editor.

EDITORIAL

54 percent

Where were the 54 percent of Cohasset registered voters who chose to sit Saturday's special election out?

Could it be so many — more than 2,000 citizens — didn't care or didn't have an opinion about the issue?

We'll never know.

But what is clear is that Cohasset residents — those who vote — are split on the proposal evidenced by the slim 28-vote margin.

We don't believe half the people are dead against the new school. Some who wrote letters to the editor urging a no vote agree that the Osgood School must be replaced.

Now is the time for the school committee and new school supporters to regroup and heal. They worked tirelessly and passionately for their cause and the disappointment was evidenced on their stunned faces when the tallies were read Saturday.

Over the past few weeks, some criticized the proponents as being hasty and over zealous and having disregard for people who can't afford to pay any more taxes.

And some opponents were criticized as not caring enough about our children's future.

Any good fight is bound to generate finger pointing and hard feelings on both sides.

However we can all agree, the group that fought hard for the school did so with the best of intentions.

They are taxpayers, parents, grandparents, town officials and ordinary citizens. They had a dream of a better facility for Cohasset children and no one can fault them for that.

Let's hope citizens on both sides can work together to find a solution to school overcrowding and deteriorating facilities that a majority of the taxpayers will support.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Look behind 'No' vote is needed

To the Editor:

Saturday's "No" vote was not a rejection of replacing the Osgood School by many of us.

It is not a foregone conclusion that "$3.5M has to be poured down the drain" as Committeeman Kirk has stated. At the Special Town Meeting, Sen. Hedlund expressed optimism that the state funding program would be renewed. We should lobby hard for that renewal.

I believe that many voters felt steamrollered and, as Dan Cotton said, were given a "take it or leave it package." The sudden elimination of $600,000 for sewage hook-up wasn't reassuring; it showed how everything was being rushed. I continue to believe that there is more than $1M that can be trimmed from the proposal and that it was shortsighted not to provide for air conditioning. Likewise, the disposition of the Osgood School should have been addressed as part of the package being put before the voters.

Frankly, how can the voters trust a five-year budget projection that didn't have a $13.985M school in it just one year ago? How can we believe a five-year projection that suggests that the Required Tax Levy in the fifth year will be a negative eight tenths of one percent? Annual Town Meeting has warrant articles for gymnasium and auditorium renovations, but at this late date they have no price tags. This vote was a severe repudiation of the town's lack of long-range planning and projection of capital needs.

I appreciate that the town is staffed largely by volunteers who give thousands of hours of their personal time. Nevertheless, there is great room for improvement and it revolves around long-range planning. The number of committees (38) listed in the Special Town Meeting Warrant is ridiculous and Selectmen Sullivan was suggesting another one for disposition of the Osgood School.

We need to replace the Osgood School, not put a band-aid on it. However, at JoAnne Chittick's orientation coffee, pride was being taken in the fact that we were using the same architect who did Nantucket's new school. Some of us can't relate to Nantucket, but we love Cohasset and want to be able to continue living here. Personally, my recent tax bill increased 14.8 percent and North Cohasset faces a 164 percent increase in water service charges and a $12000 to $15000 sewage system betterment charge.

I recommend the school groups reach out to clearly understand the vote. My suggestion is that the School Facilities Committee immediately do a mailing with an enclosure listing its leading alternatives in a standard format. Also attached would be a blank form in the same format so that other alternatives could be suggested. Finally, a form for general comments should be attached. The feedback information would be collated and sent to all residents in the form of a straw poll to get a sense for the most supportable alternative.

Let's understand each other's concerns and replace the Osgood School with a cost effective option.

Health board should stop CHL expansion

To the Editor:

If the idea of a towering mound of construction debris looming over 3A doesn't bother you and thoughts of landfill gases wafting on the summer breeze seem harmless if unpleasant, think again!

Construction and Demolition (C&D) landfills generate fewer toxic substances than municipal solid waste landfills, but they do generate toxins and even Mr. Barry's experts can't guarantee that these poisons won't enter our air and groundwater.

What kind of poisons have been found in other C&D landfills?

In 1991 Community and Environmental Defense Associates (CEDA) studied data from five active rubble (C&D) landfills in Maryland. Using Department of the Environment monitoring data, CEDA found carcinogenic compounds at two of the five landfills. Among the chemicals identified were benzene, carbon tetrachloride, chloroethane, dichlorodiflouromethane, 1,1-dichloroethane, ethylbenzene, 2-heptanol, hexachlorodiflouromethane, mercury, methylene chloride, methyltert-butyl-ether, tetrachloroethane, total organic halide, toluene, trichloroethane, vinyl chloride.

The human health risks associated with these chemicals included cancer, liver/kidney, skin and digestive distress, nervous system problems and lung problems.

Much of the contamination was attributed to hazardous waste being placed in the landfills. CHL's expert, Mr. Raymond Quinn, has previously testified that he had never seen a truck being stopped to verify that its load contained only non-hazardous waste. Who or what will prevent similar hazardous materials from being dumped at the expanded landfill?

Maryland is not the only place to have had problems with C&D landfills. In the January issue of "Waste Age," a September 1991 study of leachate produced from three Houston C&D landfills found that "surrounding groundwater had significant adverse effects..." Yes, the same article said the contaminants found from C&D were "usually less than half of that found in typical MSW leachate." Does that imply that less than half of a toxic substance is acceptable? How much of the leachate from an expanded landfill will make it into our groundwater, and what will prevent it from tainting Lily Pond?

The most alarming C&D story comes from Seattle. Its Cohasset Education Foundation marks achievements

By JIM KINCH
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Education Foundation marked the beginning of its fourth fiscal year with a look ahead and a look back. The CEF is designed to expand innovative, non-traditional sources of support for specific projects not funded within the school system budget.

In 1992, the Cohasset Parent Student Organization established a task force and provided seed funding of $500 to develop a local education foundation similar to those in more than 100 cities and towns in Massachusetts. In its first year, a board of directors was recruited, a name chosen (Cohasset Education Foundation) and a successful fundraiser was held at the Bill Cosby show at the Music Circus. The year was largely devoted to getting established as an organization. By-laws were written, non-profit status obtained, a mission statement was developed and a brochure mailed town-wide. At year's end, a grant of $10,000 was made to the CEF's first project, the computer center for the Osgood elementary school.

In 1993-4, the board was broadened and diversified with ten new board members. Committee roles were better defined to assist in fundraising efforts. At year's end the CEF was able to complete the funding for the Osgood Computer Center with a grant of $12,000.

During 1994-5 significant project goals were achieved and advanced,

- the first annual Cohasset Spelling Bee, a combined effort with the PSO, raised $2200 for the project fund;
- $10,000 grant was secured from the Cohasset Conservation Trust, which is funding a year-long Naturalist in Residence program, intended to enhance the science instruction at the middle and elementary levels by using nature trails near the schools.
- the Skillful Teacher Program designed to enhance teacher classroom skills, was supported with a CEF grant of $4000;
- and a $1,000 grant from the South Shore Playhouse was earmarked for a potter's wheel for the Deer Hill School art program.

Fiscal 1995-6 began with a successful fall reception at the South Shore Arts Center which raised nearly $10,000 for the CEF's next major project funding a new Foreign Language Resource Center for the High School. A technology committee of the CEF is working with the High School's Foreign Language Department to ensure that the equipment selected for the lab provides the best value and flexibility for the school. The CEF is seeking to raise $60,000 toward this project. Looking ahead, the second annual Cohasset Spelling Bee will be held Feb. 28, — So BE Prepared!

The CEF is also seeking corporate sponsorships to support its projects and will be working to establish an active Cohasset Alumni Development organization to encourage all alumni/alumnae to support their "Alma Mater."

The excitement the CEF generated at its inception has been validated by its steady growth. The CEF expects to continue to support excellence and innovation in the Cohasset schools.

People interested in learning more about the mission of the CEF and its activities are encouraged to call 383-2833 or to write to the Cohasset Education Foundation P.O. Box 224, Cohasset 02025, for a copy of our brochure and additional information on our programs. As a registered non-profit organization all donations to our project fund are completely tax-deductible and dedicated to enhancing the educational environment for Cohasset public school students.

CANDIDATES' CORNER

Gjesteby announces re-election bid

Selectman Martha Gjesteby has announced that she will seek a fourth term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

At the present she also serves as Cohasset's representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. She has represented Cohasset on the council since 1981 and also has served four years as treasurer. She also served as assistant treasurer and secretary.

Currently she is second vice president of the Massachusetts Selectman's Association, vice chairman of the Public Works Committee and a member of the executive committee of the Massachusetts Association of Cities and Towns. She is also an appointed member of the Governor's local government advisory council.

In addition, Gjesteby has been chairman of the ten-town South Shore Coalition studying such regional issues as solid waste, transportation and shared purchasing.

She is a former member of the Cohasset School Committee (two terms), Planning Board and Capital Budget Committee. While her four children were in the Cohasset public schools she served on the Jr./Sr. High Schools Communication Councils and was chair of the Council Steering Committee. She also is a former member of the health, physical education and athletic subcommittee for the school committee.

All the Gjesteby children graduated from the Cohasset schools and continued their education at New England colleges.

During Gjesteby's tenure, the selectmen have worked to create a more efficient town government. They spearheaded the drive for a new town garage to serve a combined public works department. Civilian dispatchers, trained to handle all public safety calls including the new E-911 emergency system, are now in place, making it possible to use all our fire and police department personnel more efficiently. And the secretarial pool concept is now in its beginning stages at town hall.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby

Gjesteby is committed to keeping Cohasset a safe and healthy place to live. She believes that her support for the water system renovation, the implementation of proposed sewer plans, and a favorable disposition, for the town, of the Cohasset Heights Landfill issue will go a long way towards making this goal a success.

A long-time Cohasset resident, Gjesteby has constantly demonstrated strong interest and commitment to the town. She is a member and past board member of the Community Center and the Community Garden Club. She also is a member of both the Cohasset Historic Society and Friends of Paul Pratt Library.

She is a graduate of Simmons College with a B.S. in chemistry. She lives on Old Pasture Road with her husband Arne.

The committee to elect Gjesteby, Treasurer is Douglas Peck of 63 Windy Hill Road, Cohasset.

Federico speaks at Democratic Institute

Annie Federico of Marshfield, a candidate for Democratic State Committee, was a featured speaker at the Massachusetts Democratic Campaign Institute held Jan. 26-27 in Springfield. More than 500 Democratic activists from across the state attended the Institute. Federico spoke about effective fundraising for city, ward and town committees. She pointed out Co-Op 8, the South Shore's Democratic co-operative of eight town committees, recently held a fundraiser at Barker's tavern in Scituate featuring newly elected Senate President Thomas Birmingham.

U.S. Rep. Joseph Kennedy and U.S. Senator John Kerry were keynote speakers for the Campaign Institute.

Federico's name will appear on the March 5 primary ballot. Her opponent, Karen DeTellis, is from Weymouth.

Health board should stop CHL expansion

Midway C&D landfill has become a Superfund site that was expected to cost $30 million to close! Perhaps this is a worst-case scenario, but can Cohasset afford to allow expansion of a facility that has the potential to become a bankrupting environmental disaster?

On a more mundane note, did you know that gypsum drywall (sheetrock) can decompose anaerobically to produce toxic, foul-smelling hydrogen sulfide? I'd imagine sheetrock does find its way into most C&D landfills.

CHL's expert on landfill gases, Mr. Frederick Rice, estimated that the gas collection system would capture 70-85 percent of the gases generated by the landfill and that the burn-off flares would eliminate 99+percent of those gases. What about the 15-30 percent of uncollected gases? Do we simply breathe the remainder?

Mr. Rice admitted that there was "no way on God's earth" anyone can corroborate the 70-85 percent collection amount. He said, "Landfill gas management is not a science. It's an art." According to Mr. Rice, the success of the gas collection system depends significantly on the operator. He was very careful to say that a correctly managed system may help with the odor. Once again there are no guarantees.

The longer I listen to these hearings and the more I learn about the potential impacts, the more I feel like CHL is performing an artful dodge. Mr. Barry has the right to use his property as he chooses, but if his choice threatens the public health, the Board of Health has the right and the duty to protect our town and stop this expansion.

Red Cross thanks blood donors

To the editor:

The most recent blood shortage caused by severe New England weather led to an appeal for donations by the American Red Cross. It is a reminder to everyone how important blood donation is to the maintenance of our blood supply. We thank members of the community who responded by giving the gift of life.

Across the nation, only six percent of those eligible to participate in the volunteer blood donor program do so. However, many of us will require a blood transfusion at some time during our lives. Clearly, more people are needed to become blood donors, during the winter and all year long. Those who already participate in the blood donor program are asked to try to give as often as they are eligible (up to six times a year).

We thank the selfless heroes in the community who maintain the supply of blood by helping those who are ill. Donors do not know whose life was saved — only that somewhere a patient has been given another chance. They give their blood and their time to an important, life-saving program.

Blood is a life-saving, national resource that must be available each and every day. Blood donated today will save several lives in days to come. Most people believe a unit of blood goes to only one person. In fact, it is separated into components to help at least two, and often three or more patients in need of transfusion. Advances in medicine allow blood and blood products to be used in treating diseases of the heart, kidney, liver and bone marrow, as well as many other illnesses and accident-related traumas.

The American Red Cross invites you to carry the spirit of the holiday season into the New Year, by giving the gift that saves lives. Simply call the Red Cross at 1-800-GIVE-LIFE. You can play a critical part in maintaining a precious, life-saving resource for our community.

Cohasset Jr./Sr. High Council meets

On the agenda of the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School Council was the proposed budget for this year. The council feels that this budget represents a maintenance of effort. General highlights were as follows:

No new academic positions; slight increase in administration; new coaching positions (football and hockey); some equipment replacement; and computer presenter program set-up.

All departments are looking to increase technology capabilities.

Specific budget items per department were further discussed as follows: math/science department looking to build computer design centers (CAD) for pre-engineering and architecture, five stations requested this year; family and consumer science will become part of the health ed. department. They are requesting software to be used in their department in the areas of health, nutrition and fitness.

The athletic department requested new equipment (i.e. track) and replacement of equipment that is worn and unsafe. If football is expanded to three teams there will be more participants needing helmets and uniforms.

The maintenance entries were mostly problems and repairs as well as the tools necessary to do them.

The library request to add a clerical assistant is not included in the budget at this time.

The School Improvement Plan was finally approved by the school committee, but not without further discussion regarding pursuit of excellence and the expectations placed on the students.

Air quality problems dominate landfill session

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

Air quality took center stage at the Feb. 8 Board of Health's site assignment hearing on the proposed 27.5 acre expansion to the privately-owned Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

Speaking for the Board of Health were consultants Robert Weimar and Cynthia Hibbard from the engineering firm of Camp, Dresser & McKee. Weimar is a vice-president while Hibbard is the firm's senior air quality scientist.

Weimar stated that, in being asked to determine impacts to the town from an expanded landfill, his firm had found that the use of a Materials Processing Operation (MPO) would be a considerable danger to the air quality of area residents.

Adding that MPO's by nature are continuous dust generators, Weimar noted that the number of years (5-6) which this facility is to operate is of major concern.

The proposed intake of 100 tons per day of construction and demolition debris designated for recycling, in Weimar's opinion, is not a large enough quantity to justify daily running of the MPO and he estimated this stage of an expanded landfill would only be in operation one week out of every month.

Therefore, he reasoned, the stockpiling and subsequent movement of materials awaiting recycling would have the potential to emit large amounts of dust, particularly in the summertime when winds traveling in an east-west direction would transport dust over neighboring wooded areas.

"This type of operation will cause varying conditions depending on weather by creating an opaque cloud leaving the area and causing a danger to Whitney Woods. It could impair the ability to see or smell and cover vegetation," he warned.

"The dust generated at the MPO facility will be a nuisance in the Whitney Woods area in our opinion," he concluded.

Hibbard, in echoing Weimar's observations, offered hard statistical data to back up her argument.

She said that based on Environmental Protection Agency dust emission studies, the MPO facility alone could exceed national air quality standards under certain weather conditions within a radius of the landfill.

Daily dust emission rates would be approximately 5.8 lbs. on average, though on a day in which the MPO facility was operating this figure could be as high as 28 lbs. per day. Stretched out over a year this would translate into 9.2 tons of dust being emitted into the surrounding air (the remaining landfill would generate a further 34 tons of dust) of which 3.1 tons would be breathable, Hibbard stated.

In defining how she came to her totals, Hibbard stated she was extremely careful to give the benefit of the doubt to Cohasset Heights at every possible step of her study, even to the point of estimating the reduction of 75 per cent of potential MPO dust by daily watering.

On behalf of the Consolidated 10-Citizen Groups, local anesthesiologist Dr. Charles Kelly told the board that many of the chemicals emitted by the landfill (provided from a list of 82 substances) are classified by the 1990 Clean Air Act as toxic. He selected several and described their potential effects to humans.

Under cross-examination from Cohasset Heights attorney Anton Moehrke Kelly admitted he could not accurately predict what effects these substances would produce from an expanded landfill based on the information provided in CHL's application.

Moehrke, calling Kelly's testimony "highly prejudicial and inflammatory," demanded the testimony be stricken from the evening's proceedings. Hearing Officer John Shea denied the motion.

On a housekeeping matter, Shea requested all parties leave open Saturday, March 2, as a make-up session to help return the hearings to their initial six-week schedule.

Landfill expansion hearings set

Site assignment hearings by the Board of Health on the proposed 27.5-acre "Area V" expansion of Cohasset Heights landfill have been scheduled. Hearings are held on either Tuesdays or Thursdays from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. at either Cohasset Town Hall or the Second Congregational Church. Meetings are as follows:

Feb. 20-22: No hearings; Feb. 27, Town Hall: Water supply protection issues; Feb. 29, Town Hall: Water supply protection issues; March 2 (place and time to be determined): Statements of individuals who on Jan. 23 requested to speak; March 5, Second Congregational: Need for facility and recycling issues; March 7, Second Congregational: Closing statements by parties.

It should be noted that the meetings are not public hearings. The only people allowed to speak are the parties, who may present evidence for the record through expert and lay witnesses. Parties who have been accepted for the hearings are: Cohasset Heights; Town of Cohasset (Board of Selectmen, Conservation Commission and Water Commission), represented by environmental attorney Ken Kimmell; Town of Hingham (Board of Health and Conservation Commission); Trustees of Reservations and a consolidation of the Ten-Citizen Groups, represented by Kevin O'Donnell, John McNabb, Jim Kinch and David McMorris.

The Board of Health, since it is now in a quasi-judicial role, is taking no advocacy role in the proceedings. On March 2, Cohasset and Hingham residents who petitioned to participate in the hearings will be allowed to speak.

The hearings will be broadcast live on Cohasset Cable Channel 3.

SandCastles' open enrollment

SandCastles Childcare Center will hold an open enrollment, beginning Feb. 15, for summer and fall programs for infant, pre-toddler, toddler and pre-school programs. SandCastles, located at 152 King St., Route 3A, also has a nursery school program available.

Hours are weekdays from 7 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. For further information, call Michelle Manganaro, director, at 383-9987. Space is limited.

SSCC launches capital campaign

The South Shore Community Center, which has served the community for 53 years, has launched a capital campaign, which includes a phon-a-thon during February and March. The purpose of the fundraising effort is to raise capital to help rebuild during a time of increasing financial strain.

Sue DiPesa, president of the SSCC said, "Unless we get financial support, the board will have to take drastic steps to eliminate our standing debt. It's time to rebuild and we can't do it on a foundation of old debt.

". . . We have made every effort to cut back expenses without cutting back services. We have already cut back salaries; any further cutback will involve programs."

Conway Realtors and Hingham Institution for Savings have offered their sites for the fundraising effort. Conway personnel from four South Shore offices and Wearguard telesales employees will contribute their time manning the phones, and WATD-FM Radio is donating air time for the project.

Executive Director Nina Belsan is optimistic about the campaign, while DiPesa expressed her appreciation to members who have already shown their support by being the first contributors.

Anyone wishing to make a donation or volunteer to help with the capital campaign is asked to call the Center at 383-0088.

Vermeer exhibit visited

Juliette G. Reid of Duxbury and Mrs. John Bleakie, Mrs. Edward Guild and Polly Logan of Cohasset had a private tour of 21 Vermeer paintings with Massachusetts native Arthur K. Wheelock, the National Gallery's curator of Northern Baroque, who organized the exhibit of paintings from around the world.

Wheelock said there have not been so many Vermeer paintings assembled in one place since 1696, when one family's collection of 21 of his works was auctioned off in Amsterdam. He considers Vermeer's "View of Delft" one of the great masterpieces in the history of art.

The exhibit closed Feb. 11. The only other showing will be at the Mauritshuis in the Hague from March 1 through June 2.

The four women also viewed the new exhibit of 45 Louis-Leopold Boilly paintings, including "A Game of Billards" and "Moving Day," at the National Art Gallery, which will be exhibited through April 28. Boilly is known as Napoleon's Norman Rockwell.

Computers can give classes a window to the world

Technology adds dimension to learning

By DOREEN LEGGETT
Cohasset Mariner

School committee members filed into a science classroom Feb. 1 to see arthroscopic knee surgery. Seventh-grade students had watched the procedure earlier that day.

The surgery was courtesy of the internet and previously performed at the Orthopedic Institute of Southern California. By clicking on a couple of computer icons, Ken Cisneros, a science teacher, was able to display the surgery on a 27-inch television screen.

The demonstration was a glimpse of how technology can be used to enhance education.

Supt. Stephen Hart said since the schools were often asking for additional computers or software in the budget it was important that committee members see the value.

Cisneros had high praise for the technology.

"It has just been unbelievable for me in the classroom," he said. "And the kids really do enjoy it."

The students have been studying the skeletal system. Carpal tunnel syndrome had been mentioned in the text, said Cisneros. As part of the lesson he showed the condition on the television. And then an operation rectifying the condition.

"It didn't last long," he said with a smile. "They didn't get sick."

Before he received the equipment that demonstration would have been impossible. And, he said, the students understood the condition much better than they would have if they just saw a picture in the textbook.

"As a teacher I'm very pleased with what the school has done in terms of technology," he said. " And the Parent Student Organization (PSO) has been very responsive to teachers."

He gave numerous examples of how the computer could be used as an educational tool. One student had questioned if a plant cell wall only covered a certain portion of the cell.

Of course, it looks that way if one looks at a one-dimensional picture. If you look at a picture in the textbook you see the wall and then all the organelles inside. It even looks that way under a microscope.

The computer, Cisneros demonstrated, shows the cell in a three-dimensional form so it becomes clear that all the organelles are encased in the cell wall.

Cisneros can also zoom in on the image on the screen and use a computer marker to underline or circle certain structures.

"Looking at things on the television is totally different than pointing to the board or a chart," he said. "The students really like it. They really do like to watch television."

Cisneros said technology's place was not only in his classroom. It can be used to enhance all subjects.

"People think of the internet as a grandiose library," he said. "That is not the function."

Students can also work on projects with other children across the globe. At the end of the year they will be involved with several information projects. For one project students gather information on whales and enter it into the computer where it joins data collected by other students.

Students can study all the pooled research on the web page — the "whale net. "

In other school committee business:

* Caitlin Connolly and Ryan Sawchuk were chosen to represent Cohasset High School at the Presidential Classroom program. Presidential Classroom is a non-profit organization that sponsors a week-long political forum where students throughout the country discuss political issues. Connolly and Sawchuk have sent out letters to various groups asking them to help defray the $845 cost.

* Hart said that the budget was up 2.8 percent from last year, but cautioned that the number does not yet include negotiated salary increases. It does include step increases. He added that in the future the budget will be driven by enrollment and state mandates. A public hearing on the budget will be held Feb. 15.

Contaminated harbor silt less than expected

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

As Cohasset awaits passage of a federal navigation act that will allow badly needed dredging to take place, there is good news from engineers on the condition of silt material that will be removed within the town and state portions of the harbor.

In a November report from the Army Corps of Engineers, Cohasset was notified of several "hot spots" of heavy metals throughout silt material within town portion of Cohasset Harbor — material that would not likely be suitable for ocean dumping.

According to Selectman Peter Pratt, this report concerned local officials for several reasons. Inland landfill disposal for dredged materials can cost up to nine times more than ocean dumping and Pratt said these disposal costs alone would have exhausted town appropriated funds for the project.

But more recent report showed that a smaller area — about 1,200 cubic yards near Lawrence Wharf between the upper cove and the Chart House was contaminated with mercury. Pratt said how the mercury got there is "a substantial mystery."

At about $100 per cubic yard for inland landfill disposal, Pratt said the cost should run about $120,000. The entire town and state portion should come in under the combined appropriation of $400,000 Pratt said.

The lion's share of the dredging work, more than $1.2 million, will go on the federal government's tab as the area of federal jurisdiction makes up between 65,000 and 90,000 cubic yards, Pratt said.

Funding for federal work hinges on redefining the area of federal jurisdiction which must be accomplished through an Act of Congress.

Pratt spent the better part of the summer working with local and federal legislators to get the process moving and giant strides were made during the summer as senators Edward Kennedy and John Kerry filed legislation on redefining the federal lines of navigation.

Congressman Gerry Studds, a Cohasset native, filed the same bill in the house. Pratt said the Cohasset legislation, which was attached to the Coast Guard Authorization Bill, passed in the senate and is awaiting conference committee to bring it to the House floor for a vote.

While Pratt said he is concerned about the delay in this process, he is encouraged by "bipartisan" support in the House for the bill. In addition to Studds, Pratt said U.S. Rep. Peter Blute a Republican, representing the 3rd Congressional District, also supports the bill.

Pratt believes the bill will pass and as soon as it does, the Army Corps of Engineers will be able to step up the permitting process.

Assuming the act passes this spring, the Army Corps looks to do the dredging in the fall of 1997 but Pratt is more ambitious.

"I'd like to see it dredged in the fall of 1996," he said.

According to Pratt, there is a sense of urgency among Cohasset's commercial fisherman, who have increasing difficulty getting through the federal channel during low tide. Off shore winter nor'easters have made the situation considerably worse, he said.

Also eager for the passage of the Cohasset Navigation Act is the Cohasset Yacht Club which awaits permission to re-configure its slips and add up to 82 mooring spaces for this boating season.

Pratt said additional slips will help to reduce the town's lengthy mooring waiting list and increase revenues for future harbor dredging projects.

Pratt noted that most of the town's dredging funds have come through mooring fees and said he believes that over time the harbor and all of its agencies and departments should be self-supporting.

Diversity committee has successful year

By KATHLEEN OFSTHUN
Special to the Mariner

In its first year, the Cohasset Diversity Committee has accomplished many things, from the establishment of a mission statement to sponsorship and execution of a variety of programs. Broadly, the committee seeks to promote respect for all individuals as well as the purposeful inclusion of diversity in our lives. Many of the activities have focused on the schools, since they are an appropriate and accessible arena. The community at large is the targeted audience.

In 1995, these successful activities were sponsored by the group:

- spring fundraiser at the South Shore Art Center featuring foods from many countries. (This event funded the following activities);
- two Harborfest acts: Chinese dancers and Spanish dancers with a guitarist'
- fall 1995 teacher seminar through "World of Difference," which was attended by 13 Cohasset teachers and administrators;
- personal Holocaust testimony from Ester Gens for Cohasset High School juniors;
- participation in grade-school book fairs and donation of materials for the Deer Hill library;
- ongoing participation in school curriculum meetings;
- ongoing collaboration with the Parent School Organization and the Cohasset Education Foundation;
- ongoing sale of "Diversity Enlightens" T-shirts.

Upcoming events include publishing an international cookbook, sponsorship of a puppet show for pre-schoolers and their parents, funding a week-long intense study of Japanese culture for Deer Hill students with dance Nikki Hu, providing funds for the Art of Black Dance and Music at the high school and repeating successful events like Harborfest and the Holocaust presentation.

Anyone who would like to become involved with the Cohasset Diversity Committee, specifically work on any of the projects mentioned or who would like to attend the group's next meeting on Feb. 26 at 7:30 p.m., is asked to call Susan Etkind (383-6602) or Nancy Herlin (383-1463).

that (the school committee) made a change in the school year calendar without taking into consideration the input of parents, teachers and students."

She added that she considered it a victory that the school committee took the concerns of the community to heart and made the switch back.

Ryan Sawchuk, student council representative to the committee who was also involved in the protest, said the decision should not have been made in the first place. But if the decision was made to improve education, he said, the committee should have stuck with it for a couple of years to see if there was a positive change.

At the May 30 meeting the school committee agreed to take the issue under advisement. The committee had done an informal survey in the town and found that there was support for a one-vacation model.

At the time, Cohasset's Parent Teacher Organization said parents approved the change by a 2-to-1 margin.

On the other hand, teachers were largely in favor of the two-vacation model. Hart said that many teachers had children attending school in a different town.

To get a better feeling of parents' stance on the issue the school committee sent out 774 vacation surveys in June of last year. Parents were asked to check which vacation system they preferred and whether or not switching the planned March vacation back for 1996 would be an inconvenience.

Of the 442 surveys returned, 63 percent favored the two-vacation model and 36 percent the March model, some had no preference. The same survey showed that many people would have been inconvenienced by switching back for 1996.

The committee looked to make a change in the first place to improve educational continuity. One of the committees' arguments was that under the two-vacation system students had less uninterrupted learning. At the meeting in May, Ralph Kidder, school committee chairman, said that only 13 of the 36 weeks in the school year contained five school days.

He recently stated that the number of school days in a year, 180, remains the same under both vacation models. However, he added, the committee was trying to maximize the time they were given.

The major argument of the students was that Cohasset would be isolated. The surrounding communities still went by the traditional schedule which would cause problems in the programming of certain sports events and The Globe Drama Festival.

Additionally, trips to Belize and France are scheduled during the traditional time frame. This year the students going on those trips will have to make-up one or two weeks of work.

The committee had been discussing the switch years before they implemented it. At the time, members state, the trend across the state was towards the one-vacation system.

A survey had been sent out to the 351 communities in the Commonwealth and a number of them had changed, were seriously considering the change, or were studying a change of the vacation model. As it turns out, the groundswell towards the March vacation schedule abruptly dissipated.

Paul Previte and Michael Grimm excavate a snow fort on a "snow day" off from school early last month. Unlike their counterparts in other towns, Cohasset students will be in school next week because school officials opted for a single winter vacation in March this year (see related story). Next year, the school schedule returns to the traditional weeks in February and April.

The one-vacation system is popular outside of New England.

This past November, Cohasset officials appealed to the state to perhaps support a regional change. However, the state did not want to get involved.

Kidder said that the committee stands by its decision that the one-week system made more educational sense, but said the divisiveness of the issue outweighed the benefits.

Santoro said that if other communities were pursuing the March vacation and if students' input was taken into account before the decision was made, than a one-week vacation was fine.

The issue, she stressed, was not the decision itself, but the way it was made.

Sawchuk agreed.

"A lot of students felt they hadn't been heard on the issue," he said.

Kidder said the students were right.

"We (committee members) are fallible," he said. "We should have involved the students more."

He did add that representatives from the student body sit on the school committee and attend the meetings.

The vacation issue will resurface, Kidder said, but perhaps for a different reason. The state Board of Education is looking at extending the school day or the school year which will bring up a host of questions on where vacations will fall.

Kidder said that student input would certainly be solicited.

"Having two vacations is a luxury whose time has past," he added.

Spelling bee fundraiser set

The second annual Cohasset Spelling Bee Fundraiser will be held in the Cohasset High School cafeteria on Wednesday, Feb. 28, from 7 to 9 p.m. Curt Collins, Cohasset High School's principal, will be the moderator for the event.

The format will be round robin single elimination style, with each team having a chance during each round until the field is narrowed to a grand prize winner. Teams will consist of three members, with team sponsorship set at $150. All proceeds will benefit the project funds of the Cohasset Education Foundation, which is sponsoring the event. All contributions and fees are tax deductible.

The competition is limited to adult team members, since students will have their own spelling competition in the spring. Refreshments will be provided by local business sponsors.

Computer night is slated

The Cohasset P.T.O. will present a computer night for parents Thursday, Feb. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Computer teachers Bob Knurek and Marge Murphy will discuss how computers are being integrated into Osgood, Deer Hill, junior and senior high school curriculum. A present comparison of our system to other towns will be made. Changes and goals for computer education in the future will also be addressed.

Information on how to include computer hardware as well as recommended software programs for each grade level will be provided.

Potential access problems on the Internet will also be addressed.

The evening will conclude with a question and answer period.

Geography bee winners named

Susan Buhr of Hingham won the school-level competition of the National Geography Bee held at Derby Academy. This brings her a step closer to winning the $25,000 college scholarship offered to the first-place national winner. Buhr is an eighth-grade student at Derby.

Runners-up included Geoffrey McWilliams and Wiley Wakeman of Cohasset and Patrick Lenehan of Hingham.

Students answered oral questions on geography in the first round of the geography bee, which is sponsored by National Geographic WORLD, the society's magazine for children, and AMTRAK. Buhr will now take a written test, with up to 100 of the top scorers in each state and territory eligible to compete in their state bee.

This year's geography bee involves students in the fourth through eighth grades in more than 45,000 schools across the United States, the District of Columbia and five U.S. territories, as well as Department of Defense schools around the world.

'Golden Year' at Osgood

The Joseph Osgood School is hoping to make 1996 a "Golden Year." Students and teachers are thinking about how they would like to be treated so that they can treat others in the same caring way.

Marian Atkinson's third-grade class members have demonstrated their "golden thinking" and generous natures by contributing $335 to the Clougherty Family Fund to honor and support their classmate Leo Clougherty.

Bishop, Hardwick key hoopsters

By JIM O'SULLIVAN
Special to the Mariner

The Hull Pirates came to town Friday night in an attempt to topple the Skippers. However, it was not to be, as the Skippers dominated their neighboring rivals, crushing them by a score of 66-40. Led by Ryan Bishop and Jared Hardwick, who each tossed in 19 points, Ron Ford's team got excellent efforts from everyone.

Burke Davis, Paul-Michael Quintin, Matt Belson, Brian Kilroy and J.L. Williams started the game for the Skippers. Belson played what may have been his best game of the season, grabbing several rebounds, playing feisty defense and heady offense. Despite strong defensive efforts from the starters, the Skippers just couldn't get their shots to fall in the beginning, having several roll around the rim and out.

Justin McNamara, a sophomore guard, came in and provided the spark the Skippers needed, with great passing and even better defense. Quinine finally broke the ice by nailing a jump shot six minutes into the game, making it 10-2, in favor of the Pirates. Hardwick hit a free throw and tossed a lob to Bishop on an inbound. Bishop put it in for a pair, Hardwick and Williams each knocked down threes and Fred Howard popped a jumper from 15 feet.

Kilroy used his long arms to come up with a big block, which set up a long three pointer swished by Quintin. Hardwick jockeyed his way through traffic in the paint for a fierce slam dunk that brought the Skipper fans and bench to their feet. Quintin then pulled off a nearly impossible play, one which, according to all sources, has never before happened in Cohasset basketball history. He swished a trey, nothing out of the ordinary for the sophomore guard, and got fouled, still nothing exotic. His ensuing free throw made it a four point play, extraordinary but not spectacular. Then, he received another free throw, which he also sank, completing a five-point play. Hardwick's free throw made it 26-16 and sent the Skippers into the lockerroom on a 26-6 run.

Bishop began the second half with a nifty turnaround move and followed up with a lefty hook. Davis found Bishop underneath for two more, making it 32-16. Hardwick iced two free throws, then reeled off four points in a row, two off a jumper and one when Bishop hit the senior forward with a great pass for a pair. Bish hit another turnaround, this one bringing the Skippers up to 40 points, 21 ahead of Hull. Williams nailed a three-pointer, and Bishop stuck a fade away jump shot.

Hardwick hit two more from the charity stripe and Bishop, who scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half, took a pass from Williams to the rack for another bucket. Hardwick found Davis for a lay-up and Bishop's block on defense set up the big guy for a free throw at the other end. A head-fake and nice low-post move netted Bishop his 18th and 19th points of the night. Hardwick broke free and, when he reached half-court, drew shouts of excitement from the crowd, then threw down a tomahawk slam dunk.

Kilroy's two free throws and a layup by Howard after Lutz Grunwald skied for a rebound capped a 62-17 Skipper run. Grunwald took a charge on the defensive end for Cohasset and Kilroy swished two more free throws. Grant Emde threw a shot fake that deked a Hull defender out of the gym, while Emde streaked by for a layup. Emde's layup ended Cohasset's scoring barrage, and the final score ended up 66-40.

The Skippers hosted the Carver Crusaders, who handed them one of their three league losses in their last meeting, Wednesday and results will appear in next week's Mariner.

Caldwell clinches wrestlers' highest place ever in sectionals

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

As two solid days of wrestling in last week's Division 3 South Sectional meet was coming to a close, the Cohasset High wrestling team was still in the midst of a fierce battle.

Enter Nate Caldwell.

The Skippers' heavyweight pinned his opponent to win the division and pulled Cohasset back into third-place tie with Dedham as a result.

Both teams finished with 159 points. Foxboro won the meet and Carver placed second.

Cohasset's overall finish was certainly noteworthy. After finishing fifth in seven of the past nine sectional meets, the Skippers' third-place showing marked their highest finish ever in the event.

The Skippers were also the second-smallest school in the meet, enrollment-wise, to Holbrook.

Cohasset will advance a staggering 11 wrestlers to this weekend's All-State meet at Wayland High, the most to qualify for the prestigious competition since 1988. The Skippers will be hoping to continue the four-year streak of finishing in the top 10.

"Hopefully with eleven guys we can keep the string going," said head coach Torin Sweeney. "Obviously, the more kids you have wrestling, the better shot you have in scoring more points."

Sweeney is one coach who knows the value of having a lot of wrestlers. Earlier in the week Sweeney reached a milestone with his 100th win in Cohasset's victory over Holbrook. Sweeney, though, was quick to credit the wrestlers he has coached over the last 13 years for making it possible.

"Sure it's 100 wins for me, but it's the kids that do all the wrestling," Sweeney said. "I owe the credit to them."

Caldwell, though, was another one of his wrestlers to come through.

Cohasset was dead even with Dedham, heading into the final three matches. The Gymnasts cop slew of awards in SSL meet

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset High's gymnastics team came away from Friday's South Shore League meet with enough hardware to open its own business.

The Skippers, who marched out in the procession sporting their new SSL champion T-shirts, won a combined 10 medals, had one league champion, three All-Stars and coach of the year.

Tara Hettstrom won the league championship with her sparkling 8.35 on the floor routine. Hettstrom, along with Jodi Colwill and Erica Hettstrom, were picked as league All-Stars on the floor exercise, vault and balance beam, respectively. Erica Hettstrom wound up with the highest league average on the beam with her 8.46.

Erica Hettstrom, though, was unable to compete in the meet and is questionable for this weekend's South Sectional competition. She sustained possible torn ligaments in her knee after an accidental kick while playing soccer in co-ed gym class caught her square.

"My heart goes out to the kid," head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni said.

Erica Hettstrom won the all-around title as a freshman, but hasn't been able to compete the last two years. Last year she had a case of mononucleosis which shelved her from the competition.

Colwill finished third in the all-around this year with a score of 31.1. She had outstanding scores of 8.1 (vault), 8.4 (beam), 7.2 (bars) and 7.4 (floor) to grab the third-place slot.

In the individual events, Tara Hettstrom also took third on the bars (7.3) and Megan Pratt was right on her heels in fourth (7.25).

Ardizzoni called the team's performance on the beam "unbelievable" as four Cohasset gymnasts garnered medals. Pratt was second (8.05), followed by Captain Tafana Fiore in fourth (8.0), Kristen Reynolds' fifth (7.95) and Lauren Genovese in sixth (7.85).

Reynolds got fifth on the vault (7.9) while Pratt was sixth on the floor exercise (7.85). Carolyn Pratt also had a strong meet with solid showings on both the vault and floor exercise.

Ardizzoni said she fully expected Hanover coach Dan Hannigan to win the coach of the year award because of the improvement the Indians made in their scores as the season continued. Ardizzoni previously won the honor during the '92-93 season.

"I was really surprised," she said. "I usually don't get voted for those things so I was very shocked that I did get it."

Caldwell clinches highest place

Marauders put the pressure squarely on Caldwell's shoulders when they swept all three matches.

A win by Caldwell would simply not be good enough. He had to pin his opponent to draw the Skippers back alongside Dedham.

Caldwell battled for two full periods and held a 7-6 lead before he finally flipped his opponent on his back and forced a pin victory.

"It was real exciting because there was a lot on the line," Sweeney said. "The kids knew we had never been better than fifth so they were going in trying for as many pins as they could

"I was certainly pleased and I'm sure they were pleased too. They were exhausted at the end but happy with what they accomplished."

Although Caldwell was the lone sectional champion, several other grapplers medaled.

Justin Buckley finished second at 171 pounds and freshman Mike Baird wrestled to a third-place finish in the 112-pound category. Kevin Duffy, who placed fifth in the All-State meet last year, took third at 135 pounds and freshman Luke Caldwell was fourth at 160.

Freshmen Jordan Fiore (130) and Mike Rossi (145) both copped sixth in their respective divisions. Doug Sherrin, who was originally going to the states as an alternate based on his seventh-place finish at 140, will wrestle because of an injury to a Holbrook grappler.

The other alternates include senior Captain John Whitehouse (152), freshman Ben Littauer (119) and freshman Adam Sasso (189).

Police nab suspected Beechwood burglar

Thanks to cooperation among police in Cohasset, Scituate, Pembroke, and Watertown, a suspect in two recent house breaks last month on Beechwood Avenue has been apprehended, Det. Rick Grassie said, and about $1,500 worth of the stolen electronic equipment was recovered.

Cohasset police charged Chad Gorman, 17, with two counts of breaking and entering in the daytime. Gorman plead not guilty when he was arraigned on those charges and additional charges in connection with a series of recent house breaks in Pembroke Friday (Feb. 9) in Plymouth District Court. Gorman is being held on $1,000 bail, Grassie said.

Police explained that the resident, who lives in one of the homes that were broken into on Beechwood Street, was able to describe the suspect whom she had seen in the vicinity on the day of the break-in and on two subsequent occasions.

Grassie said he received a tip on what the suspect's first name was and with that information contacted Scituate Officer Michael Stewart who came up with the last name of the suspect who was known to Scituate police on an unrelated matter. Grassie put the name through the Bureau of Criminal Investigation which provided a picture. He learned Pembroke police were looking for the same alleged thief in connection with break-ins in that town. Gorman, who lives in Watertown, was arrested by Watertown police on Pembroke and Cohasset warrants Thursday (Feb. 8), Grassie said.

"Through luck and hard work, we were able to put it all together," Grassie said.

Shrove Tuesday supper planned

Folksinger and songwriter David Crossland will be featured at the Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper at St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset on Feb. 20. Shrove Tuesday is the last day before the start of Lent, with pancakes the traditional fare.

Pancakes and sausage will be served at 6:30 p.m., followed by the concert.

The supper is another in a continuing series of events celebrating the centennial of Saint Stephen's Church, which was founded in 1896 by 21 people who met in the old Central School house atop Bourne Rock, where the church now stands.

On March 17, Saint Patrick's Day, storyteller Jay O'Callahan will perform two of his favorite tales.

CDC to present 'Blithe Spirit'

The Cohasset Drama Club will present "Blithe Spirit," a Noel Coward comedy, on Feb. 23, 24, March 8 and 9 at 8 p.m. and on Feb. 25 at 2 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall.

The play tells of a man happily married to his second wife, who is suddenly confronted by the ghost of his first wife. The ghost calmly announces that she intends to live with the couple indefinitely, resulting in a series of hilarious events.

The cast includes Sharon Evans of Hingham and Holly Harris of Cohasset.

Tickets are available at Buttonwood Bookstore, Scituate Front Street Books and Wilbur's or at the door. For reservations, call 545-3195.

Concert at CHS, Feb. 16

On Friday, Feb. 16, Force Productions will present music by J-Bass, Fun in the Kitchen, Drain, Stick Figure Stanley, Blind, Industrial Dance from Boston and Pugg at Cohasset High School Auditorium. Admission is $5.

For further information, call 824-7680.

Women's health is topic

Women of Cohasset and Hingham are invited to attend a Homemaking meeting at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St., Hingham, on Thursday, Feb. 15, at 7 p.m. Susan Lee of Duxbury, a registered nurse, will speak about women's health issues. She is enrolled in the UMass family nurse practitioner program.

Hingham resident Carolyn Nielsen will demonstrate basic breadmaking. For more information, call Polly Doggett at 383-1847.

Church to hold potluck suppers

The Beechwood Congregational Church will host potluck suppers during the next several months. Following each supper, a segment of the "Life on the Edge" video series by Dr. James Dobson of Focus on the Family will be presented.

The series offers a powerful presentation that equips teens and those who associate with them with the necessary skills for successfully dealing with the challenges of adulthood.

The suppers will begin at 6 p.m. in Merritt Hall at the church, followed by a video showing at 7 p.m.

The following programs will be offered:

Feb. 15—"Finding God's Will for Your Life"; March 21—"The Myth of Safe Sex"; April 18—"Love Must Be Tough"; May 16—"The Keys to a Lifelong Love"; June 20—"Emotions: Can You Trust Them?"; July 18—"When God Doesn't Make Sense"; Aug. 15—"Pornography: Addictive, Progressive and Deadly."

For further information, call Steve at 545-6162.

Selectmen voted to accept the recommendation of the Hagerty Property Study Committee, and sell the former furniture showroom if the property will fetch at least $200,000.

They voted four to one, with Michael Sullivan dissenting.

The matter now goes to town meeting, where voters will be asked to allow the selectmen to sell the former Cohasset Colonials Furniture site.

The board was not persuaded by an eleventh hour bid by a local oceanographer who wants to convert the property to a marine biology laboratory.

Kevin Ulmer told the selectmen Tuesday that with an option to lease the property for $1 per year, he would be able to submit grant applications to finance the teaching and research project.

Ulmer said one foundation has suggested that he resubmit an application for funds later this spring, if he has a commitment from the town to allow this use of the property.

Although the town would not receive rental income, he would undertake improvements to the property, Ulmer said. The Hagerty property's location near the harbor would allow fresh sea water to be pumped into aquaria to sustain various projects that would involve local school children, at all grade levels.

It is possible that at some future point, a formal lease agreement could be reached, he added.

But Selectman Jane Goedecke said she had not seen a commitment by the school department to integrate the lobster lab into the school science

Residents dive into water rate protest

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset resident Maria Plante owns property in both Braintree and Weymouth and remembers well how her water rates sky-rocketed when those towns became part of the regional water district (MWRA).

So when she heard that she and the other 600 or so residents in North Cohasset could expect their Massachusetts American Water Bills to triple next year, she decided not to get soaked this time.

Plante and some of her neighbors have been hard at work, establishing a letter writing campaign to local legislators and to the state Department of Public Utilities protesting the water rate hike.

The Massachusetts-American Water Company filed its rate case with the Department of Public Utilities in November and if the proposed increase is approved in full, the average rate payer will see their annual water bills go from $257 to $680.

Much of this 164 percent water rate increase is needed to

State tells train panel to get back on track

By ALICE C. COYLE

In response to complaints that the most recent meeting got out of hand, state officials have warned citizens' advisory committee to stick to the task at hand.

The state appointed citizens advisory panel with representatives from all of the Greenbush communities was created to review and comment on the MBTA's environmental feasibility studies on several transportation alternatives including rail restoration on the 17.7- mile Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad.

In a three-page letter to citizens advisory commitee chairman Terry Fancher, Assistant Secretary Jan H. Reitsma from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs clearly defined the role of the group, and warned members not to get sidetracked or disrupt committee meetings by looking into alternatives.

Fancher raised questions about the committee's role, whether it should still be considering alternatives, and how funding the project with state money will change the environmental review of the project.

Fancher's letter followed a meeting in which three new members were appointed to the committee including anti-rail Coastal Coalition activist Ilana Marks, whose questions and comments about revisiting rail alternatives at the meeting elicited applause from the audience in attendance.

Veteran citizen's advisory committee member William Grimes said that outside the meeting too, rail opponents made their presence known by carrying "no train" signs in the hallway, helping to make making this organizational committee

Spraying policy announced

The Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee has announced that residents must notify the Town Clerk's office by March 1 if they do not wish to have their property sprayed with chemicals to control adult mosquitoes during the spring and summer months.

Requests for a legal "no spray" area will be honored by the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project throughout the mosquito season. Residents should be aware that spraying with pesticides would be necessary even in a "no spray" area if eastern equine encephalitis were declared to be a serious threat by the state Department of Public Health and the governor of Massachusetts.

Route 3A driveway discussion

After hearing plans to build a driveway across some wetlands at 508 Chief Justice Cushing Way, the conservation commission last week asked the applicant to submit updated plans.

Peter Capozzoli wants to build a house on land he owns at the site. The driveway will cross some wetlands, which will be replicated elsewhere on the property.

The replicated area will be larger than the area lost to the driveway, according to Capozzoli's engineer, Wayne Sawchuk, who, along with Amy Roebuck, presented plans to the board.

Sawchuk said that because the site is so step, a paved driveway would be necessary.

Conservation commission chairman Thomas Callahan said he did not like paved driveways adjacent to wetlands because of the potential for oil, salt and sediment runoff.

At the suggestion of commission member Jeffrey Waal, Sawchuk said he would look into constructing a basin to catch and filter some runoff.

Kenneth Jason, one of several neighbors attending the meeting, urged that wetlands not be filled in, stating that the practice has caused problems in the past. He recommended a bridge over the wetlands.

Veneta Roebuck did not participate in the discussion.

ConCom sued over So. Main St. house

In a notice dated February 13, Francis and Gail Collins, 404 South Main St., filed suit to stop permission to build a nearby house.

George Hall, attorney for the Collins, alleges that a house which Ruth Sisson plans to build at 392 South Main St., will cause runoff, flooding and increase the elevation of the groundwater table on his clients' property.

In December, the commission allowed the Sisson project proceed, which includes the construction a septic system with a concrete retaining wall in a wetlands buffer zone.

Yacht Club water main OK

With a unanimous vote, the conservation commission last week allowed the Cohasset Yacht Club to lay a new water main to the club house at 99 Howard Gleason Road.

Permission of the commission was necessary since the water main will go across marsh land.

However, contractor Ross O'Donnell explained that the new main will cross a shorter distance than the existing main.

He said the replacement is necessary because the existing main is putting lead in the water.

The work will take one or two days and require a ten to 12-feet deep drench more than one foot wide.

Paul Shea, conservation agent, said the health agent would prefer that the new water main be lined with plastic.

Jacob's Meadow testing

After a brief discussion last week, the conservation commission unanimously agreed to allow the sewer commission to continue flushing Jacob's Meadow through Sept. 30.

Last fall, the commission agreed to allow the sewer commission to open the tidal gates at the entrance to the meadow six times to monitor the water level and dispersal in the marsh.

Sewer commissioner Edward "Ted" Guild said that the tidal gates were only open once, on Dec. 13.

"Nobody was out picketing us or anything," Guild said in reference to heated opposition from area residents.

During the Dec. 13 test, Guild said water levels were below the four-foot level and that fecal contamination was noted.

"We think it came from septic systems," Guild stated.

He agreed not to run more than once test a month and to notify abutters and the commission in advance of a test.

No one spoke against the project.

Selectmen consider debt exclusions for ballot

Selectmen are considering two debt exclusion questions for the April ballot, that will reduce the amounts of future tax overrides.

Advisory committee chairman Roger Whitley told the board Tuesday that if the principal and interest payments for two past bond issues are moved from the Cohasset's operating budget, next year's over-ride request will be less than $200,000.

Selectman Jane Goedecke called the proposal "a debt exclusion after the fact," and cautioned that voters need to understand that "taxes are still going to go up."

The two debt exclusions result from previous town meeting votes for funds to cap the landfill and to purchase the Hagerty property, totalling $80,000, Whitley explained.

The amounts would be added to the tax levy only for the life of the bonds, Selectman Michael Sullivan added.

Cable TV license renewal begins

Although the town's contract with Continental Cablevision does not expire until 1999, renewal negotiations are set to begin now.

Cable TV advisory council member Robert Hillman was also granted selectmen's permission to meet with attorneys who specialize in cable television contract negotiations.

Hillman explained that federal regulations allow the franchise renewal process to begin 36 months before the expiration of the contract between the community and the cable television service. With recent passage of the federal telecommunications law, the town should begin the negotiations now, and may need outside professional help.

Three attorneys have agreed to make presentations to the cable TV advisory council, he said. Their fees will depend on the amount of assistance the council feels it needs.

"I think we need to listen to them," Hillman said noting that these three attorneys have experience with Continental Cablevision in other communities that have renewed their contracts.

Other area towns will be going through the renewal procedures, which Hillman called "frighteningly complicated." He said the cost of the outside council might be shared among Hingham, Norwell, Scituate, Hull, and Hanover, whose contracts with Continental Cablevision expire at about the same time as Cohasset's.

In response to a question from selectman Michael Sullivan, Hillman said that Continental Cablevision owns the cable television hardware. If Cohasset does not renew the license with Continental, the new cable television service would then negotiate to buy that equipment from Continental.

School committee regroups in wake of override loss

By DOREEN LEGGETT
Cohasset Mariner

Fustrated and disappointed by the defeat of the new school override, school committee members sat down Thursday night to discuss where to go next.

"This (the vote) has had a devastating effect on (the ability) to provide an adequate educational program," for students, Superintendent Stephen Hart told the packed room.

Many in the audience said they were stunned by the negative vote and felt that the proposal that went in front of the town was the only option available.

There is speculation that the $13 million proposal will again be put on the ballot. It failed by a margin of 28 votes.

Selectmen can put the option on the ballot without having another town meeting.

Due to the architects' serious time constraints it would be impossible to hold another town meeting.

Working plans must be submitted to the state by June 1 in order to receive the 60 percent reimbursement figure.

The selectmen are holding a meeting with the school committee and the school facilities committee tonight at 7:30 in the audio/visual studio at the high school.

Members of the school committee stressed that it would be "irresponsible" at this time to assume that the selectmen have any intention of putting the proposal back on the ballot.

Hart presented the school committee with long-range plans of what needed to be done at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools.

The increasing population in the school system combined with the condition of the Osgood necessitated an estimated $1.36 million Phase I budget for the school. The phase II budget is an estimated $800,000.

The first phase includes portable classrooms, a sprinkler system, a fire detection system, window replacement and parking lot modifications, among other things. The price tag also includes compliance work for the Americans With Disabilities Act, a federal law.

The second part of the plan provides more portable classrooms for the projected increased enrollment and further ADA work, as well as other modifications.

The projected cost of work at the Deer Hill is $875,000. The bulk of that work will be for ADA compliance and window replacement.

There was discussion as to whether or not the figures would be lumped with the school system's yearly budget.

School committee member James Kirk didn't think it should be combined with the yearly budget because administrators and faculty went to great lengths to develop a tight budget.

But committee members were not sure the numbers would pass an override vote.

"I think we are going to have to decide if all these items are something we want to go forward with," said school committee member Nancy Sandell.

If the budgets do not pass an override vote teachers and programs will have to be cut.

The school committee entertained comments from the audience for the second half of the meeting.

One parent suggested that money be raised to keep the architects working while the town waits for another override vote.

The cost is $180,000.

Roy Fitzsimmons, who had been an outspoken opponent of the project, suggested flip-flopping the grade configurations in the Osgood and the Deer Hill Schools.

Keith Knowles, the president of the Chamber of Commerce, had a different idea for solving the space/ needs problem.

Members of the school facilities and school committees assured the audience that every option had been explored and the most economically feasible option had been chosen.

Members wondered if the public should have been given a copy of all the explored options, complete with reasons why they had been discarded.

Hart had earlier said he was outraged at the treatment the facilities committee, who had put in hundreds of hours of work , had received.

"To have them (the facilities committee) be scorned and criticized by people in this community" is despicable, said Hart.

The school project would have added approximately $111 a year, averaged over the life of the bond issue, to the property tax bill of the average Cohasset home valued at $242,200.

"One Big Mac per home per week, " said school committee member James Kirk.

Election battle heats up as candidates return papers

Cohasset's political pot is reaching the boiling point as candidates rushed to return nomination papers for the April 6 town election.

The town clerk's office reported a flurry of activity last week, as candidates flocked to take out papers in advance of the February 15 deadline.

Perhaps the biggest surprise was Robert Davenport's decision to file for selectman.

He also took out and returned papers for reelection to the board of health, on which he now serves.

According to the clerk's office, the state ethics commission has been asked whether he can run for both offices.

In the event that he cannot or does not wish to run for both, Davenport has until March 4 before deciding.

If he runs for selectman, he joins incumbent Martha Gjesteby, conservation commission Roseanne McMorris and former advisory committee chairman Nan Adams Roth in running for the two seats.

Incumbent Jane Goedecke is not seeking reelection.

In another crowded contest, Patricia Anne Walsh returned papers for the treasurer/collector's post, joining Joseph D. Buckley, Judy Volungis and Wigmore Pierson, in seeking the position being vacated by Elizabeth Ripley who recently resigned.

This contest could alter selectman's plans to make the office appointed.

Ripley accepted a similar post in Marshfield, where the position is appointed.

Town meeting approval and an act of the legislature may be required to make the position appointed. However, selectmen have pointed out at recent meetings that the legislature is usually unwilling to make a position appointed if candidates are running for the post.

Town counsel Richard Henderson has been asked to research the matter.

Terry Atherton and Michael Mullin are seeking an open seat on the planning board. Incumbent Jean Simonds has decided not to seek re-election.

Richard Shea, Owen O'Malley, and Keith Knowles have returned papers for the school committee seat currently held by Nancy Sandell, who is stepping down after three terms.

John P. Rafferty, has thrown his hat into the ring for the seat on the water commission and could get some competition from Richard Muncey, who has also taken out papers for the seat held by William Montuori, who has decided not to seek re-election.

John Muncey has taken out papers for re-election to the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Incumbent sewer commissioner Edward Guild is facing a challenge from Jack Noble.

Roger Lowe has taken out papers for library trustee and so have trustees Sheila Evans and Doris McNulty. Lucille McLoughlin is not running for another term.

Incumbent Town Moderator George L. Marlette Jr., is seeking re-election to a three-year term.

Tom Wigmore will seek re-election to a five-year term on the recreation commission; Town Clerk Marion Douglas has taken out papers for another three-year term; and James W. Lagrotteria. will run for re-election to the board of assessors.

Regional waste request approved

After some discussion last week, selectmen agreed to support at town meeting article requesting $4,000 for the regional refuse program.

John McNabb, who represents Cohasset on the board, explained that the ten towns in the district have some grant money and additional funds to pay for a solid waste consultant who is examining the issue from a regional perspective.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said he was concerned that the project has been going on for ten years and hasn't shown any results.

McNabb said they should not stop in the middle of their work.

The other selectmen agreed to make Cohasset's expenditure contingent upon the participation of at least seven other towns.

Residents oppose CHL at hearing

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

After watching for four weeks while lawyers, consultants and engineers debated for and against the proposed 27.5 acre expansion to Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) before the town's Board of Health, area residents finally got the chance to express their views Tuesday.

This was the first of two sessions specifically designated for previously registered Cohasset residents to participate in the proceedings. Hearings are held Tuesday and Thursday (7:30 p.m.) in the Second Congregational Church adjacent to town hall.

Hearing Officer John Shea, with a list of 267 potential speakers, opened the session by establishing ground rules to follow and then asked John McNabb, vice-president of S.A.F.E. (Stop Any Further Expansion), how the board could expect his witnesses to proceed.

McNabb stated that in the course of the two sessions, a total of approximately 30-40 individuals would address the board on various topics and that "no directions from above" had been given to any speaker.

This session heard testimony from 20 concerned citizens on topics such as air and water quality, odor, increased traffic, landfill contaminants and possible financial impacts to the town.

While a few residents quoted Department of Environmental Protection regulations as their basis for asking the board to deny the Cohasset Heights application, others based their statements on facts, speculation, past CHL performances and predictions of a dire future if expansion is granted.

Using the new Registry of Motor Vehicles Roxbury facility (sick building syndrome) and the recently opened third Boston Harbor tunnel (leaking and odors) as examples, one speaker cautioned board members to be wary of evidence presented by experts for Cohasset Heights.

On CHL's claim that a polyurethane liner and clay-based covering for mounds of construction and demolition debris would have a life expectancy of 20 years, residents were not impressed.

"There are no guarantees," Sean Teague said. "It will leak and who do we turn to when it does?"

While John Rafferty opted to look at human life cycles instead, stating, "We're not in the 20-year business here. We're in the 100-year business."

Most residents focused their discussion on present day odor problems at the landfill as well as potential future hazards to area ground water supplies.

"One thing that has been a constant is the smell from Cohasset Heights," said David Henderson.

Stating 30 known cases of asthma in children attending the town elementary school, and with 40 children under the age of 10 living within a half-mile radius of the landfill, residents were fearful for their outdoor safety.

And while saying that the amount of environmental disasters already left for future generations is chilling, board members were asked not to increase this legacy.

"This is the most important evening we are going to have," said Lisa Bumpstead. "The Board of Health must protect the drinking water for the town of Cohasset — the town where we live."

Two residents focused their attention on the possible future financial impact a landfill expansion might have. While admitting real estate values should not rate as high on a hazard scale as health issues, both warned this is an area that should not be forgotten in light of clean-up costs of contaminated landfills incurred by other communities nationwide.

On a lighter note, one speaker offered, "Nobody wants to have to give directions to their home using a dump as a specific point."

Wheelwright Farm resident Nicholas Driscoll said, "All I want is to breath the air, walk the land and drink the water in safety."

Concom hears CHL wetlands debate

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Heights Landfill, CHL, is being asked to provide more information on the affect the proposed expansion of the facility will likely have on the area, including a more detailed description of wetlands barriers

In a 6-page report, Fugro East, Inc., an engineering firm acting as consultants for the conservation commission, also questioned nine areas of concern, including water quality, calculations for pipe sizes, the capacity and area of mitigation ponds and requested calculations for water runoof during storms.

During last week's conservation commission meeting, consultantants and lawyers for Paul Barry, CHL, stated they had not received the report in advance and requested time in order to prepare the material.

Although he repeatedly wrangled with those representing Barry, commission chairman Thomas Callahan did agree that consultants, both for the town and the landfill, must submit material more quickly.

"Both sides have buried us with new information today," he stated.

During close to an hour of detailed and complicated discussion, Callahan stressed the need for CHL to adequately respond to the Fugro report.

"The operation of the landfill poses a significant threat to erosion runoff," he said.

Several times Barry's consultants stated that they did not understand what was being requested and asked for permission to contact Fugro directly, something the conservation commission has denied in the past. Instead of direct contact between consultants, the commission has asked that questions be submitted to town hall and passed on to the consultants by the town.

Barry said the policy is unfair and slows down the process.

"We've played a fair ball game all along," he told Callahan.

Later, Barry charged the commission with being out to get him. "You are after me. I'm suspicious," he said.

Callahan replied that "It is comments like that that make me suspicious."

"It comes from both sides of the table," Barry retorted.

When commission member Veneta Roebuck questioned the policy of forbidding communications between consultants, Callahan said the matter would be reconsidered.

Callahan and commission member Roseanne McMorris posed several detailed questions regarding the water quality in the landfill area.

Michael Leon, conservation commission attorney, said the board wanted interim remedial measures for the landfill.

Callahan added that the commission has been patient over the situation.

He continued the hearing until March 6 at 8:30 pm, when wetlands and related issues will be discussed.

On March 21 at 7:45 pm, the notice of intent hearing will be considered.

Question of the Week

Last year's town election was a real sleeper with no races on any of the town's elected boards.

But what a difference a year makes!

This year's April 6 election includes races for seats on the board of selectmen, school committee, water commission, sewer commission, and for the treasurer/collector's post.

Candidates over the past several weeks have submitted photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Next week, we will feature candidates' answers to the following 'Question of the Week.' Responses should be brief — no more than 200 words. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they are too long.

'What is the most important issue facing the town department (or board) you would like to represent? How will you make a difference?'

Candidates may reply by FAX at 617-740-8955; or by dropping their responses off at Cohasset News on Brook Street; or mailing them to us, 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield 02050 by noon Tuesday. Be sure to leave enough time for mail delivery.

We will also publish a 'Candidates Corner,' but it is limited to a few lines from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept Letters to the Editor from candidates or letters endorsing candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues up until the March 28 issue before the election.

Candidates are encouraged to advertise their campaigns in the Mariner. For information about deadlines and costs for political advertisements, please contact Judy McCaffery Perry at 1-800-649-6661.

Let's work together for town

To the Editor:

I would like to thank all of the Cohasset residents who voted in the election Feb. 10. It was a grass roots effort that won the election, neighbor speaking to neighbor. We only had two small signs at the polls, but our message reached the voters as well as our many letters to the editors.

Now, we must sit with the School Committee, School Facilities Committee, the Capital Budget Committee and the Advisory Board and discuss some of the alternatives voiced during the election campaign. Hopefully, the School Committee will be open to discussion of this nature. This is the time for us to come together as a town and to take a reasonable approach to solving a problem. We must work in the best interest of all of the people in Cohasset.

Thank goodness for Officer Matos

To the Editor:

One day last week my husband and I and our 5-yr.-old son were sitting in our car outside Aquarius Sunrooms waiting for our 3-yr.-old daughter, who was attending school at the Community Center. We had about 10 minutes to wait and our son wanted to play out in the snow. He was about 10 to 15 feet away from us and never out of our sight. Lisa Matos was coming down the street, off duty, and noticed this boy. She parked her car behind us and walked to my window to find out if this boy belonged to us. I am so thankful that we live in a town that has such a wonderful and caring person and police officer as Lisa Matos.

Scrap train, build schools

To the Editor:

I applaud Mr. Fitzsimmon's analysis of the financial condition of the State of Massachusetts (February 1, 1996).

In a state as fiscally unsound as this one, I find it incredible that lawmakers are determined to spend an additional $300 million on laying down 18 miles of track to carry 800 people to Boston.

At last review, the State of Massachusetts was turning down federal funding in order to circumvent environmental regulations. This means the taxpayers of Massachusetts, in addition to the list Mr. Fitzsimmons provided, will be another $300 million in the hole with no hope of digging out.

I say we terminate the train and build schools in 18 communities. We can help hundreds of children have a better start in life, and the positive effects will ripple through our entire society.

Thanks for great Spirit Night

To the Editor:

The Basketball Boosters, the Teen Center, and specifically Betsy Connelly and her family, are to be thanked for planning and carrying out a wonderful Spirit Night for the girls basketball program at Cohasset High School. This resulted in many more fans attending both the Jr. Varsity and Varsity games, and in extra fun (foul-shooting contests) for nursery and elementary age children and extra food at the snack bar. The Connellys also produced many posters and other signs of "spirit." Thanks again!

Treasurer-collector candidate wants more capital debt planning

Patricia Anne Walsh, age 65, has lived in Cohasset approximately 55 years. She has resided with her husband (recently retired as Chairman Science Department Boston Latin School) at 270 North Main St. for 41 years. She is concerned that the recent vote on the school Proposition 2-1/2 override demonstrates the town needs more capital debt planning and communication. She wants the Treasurer-Collector's office to be in more frequent communication with town departments and citizens regarding outstanding bonds, interest payments, and maturing debt's impact on the tax rates, so people understand sooner those implications on the town's own "mortgage debt" — if you will — payment schedules. She has been familiar for years with the many pieces of information required to be submitted to the town's Bond Counsel and has had to collect many of the documents necessary for a prospectus for an offering.

A graduate of Harvard University, she had five children, all of whom graduated from the Cohasset school system and college — four with magna cum laude and one who was Phi Beta Kappa. Her three grandchildren are a delight.

Her municipal experience included being elected as a member of the Cohasset School Committee; High School Communicatons Council Chairman; and member of Cohasset Planning Board's subcommittee to study open space. She served professionally as secretary to Selectmen, School Committee, Sewer Commission, Planning Board, Board of Health, Conservation Commission and as an election worker. Her activities have included being an Assistant Buyer at Jordan Marsh, responsibility for figuring 150 person payroll and multi-grant bookkeeper in another municipal setting.

Her activities included: President former St. Anthony's Sodality; Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary Radcliffe Old Colony Club; Cohasset Chief Den Mother for two packs with 330 Cub Scouts; Girl Scout Leader and Sunday School Teacher. Secretary former Cohasset Women's Club; Member Community Garden Club; Member Board of Directors Cohasset Community Center, and newspaper reporter for Cohasset Mariner and Hull Chronicle.

Rep. Murray praised

To the Editor:

On behalf of cities and towns across the state, the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) wants to thank Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for co-sponsoring the Early Resolution on Local Aid.

The early passage of this legislative resolution is important to communities as they prepare their budgets for the next fiscal year. With the demands on cash-strapped municipal budgets, it will be enormously difficult for town meetings and city councils to make meaningful budget decisions without local aid figures. The local aid resolution would set the base level of local aid for cities and towns, returning $41.6 million in new lottery aid and $207 million in new education funds, as promised by the legislature last year.

Municipalities will not know how much local aid they will receive, usually distributed through the so-called Cherry Sheets, until the Local Aid Resolution is enacted. Because communities need these local aid increases in order to balance their budgets and provide basic services to their residents, the adoption of this resolution is in the best interests of the taxpayers in Rep. Murray's district.

The MMA extends its appreciation to Rep. Murray for supporting and co-sponsoring the Early Local Aid Resolution and for making an early commitment on the local aid increases and urges the legislature to adopt the measure as quickly as possible.

Roth outlines plan

At a speech before the Cohasset Rotary Club on Monday night, Nan Roth, candidate for selectman and former chairman of the advisory committee, stressed the importance of planning and consensus building in Cohasset.

"The school vote on Saturday illustrates the challenges we face in bridging the divisions that exist in Cohasset," she stated. "The selectmen need to provide the leadership to bring disparate groups and town boards together to understand their differing views and needs and to create successful solutions.

"Cohasset is a small town. We need to work together to maintain our good services and provide a safe, healthy and affordable environment for all citizens."

Roth outlined her plan for the future. "Town property and buildings must be maintained. Taxpayers deserve adequate facilities, but don't need anymore surprises. We should use our computer capabilities to analyze all aspects of town property, and combine this knowledge with a long term fiscal plan.

"Cohasset is facing many large projects in the future including capping the landfill, responding to sewer mandates, and accommodating increased school enrollments and deteriorating school conditions.

"These projects must be carefully designed, timed and funded to provide the greatest possible stability in our tax rate and to meet the needs of our citizens."

meeting seem more like an anti-train demonstration.

Still Grimes commended Fancher for his ability to maintain decorum during the meeting while addressing many of the concerns raised.

Fancher said since new members change the dynamic of the group, he felt it was important to get these issues out into the open and allow the audience to ask questions as well, but pointed out that if in consecutive meetings the same questions continued to be raised he'll be more stern with the gavel.

Reitsma's response also defined what the citizens advisory committee's role is not.

It is not within the role of the committee to make decisions such as what the project will ultimately be or whether it will be approved, he said, adding that the responsibilities of the advisory group are limited to evaluating the adequacy of environmental impact documentation as it is being prepared or after it has been filed by the project proponent (MBTA).

The role of the committee, Reitsma went on to say is to assist and to advise the secretary of environmental affairs in her review.

While state funding will eliminate the federal review process, Reitsma pointed out that the project will have to meet all state environmental requirements including the regulations administered by the Massachusetts Historical Commission. Reitsma did not indicate that committee's role would change because of the change in funding.

Another issued raised and reiterated by Coastal Coalition founder Nancy Buckley this week, is the concern that there has been an attempt on Governor William Weld's part to override the environmental review process by announcing a decision to restore at grade rail service, before the final environmental impact report indicating a preferred alternative is accepted by the secretary of environmental affairs. In his response, Reitsma said no such thing has occurred.

The remarks made by the governor and ones made by transportation secretary James Kerasiotes, Reitsma said, "indicate that the MBTA is confident that it can demonstrate that the at grade option is superior."

Any further alternative transportation studies and analysis will be included in the final environmental impact report, Reitsma added.

Reitsma also addressed an issue Fancher did not raise in his letter but one that he said has come to his attention regarding the conduct of the committee during its deliberations.

Reitsma wrote, "it is insulting (to the secretary as well as to you and other CAC members) if certain members of the CAC or the audience turn CAC meetings into public rallies. This disruptive behavior precludes the CAC from doing its job."

Reitsma went on to say that if such behavior continues the secretary could discontinue certain appointments or the citizens advisory committee in its entirety.

"Obviously, we prefer that the CAC continue its valuable work and hope that all parties involved will cooperate to make that possible," he added.

Fancher said he took the letter to be a challenge for the committee to do its job and not get involved in acrimonious debates.

"We need to deal with the facts and stay away from emotions," he said.

Grimes said that he and a majority of the members want the meetings to go forward in an orderly manner.

"We want to stick to business. Our job is one thing. We don't tell the 'T" what to do, or second guess what they do. We look at what is presented and comment," said Grimes, who said the letter is a good thing.

"This gives us our marching orders," he said, noting that now that all committee members know better what the guidelines are, "we can keep things on track."

Fancher said the next committee meeting has not yet been scheduled, but noted that the group will be reviewing the on-going work on the final environmental impact report on a chapter by chapter basis. Reitsma said he will be in attendance for the committee's next meeting.

Hagerty land may be sold curriculum.

"They thought it was a great after-school activity," Goedecke said.

However, she added that if the town cannot sell the property for at least $200,000, Ulmer's proposal could be considered.

The town purchased the property in 1993 when Cohasset Colonials relocated its business, and the town took the opportunity to gain more waterfront access. At its meeting on February 15, the Hagerty committee voted unanimously to recommend the sale of the property.

Alfred Moore, chairman of the Hagerty committee and of the planning board, told the selectmen that the property should be rezoned for residential use, and divided to allow a 7,500 square foot lot around the existing building. This lot would be similar in size to other nearby properties, and allow public access to the boat ramp on the remainder of the land.

Moore said the bond for the Hagerty property is costing the owner of the average home $15 per year on their real estate tax bill.

He also advised that if $200,000 cannot be realized from the sale of the property, the town should consider alternatives, including moving or demolishing it. The building inspector, Moore noted, has said the building requires extensive repairs.

Residents dive into water rate protest

cover the expense of building and operating the company's $39.5 million water treatment facility which is under construction in Hingham.

Originally estimated as a $17 million project, water company officials claim that construction delays, inflation and changing the original plant site to one less obtrusive to residential neighborhoods in Hingham, account for the more than doubling of the facility's cost.

According to water company Vice President Keith Bossung, the 7.7 million gallon per day treatment facility which is slated to go on-line in May, will provide better water quality and flow and will bring the company into compliance with federal Safe Drinking Water Act regulations which require surface water to be filtered.

But residents protesting the rate hike in Hingham, Hull and now Cohasset are skeptical that water quality will improve.

"I have lousy, brown water and low pressure," said Plante, who wondered how much better "treated" water will be after it is delivered through 100 year old pipes.

And Hull and Cohasset residents want to know why they're paying more for a treatment facility site change that does nothing to benefit them.

"At least Hingham will get the tax revenue from having the facility in their town," said Lambert Lane resident Barbara Mullen, who like Plante wants those Cohasset residents who will be greatly impacted by the rate hike, to know what's coming and to try to stop it.

Plante's, Mullen's and about 250 other homes lie beyond the Forest Ave and Jerusalem Road cutoff making them part of Mass-American's 10,500 residential customers spread through Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset.

About 15 years ago, Plante said she was involved in a feasibility study conducted in town to determine of the north part of Cohasset could be tied into the Cohasset Water Company supply. The study determined that because of the large amounts of ledge, laying pipes to connect that side of town would be too costly, Plante said.

Now Plante and her neighbors are worried about being able to pay their water bills.

"We live in an older neighborhood, with some residents on fixed incomes," said Mullen, who said the rate increase will be a hardship for many.

Mullen, Plante and other neighborhood volunteers plan to hand deliver informational flyers to all Mass-American rate payers in town encouraging them to protest the increase.

While Mullen first considered holding an informational meeting on the issue, she reconsidered based on the number of meetings and issues the town is dealing with, including the Cohasset Heights Landfill, the sewer projects and the recent school proposal.

"There's so much going on in Cohasset. I think people are all 'meeting-ed' out."

The informational flyers include the address of the Department of Public Utilities and the name of the contact their along with local legislators phone and fax numbers.

Selectmen last week directed town counsel Richard Henderson to file a brief opposing the rate increase.

State Senator Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who opposes the rate hike, has raised concerns about the financing of the facility.

In a letter to the Department of Public Utilities this week, Hedlund requested that all avenues of creative financing be exhausted before considering the amount of the rate hike. Because the increase stems from a federal mandate to comply with the Safe Drinking Water Act, Hedlund said he expects that the water company has sought all possible federal funding options for the project.

"The people of Hull, Hingham and Cohasset deserve to receive adequate service at the lowest possible cost," Hedlund said.

The Department of Public Utilities will hold evidentuary hearings on the rate increase in Boston next month. New water rates could be issued as early as June.

Police Chief Brian Noonan accepts emergency meal packs from Meals on Wheels volunteer Ginny Riley of Cohasset. Riley is a long-time board member and past president of the Social Service League of Cohasset. South Shore Elder Services and the league operate Meals on Wheels for the town.

SSH reports a good year

In 1995 at South Shore Hospital, more people were cared for than at any other time in the hospital's history, and new health services were added. Community financial support enabled the hospital to launch programs that helped intervene prior to medical crises, support individuals with chronic health conditions and care for those with terminal illnesses.

"In 1995, SSH's programs and services reached more people than ever with the kind of care, attention and quality our community has come to expect from us," said Hingham resident David T. Hannan, South Shore Hospital president and CEO.

Among services offered to South Shore residents are a cardiac catheterization laboratory, a 25-bed transitional care center, an expanded pediatric program and DNA testing to rapidly and more accurately test for disease.

South Shore Regional Health Services brings services to residents of area nursing homes, and a group adult foster care program serves the elderly who need assistance with daily living, medication management and other home-based services that Medicare does not reimburse.

State showing fuels Sweeney's fires

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

For many teams and individual athletes, the Division 3 State wrestling tournament served as the platform to advance to the All-State meet.

But for the Cohasset High wrestling squad, the two-day meet held earlier this week at Wayland High School gave its younger grapplers a taste of what state competition entails and how much effort is needed to advance to the next level.

The Skippers fared well as four wrestlers won two of their matches and advanced to the second day of competition before bowing out.

Made up of six freshmen, three juniors and a senior, Cohasset did a commendable job.

"It was a tremendous experience for those guys," said head coach Torin Sweeney, referring particularly to the freshmen crew. "Now they know what it takes to make the next step to the All-States."

Sweeney was especially impressed with the aggressiveness shown by all his wrestlers on the mats and that none were intimidated by their opposition or setting of the massive meet.

Freshman Mike Baird (112 pounds), juniors Kevin Duffy (135) and Justin Buckley (171), and senior Captain Nate Caldwell (Heavyweight) all earned the right to wrestle on the second day of competition. They all finished in the top eight and won two matches apiece. Wrestlers needed three wins to advance to the medal round.

Junior Doug Sherrin (140), and freshmen Ben Littauer (119), Jordan Fiore (130), Mike Rossi (145), Luke Caldwell (160) and Adam Sasso (189) also qualified for the meet and wrestled on the first day of the competition. Littauer finished with a victory and Luke Caldwell nearly pulled off a win in one of the best matches of the day, but came up just one point short of winning.

Sweeney can't help but be optimistic about the team he has returning next year. Nate Caldwell will be a big loss and Sweeney will be scouring the halls to find a replacement for Caldwell and a body to put in the 215-pound division.

"If we can fill those spots with good athletes we'll be super competitive," Sweeney said.

And as for the freshmen crop returning. "That'll be quite a group that will be pushing on."

Hardwick's heroics not enough

By JIM O'SULLIVAN

Despite a gallant second-half effort, the Cohasset Skippers were unable to overcome the superb play of the Carver Crusaders. With balanced play and tenacious defense, the Crusaders managed to pull out a 68-66 victory, after being up 34-20 at halftime. The Skippers were led by Jared Hardwick, who popped in 26 points, and Ryan Bishop, who scored 18, all during a magnificent second half.

Hardwick put the Skippers on the board after taking a pass from Paul-Michael Quintin, who was diving for a loose ball and passing in one motion, laying it off the glass, and sinking the ensuing free throw. Hardwick hit two more free throws and Quintin tossed in a jump shot from 15 feet, to bring the score to 14-7. J.L. Williams then hit a layup in traffic. Hardwick threw down a dunk, while Quintin picked up the assist. Williams' offensive rebounding netted him two more points. Good passing by Howard and Quintin resulted in a Hardwick layup. The senior forward ended the half for the Skippers by swishing two from the foul line.

Bishop kicked off the second half for the Skippers with a layup and Burke Davis hit a free throw. Good rebounding on the offensive boards earned Bishop a free throw and the big center kept scoring, this time with a nice move in traffic and a layup. Howard hit Davis, who knocked down his trademark three. Bishop and Hardwick both hit layups before Hardwick's dunk sent the crowd into a frenzy. Taking off from nearly the foul line, Hardwick still had plenty of air beneath him when he slammed the ball through the hoop.

Hardwick hit a free throw and Bishop continued conducting his clinic, wiping the offensive boards clean and putting it back for two more. Bishop got another pair, but the Skippers still trailed 56-40 with time running down. Cohasset started to make its run here, scoring eight straight, when Hardwick slashed to the rack for a bucket, Bishop had an offensive putback, and Hardwick had a violent slam dunk, making it 58-50, in favor of the Crusaders. Hardwick tossed home another one, this one more stylish and more violent, with the big guy opting for the two-handed approach. Bishop pulled the home team still closer with another offensive putback, his fourth of the night.

Bishop hit a free throw and Hardwick tipped one back for two. Davis hit two clutch free throws, bringing the Skippers within three, 60-57. Carver notched two more, but Hardwick returned the favor with a putback. Quintin hit a jumper and Bishop hit a putback, but destiny was on the side of the Crusaders. Quintin's three at the final buzzer made the final score 68-66, giving the Skippers only their fourth league loss in more than two years.

Cohasset played in a tournament over President's Day weekend, defeating Cardinal Spellman by six points, and losing a close one to Weymouth.

Lacrosse program set for spring

Cohasset will field a team in the under-12 division of the Massachusetts Bay Youth Lacrosse League this spring, the Cohasset Lacrosse Boosters and Recreation Director Jack Worley have announced.

This team will provide youngsters in the fifth and sixth grades, who had not turned 13 prior to Dec. 31, with their first chance to play competitive lacrosse. A sign-up will be held Saturday, Feb. 24, at the Cohasset High School from 9 a.m. to noon, during youth basketball. A registration fee of $50 will be charged, which includes a team uniform (jersey and shorts) that the player will keep.

The Cohasset team will be coached by Chuck Jaffe, who has been coaching lacrosse from youth to adult levels for the last 13 years. Jaffe, who assisted both the varsity and junior varsity programs last spring, is a former All Big Ten player from Michigan who played with the Philadelphia Wings of the Major Indoor Lacrosse League.

Jaffe has lined up several former college players to assist with the new youth team.

Recreation Department clinics have allowed youngsters to start playing lacrosse during the summer, but there has never before been a Cohasset team to play on during the spring months.

"We're going to focus on fundamentals, on getting kids excited about playing lacrosse and giving them a chance to put their sticks to work in game situations," said Jaffe. "Lacrosse is a lot of

Good Sport robs Pilgrim Co-op

By DENNIS DOOLEY
Special to the Mariner

Highlights from this week's action in the Cohasset Recreation boys basketball program included a 21-12 victory by the fourth-grade Good Sport squad over the Pilgrim Co-Operative Bank Hoopsters.

Defensive pressure was the deciding factor in this rematch of first-and second-place teams. Andrew Guild, Matt Evans and Phil Strazzula controlled the boards for the Good Sport team and Adam Thayer chipped in with a couple of key defensive stops.

On the offensive side of the game Jeff Barrett and Mike Dooley led the fast break while Tim Anton and Paul Cotter finished off the transition game with some clutch baskets.

Good Sport closes out the regular season this Saturday against J.C. Waal Engineering Company, while Pilgrim Co-op battles Pat's Hairstyling.

fun to play, combining a lot of the skills kids use in soccer, basketball and hockey with some unique aspects all its own. We think the kids who come out will have a great time.

The fifth/sixth grade team will play a seven-game schedule, with games set for Sunday afternoons in April, May and the first week of June. Players will be responsible for their own sticks, helmets and gloves, and will be taken on a first-come, first-served basis.

This team will be developmental, with weekly practices devoted to learning the fundamentals of throwing, catching and positional play. The team's opponents will be primarily from South Shore communities such as Hanover, Norwell and Hingham.

For more information, call either Jaffe, at 383-1676, or Terry Kahn, 383-0332. Registration forms will also be available at the recreation department office at town hall.

All Paws meeting set

The next bi-monthly members meeting of All Paws Rescue will be held on Tuesday, March 12, at 7:30 p.m. at the Days Inn, Rockland.

Spay Day is Feb. 27

Tuesday, Feb. 27, has been declared Spay Day USA. Faced with the continuing problem of pet overpopulation, humane societies throughout the nation are attempting to find incentives to encourage pet owners to sterilize their dogs and cats to prevent unwanted litters.

In celebration of Spay Day USA, Standish Humane Society will offer greatly reduced costs for spay/neuter services to those who qualify under Standish Humane's financial guidelines. Eligible individuals who call 834-4663 from 2 to 7 p.m. on Feb. 27, 28 and 29 will receive a discount of $30 per cat or $50 per dog from Standish.

Pets must be owned by the person telephoning, and there is a limit of three pets per family. Pet owners must live on the South Shore and must have the surgery done by a veterinary hospital that already participates in the society's reduced-cost spay/neuter program.

SSCC launches capital campaign

The South Shore Community Center, which has served the community for 53 years, has launched a capital campaign, which includes a phon-a-thon during February and March. The purpose of the fundraising effort is to raise capital to help rebuild during a time of increasing financial strain.

Sue DiPesa, president of the SSCC said, "Unless we get financial support, the board will have to take drastic steps to eliminate our standing debt. It's time to rebuild and we can't do it on a foundation of old debt.

". . . We have made every effort to cut back expenses without cutting back services. We have already cut back salaries; any further cutback will involve programs."

Conway Realtors and Hingham Institution for Savings have offered their sites for the fundraising effort. Conway personnel from four South Shore offices and Wearguard telesales employees will contribute their time manning the phones, and WATD-FM Radio is donating air time for the project.

Executive Director Nina Belsan is optimistic about the campaign, while DiPesa expressed her appreciation to members who have already shown their support by being the first contributors.

Anyone wishing to make a donation or volunteer to help with the capital campaign is asked to call the Center at 383-0088.

Marlette: politics rules town counsel selection

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Selectmen are denying charges from town moderator George Marlette that he was purposefully excluded from consideration for the town counsel position.

"This is politics as usual," Marlette stated. "I meet the minimum entry level criteria and should have been interviewed. I feel very strongly that the elected moderator should have been extended that courtesy. My application was trivialized."

He also charged town administrator Gregory Doyon failed to include his initial letter of application in the packet for selectmen.

"There is no question in my mind, from the time I submitted my letter and Greg did not submit it in the packet," that the process was rigged against him.

Monday night, selectmen denied the allegations.

"It wasn't political at all," said chairman Merle Brown.

He explained that the 12 finalists for the job were plotted on a grid, with the Fourteen months after a winter storm plunged Cohasset into a dark Christmas, Eastern Edison reported that it has taken steps to prevent a repeat occurrence.

In a recent letter to selectmen, Eastern Edison vice president Barbara Hassan outlined the steps the utility company has taken since it was criticized by Cohasset residents and town officials following a storm that knocked out power for up to 48 hours on Christmas Eve, 1994.

Since that time, Eastern Edison has upgraded equipment, removed or pruned trees that jeopardized electric service, and installed a new telephone answering system to handle customer complaints, questions, and comments.

This action has resulted in "only a handful of problems" during the 12 winter storms this season, she said.

In the months following the December, 1994 northeaster, Eastern Edison embarked on a program to decrease the likelihood of future service disruptions

Town may borrow to finance landfill costs

Will send bill to Weld

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Staggered by the cost of fighting the Cohasset Heights Landfill expansion, angry selectmen say they will send the bill to Gov. William Weld and other state officials.

Selectmen charge that environmental affairs secretary Trudy Coxe could have saved Cohasset taxpayers a small fortune if she had ruled against the landfill expansion request last fall, instead of directing the board of health to hold expensive hearings on the issue.

Between November and June, it is expected to cost the town some $244,000 in legal and engineering fees to oppose the expansion.

Last year, selectmen estimated the town has spent more than $400,000 on the landfill in the past ten years.

The amount will rise if the town should decide to appeal any state decision.

The November special town meeting appropriated $95,000 for the landfill issue, leaving a deficit of some $150,000 by June, town administrator Gregory Doyon told selectmen Monday night.

He passed out a sheet listing the various costs, which include nearly $209,000 for lawyers and expert witnesses to defend the town's position at the board of health hearings.

Selectman Peter Pratt suggested sending a letter to Weld, Coxe and other officials.

He claimed that since the state is not likely to grant any landfill expansion permits for a couple of years, the town should not have been told to hold the hearings now.

Pratt said that he recently complained about the situation to DEP commissioner David Struhs, but was told that officials never think about local costs.

A vocal Democrat, Pratt said he was not trying to make this a partisan issue, since

Primary set for Tuesday, March 5

Cohasset Town Clerk Marion Douglas is predicting a low turnout of the town's 5,056 voters for Tuesday's primary.

The statewide contest helps determine the candidates in November's presidential election.

Polls will be open from 7 p m. to 8 p.m. Voters from both precincts vote at Cohasset Town Hall. The deadline to register to vote in the primary was Feb. 14.

As of Feb. 27, the town had 2,879 unenrolled voters, 1,067 Democrats, 1,107 Republicans and 3 Libertarians.

Lyndon LaRouche Jr. is the only challenger to President Clinton on the Democratic ballot in Massachusetts.

Former Tenn. governor Lamar Alexander, commentator Pat Buchanan, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and millionaire Steve Forbes are the most prominent Republican candidates for president.

Cohasset's Week

MBTA meeting is March 11

The MBTA will hold a meeting on Monday, March 11, at 8 p.m. with Cohasset selectmen. The purpose of the consultation is to re-establish lines of communication with the Cohasset community, which would be directly served by the Greenbush Line, and to set up a process for developing and reviewing Greenbush mitigation plans for the town.

Spraying policy announced

The Cohasset Mosquito Control Committee has announced that residents must notify the Town Clerk's office by March 1 if they do not wish to have their property sprayed with chemicals to control adult mosquitoes during the spring and summer months.

Requests for a legal "no spray" area will be honored by the Plymouth County Mosquito Control Project throughout the mosquito season. Residents should be aware that spraying with pesticides would be necessary even in a "no spray" area if eastern equine encephalitis were declared to be a serious threat by the state Department of Public Health and the governor of Massachusetts.

ConCom associate appointed

Michael Dick was appointed an associate member of the conservation commission by selectmen this week. In making the appointment, they praised his enthusiasm and qualifications.

Selectmen warm to library air conditioning

It is likely that Cohasset's book enthusiasts need not dread another hot summer.

Selectmen Monday night agreed to support a town meeting article installing air conditioning in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Library trustee Sheila Evans told selectmen that town meeting has already approved a $5,000 engineering study on air conditioning at the building.

She reported that air conditioning would likely cost $50,000.

Cohasset is one of only three towns of the 20 communities making up the Old Colony library network — along with Braintree and Milton — which do not have air conditioned libraries.

Evans predicted that air conditioning would increase the popularity of summer programs held in the building.

New buses may be needed

School superintendent Steven Hart said this week that the town could need as many as four new school buses, at a cost of some $180,000.

He told selectmen that he will make a recommendation soon on a possible town meeting request for the money. He is also considering the possibility of contracting with a private bus company.

Hart explained that the state police officer who most recently inspected the buses urged that the town replace some of them.

Four of the six buses are nearly ten years old and have more than 100,000 miles on them.

The diesel buses have space for 71 passengers.

Cohasset has five bus routes and keeps a sixth bus in abeyance for special trips or to stand in for one of the others.

Mosquito control vacancy

With the potentially dangerous mosquito season looming, the mosquito control committee still has one vacancy. Anyone interested is urged to contact the selectman's office at town hall immediately.

CHS auditorium upgrade now up to town meeting

After a brief presentation by school superintendent Steven Hart, selectmen Monday night unanimously agreed to support a town meeting article seeking $140,000 to renovate the high school auditorium.

Included in that sum will be some $20,000 to repair the bleachers and make other minor repairs in the high school gym.

Hart explained that, except for minor repairs, the auditorium has not been refurbished since it was built in 1950.

He said the acoustics in the room are so poor Cohasset has never been able to host the popular Boston Globe drama festival which the high school drama club usually receives recognition in.

It will cost between $40,000 and $50,000 to refurbish the auditorium seats.

The cast iron portion of the seat will be sand blasted and repainted. The wood backs will stained and sealed, while the cushions will be upholstered.

New carpeting, windows and house lighting will be installed. The stage lighting has already been replaced.

To improve acoustics, the ceiling will be rebuilt and wall panels installed.

Hart showed selectmen a drawing of how the auditorium will likely look when it is completed, which included a mural illustrating clipper ships sailing in a harbor.

The CHS sports teams are known as the Skippers.

Selectman Peter Pratt wondered how the school department could proceed with the refurbishing while the Osgood elementary school still lacks a fire alarm and is considered to be unsafe.

Hart replied that plans are underway to install an alarm at the building, and stated that postponing maintenance on school facilities creates more expensive work in the future.

Hail Caesar! He came up with leap year

By BOB AICARDI
Cohasset Mariner

1996 is a leap year. This gives everyone born on Feb. 29 the rare opportunity to hold a celebrationon their real birthday.

Here's a fact that even the average contestant on "Jeopardy" probably doesn't know: The person who introduced the idea of a four-year leap year (with a 30-day February) was none other than Julius Caesar, whose legendary career came to an abrupt end when he "visited the Roman Senate once too often," as Gore Vidal points out.

Caesar wanted to make up for the extra fraction of a day over 365 that the earth takes to complete its annual cycle. According to historians, Caesar's "Julian calendar" was much more accurate than its predecessors.

However, it was still 0.0078 days too long, and 1,500 years later, the accumulated error had added up to 10 full days.

At this time, it was Pope Gregory XIII who established the calendar which is used in the West today. He solved the problem of the 10 extra days in 1582 by simply omitting them.

In that year only, decreed the Pontiff, Oct. 4 would be followed by Oct. 15. (The reason why England and her colonies had to lose 11 rather than 10 days was that they did not adopt the Gregorian calendar until 170 years later, by which time it was another complete day ahead of the real year.)

In a nutshell, Pope Gregory's calendar was a reformed version of the Julian one. The Pope rearranged the lengths of the months into their modern versions and more importantly, devised a way of overcoming the slight inaccuracy in the Julian calendar.

Pope Gregory decided that in order to qualify as a leap year, a century year (100, 1500, and so on) had to be divisible not just by four, but by 400. This explains why the years 1700, 1800, and 1900 were not leap years, but 2000 will be a leap year.

Let's shift gears a bit. We're all familiar with the mnemonic that begins "30 days hath September/April, June, and November..." but many of us aren't familiar with the reason why months have different numbers.

When the Romans under Caesar invented the Julian calendar, they decided to give months with special religious significance 31 days and the ones of lesser importance just 30 days.

January (named after the god Janus), March (named after Mars), and July (named in honor of Caesar himself) were among the months with 31 days.

Caesar's successor, Augustus, named August after himself and (naturally) gave it 31 days. In order to do so, he borrowed a day from February and reduced the length of that month to 28 days.

To avoid a succession of three long months, Augustus then made September and November 30-day months and lengthened the alternate months of October and December to 31 days.

Wonder why all of this was never mentioned in the "I, Claudius" miniseries on PBS?

State Committee

Vote Tuesday
March 5th

Paid for by The DeTellis Committee, Peg MacKenzie, Chair, Co-Chairs, Donna McGee, Carolyn Sammon (Cohasset), and Chartis Langmaid

A note to South Shore Democrats

February, 1996

I am asking for your vote on Tuesday, March 5th, so I thought I would tell you a little about myself.

I've been a Democrat all my life and feel strongly that our State Party must be aggressive in its efforts to re-elect Senator Kerry to the U. S. Senate and to repulse the extremist agenda being thrust upon us by the Republican Party in Washington!

I have always supported outstanding Democrats like Allan McKinnon, Bill Golden, and Brian McDonald in the Senate District and am extremely proud to be supporting Phil Johnston to succeed Congressman Gerry Studds.

That's the kind of Democrat I am. I hope that you will go to the polls on Tuesday, March 5th to support an activist Democratic Party and our President, Bill Clinton!

Sincerely,
Karen

Company corrects problems in town and problems in Cohasset, Hassan said.

One of the most immediate improvements the company made was removing and pruning trees that interfered with electrical service. More than 460 trees were removed in Cohasset, most of which were on private property. She reported "100 per cent cooperation" from residents who recognized that particular trees were a hazard not only to the electric lines but to their houses.

Edison paid particular attention to trees near public safety buildings and elderly housing and nursing homes, to minimize the likelihood of power failures to those buildings, she said.

Recognizing that past tree pruning damaged and disfigured trees, Hassan explained that Eastern Edison hired a professional forester, who supervised the operation and worked with the local tree warden.

The company has also given Cohasset $2,000 with which to purchase new trees, to replace ones that were removed on town property, mindful that municipal budget cuts have cut into the amount the town can spend for new plantings. This allows the town to chose what types of trees it wants in different locations: shade trees or ornamental flowering trees.

The tree trimming also helps by limiting the ability of squirrels to reach the electric wires and equipment. Hassan estimates that 20 to 25 per cent of service interruptions are "directly related to wildlife," particularly squirrels.

Edison is installing "wildlife guards": synthetic, non-conductive coverings which shield bare, energized equipment from squirrels. However, the "sheer persistence" of the critters which chew through the guards is usually fatal to the animal and results in a "nuisance interruption" to customers.

The company also consulted an engineer and also the company's linemen, she said, explaining that the linemen are often more aware of existing problems in the communities.

Eastern Edison has spent $500,000 to remove small primary voltage conductors on Atlantic Avenue, Beach Street, Cedar Street, Elm Court, Hull Street, Jerusalem Road, Red Gate Lane, and Reservoir Road. This amount represents 5 per cent of Edison's total budget, spent in Cohasset which accounts for 2 per cent of the company's customers.

Cohasset's coastline poses a problem from salt spray corroding connectors and cables, Hassan said. Edison washing down this equipment on a regular basis to prolong its life and minimize power failures. Where necessary, insulators and transformers are being replaced.

In response to complaints that its Cohasset customers could not contact the company to report the loss of power, Hassan said a new "high volume call answering service" has been installed. The new system will allow more customers to contact the utility company, to report service problems, and to record comments.

Selectmen said earlier this month Eastern Edison officials will be invited to meet with them, to discuss the improvements to electric service in Cohasset. At their Feb. 5 meeting, Selectman Peter Pratt, who sharply criticized the company after the December, 1994 storm, said, "Good work has been accomplished."

"They moved the whole issue forward dramatically."

Primary set for Tuesday, March 5

They are joined on the Massachusetts ballot by Robert Dornan, Alan Keyes, Richard Lugar, Morry Taylor and even Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who dropped out two weeks ago.

The Massachusetts Libertarian ballot lists Harry Browne, Irwin Schiff and Rick Tomkins as presidential candidates.

Candidates for Democratic and Republican State Committees also appear on the primary ballots.

Marshfield resident Annie Federico is vying for a seat on the Democratic State Committee against Karen DeTellis of Weymouth. Republicans and Democrats will each pick a state committeeman and committeewoman and there will be contest on each ballot.

In the Plymouth-Norfolk district, Karen DeTellis of Weymouth is running against Ann Federico of Marshfield for the Democratic seat that is being given up by Norma Fenochietti. Frederick Koed of Cohasset is running unopposed for Democratic state committeeman.

DeTellis was born in Marshfield, moved to Weymouth. Federico was born in Dorchester, moved to Marshfield.

DeTellis, 51, is a member of the Weymouth Board of Health and chairman of the Democratic Town Committee in Weymouth.

Federico, 45, is a legislative aide to the retiring Cong. Gerry Studds and chairman of the Democratic Town Committee in Marshfield.

On the Republican side, Tom Barry of Duxbury is running for re-election to the state committee against William McClory of Hull. Polly Logan of Cohasset, vice chairman of the Massachusetts Republican party, is also running for re-election to the state committee.

Thirty-five candidates for the Democratic and Republican Town Committees are on each ballot as well.

In the primary, unenrolled voters may choose either a Democratic, Republican or Libertarian ballot. A wish to remain unenrolled must be indicated after voting; otherwise the resident is enrolled in the party in which they voted.

GOP locals pick Dole to win

By KIMBERLEY KEYES
Cohasset Mariner

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole will win Tuesday's presidential primary, local Republicans predicted.

"Most people I talk to in political circles in Massachusetts tend to be for Dole," said Republican State Committeeman Tom Barry of Duxbury.

"I think he's the most qualified, has the most experience and understands how government runs," he said. "I think he represents the views of most Republicans in that they want smaller government, lower taxes and less spending."

By contrast, Dole's rival Pat Buchanan – who narrowly beat Dole, 27 percent to 26 percent, in last week's New Hampshire primary – is "a bit of an extremist," said Republican state Rep. and Abington Selectman Ron Whitney.

"I would think that Dole would win," said Polly Logan of Cohasset, vice chairman of the Massachusetts Republican Party. She noted State Treasurer Joe Malone is running Dole's campaign in Massachusetts, and that Gov. William Weld and Lt. Gov Paul Cellucci also support the Kansas senator.

She said she expects a fairly large turnout for the primary, especially by unenrolled voters who want to take GOP ballots.

"Plymouth County is a very strong Republican stronghold," Logan said.

In Marshfield, where Democrats outnumber Republicans 2 to 1, voters "don't tend to go way overboard one way or the other," said Republican Town Committee chairman Barbara Carney. She predictedDole will take both the town and the state.

Dole is "viewed as being more moderate than Pat Buchanan, but conservative on the fiscal issues," which may appeal to Bay State voters, District Attorney Michael Sullivan said.

A Republican from Abington, Sullivan said he doesn't expect a landslide victory for Dole because of the crowded field, but added, "I don't think it's going to be nearly as close as it was in New Hampshire."

Former Tenn. Gov. Lamar Alexander captured 23 percent of the vote in New Hampshire, while publishing heir Steve Forbes got 12 percent. Other candidates on the Massachusetts GOP ballot are California congressman Robert Dornan, radio talk show host Alan Keyes, Indiana Sen. Richard Lugar, and tire baron Morry Taylor.

If Dole and Alexander split the moderates' vote, said Republican state Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth, Buchanan could surpass them.

But "I would say Dole is probably the odds-on favorite right now," he said.

Whoever wins the Massachusetts primary will be endorsed by all 37 Bay States delegates to the Republican national convention. The convention, to be held in August in San Diego, will choose the party's official candidates for president and vice president, Barry said.

Hedlund said the thought of Dole as the party standard-bearer makes him nervous.

"I don't know if he's going to be able to excite people enough to be the next president," he said.

Whitney said the 73-year-old Dole "has to sharpen his message to the people in order to win the monination."

AGE NO BARRIER TO HOME LOAN

QUESTION: I am 65 years old, retired, have a large bank account and good equity in stocks and bonds. Would my age be a barrier to getting a home loan? To put it another way - when does a person become too old to obtain a mortgage?

ANSWER: With certain reservations - never!

If the real estate equity is there and the ability to repay is established, what is the difference if a person is 30 or 70 years of age? Each case, however, must be judged on its own individual merits.

The age and condition of the property, its resale value, and the person's ability to repay are far more important than the borrower's age alone.

Marlette: politics rules town counsel selection

top candidates being those who fulfilled the requirements.

Brown also said that since Marlette is town moderator, he could not serve as town counsel.

Marlette maintained that the by-laws allow a moderator to be town counsel, which does occur in other communities.

Brown also said that Marlette lacks the necessary town government experience since has not served as town counsel.

However, Marlette said that he has the five years municipal law experience asked for in the request for proposal. He explained that although he has never represented a community, he routinely handles work in zoning, construction and labor law which often involve municipalities.

Marlette said a legal associate, Benjamin Albanese, who has represented Brockton for more than four years, would be on-call should he be unavailable.

In addition, Marlette said that selectmen have misrepresented his fees.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said Monday night that Marlette would bill at $145 per hour, higher than the $100 to $120 per hour that the four finalists said they would bill at, and considerably above the $85 current town counsel Richard Henderson charges.

However, Marlette said that the form asked for his customary fees, which range from $150 to $165 per hour.

He said he would not charge that to the town, but would negotiate to reduce legal charges and either bill at less than Henderson's rate or offer more free hours.

"That is hogwash," he said of complaints that he would be more expensive. "I told them I would take whatever they offered. I would negotiate and reduce," legal bills.

He said that in his role as moderator, he already reviews all articles and motions for their legality and that he would not bill for this if he became counsel. Nor would he charge for attending town meeting, since he would already be there.

He also stated that selectman Martha Gjesteby said at the start of the process that selectmen Sullivan and Jane Goedecke do not like him and that she (Gjesteby) had already pledged her vote to Kopelman & Paige.

"That Martha very clearly said, Mr. Sullivan and Ms. Goedecke didn't like me and she was committed elsewhere," Marlette charged.

Gjesteby has stated that she has not pledged her vote to anyone.

Marlette claimed that selectman Peter Pratt wanted to interview him, but the others did not.

Gjesteby Monday night said she was one of two selectmen in favor of interviewing the local candidates, but she did not indicate which selectmen opposed interviewing Marlette.

Selectmen interviewed Paul DeRensis and two other representatives, including a Cohasset resident, of Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis Holland & Drachman Monday night and were planning to speak with Michael Lehane of Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane; Leonard Kopelman of Kopleman & Paige; and George Hall of Anderson & Kreiger on Wednesday.

Town may borrow to finance costs

Weld is a Republican.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby, a Republican with close ties to the administration, pointed out that they would take the same action if the governor were a Democrat.

Selectmen agreed to send copies of the letter to state Sen. Robert Hedlund and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

However, they do not expect the state to pay the bill.

Selectman chairman Merle Brown said that he hopes the $150,000 deficit can be paid for out of free cash. If the advisory committee does not think that is possible, the town will have to borrow to pay the bill.

Brown said the money cannot be put on an override of Proposition 2 1/2 question because that could fail and the town must pay the bills.

Selectman Michael Sullivan deplored the cost, stating that the town is being put in this position because of pressure from the solid waste industry.

He said, "the situation is getting out of hand."

In recent weeks, selectmen have tried to hold down the costs associated with CHL, asking that lawyers representing the various town boards involved - the conservation commission and board of health — not to attend sessions of the hearing unless absolutely necessary.

Gjesteby objected to a bill from legal counsel Warner & Stackpole, because it indicated the town is being charged for lawyers at the firm to consult with each other.

However, Brown said that the firm has been trying to hold costs down and did not submit a bill for all services.

Included in the $244,000, Doyon's spread sheet indicates that through June 30, the town will spend:

- $135,000, Warner & Stackpole;
- $54,000, engineers Camp, Dresser & McKee;
- $23,000, attorney Kenneth Kimmell;
- $12,000, engineers Fugro-East;
- $8,000, transcripts;
- $6,000, engineers McDonough & Scully;
- $5,650, Patrick Barosh, which comes from the water department budget.

In addition, the Kimmell bills do not include the cost of a brief he is expected to file, and transcript costs will rise if the hearings continue longer than expected.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Hat's off to Cohasset High artist Liz Good

We start by giving you wonderful news about Liz Good, a member of the senior class at Cohasset High School. Liz received an honorable mention in this year's Boston Globe Scholastic Arts Awards. The artwork is on exhibit through March 1 at the State Transportation Building, 10 Park Plaza, Boston.

The Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards Show is a free exhibit of junior high and high school artwork, sponsored by the Boston Globe and administered by the New England Art Education Conference. Stop by and see the work of some of Massachusetts' most talented artists — and be sure to congratulate Liz on having her talent recognized.

The Cohasset PTO is presenting a computer night for parents tonight, Feb. 29, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria. Computer teachers Marge Murphy and Bob Knurek will discuss how computers are being integrated into Osgood, Deer Hill and the junior and senior high curriculum, as well as other information on computers. There will be a question and answer period. It promises to be informative, so go and learn what our students are learning!

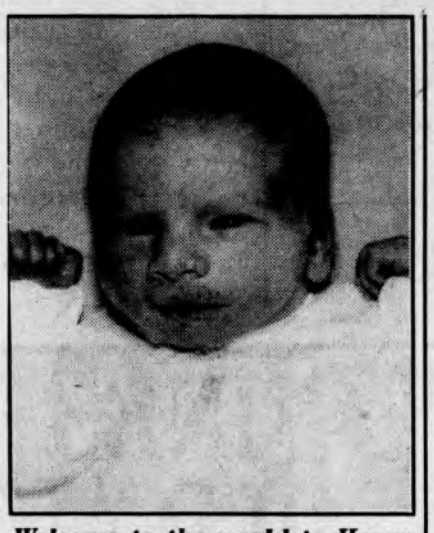
One quick question for all before we continue — have you filled out the town census that was mailed to you recently? It is a must, as it is used to maintain voting and jury lists and aids in school enrollment projections and public needs. It also establishes proof of residency that is needed for privileges throughout the town and the state. Why not sit down and do it today (after you read the Cohasset Mariner, of course!)



Welcome to the world to Henry Anton Gjesteby who was born Feb. 7. If you see Henry's grandparents, Arne and Martha, smiling more than usual around town, be sure to congratulate them!

It is hoped that Helen King is feeling much better as she reads this following her operation last week.

Speaking of operations, Grace Silvia was also operated on last week. We know the surgery will enable you to walk all over Cohasset by spring, Grace, and look at all the beautiful flowers that will be out by then.

Don't forget the Third Annual Quilt Show and Luncheon that will be held March 2 at Second Congregational Church from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. There will be a display of more than 50 quilts and a luncheon featuring a choice of shrimp, ham or vegetable soufflé, salad, rolls and an elaborate homemade dessert cart. Call Carol Sandblom (383-1812) or the church office (383-0345) for information. It's guaranteed that you will be glad you attended!

Do you ever read the Boston Globe's column, "Ask The Globe"? Recently, "P.C." wrote, saying that due to a flood, his or her CHS yearbook, Class of 1985, had been ruined, with the pages all stuck together. The Globe column could offer no solution, but we think if you call the high school they may be able to help! Even if they lend you a copy to copy!

Happy birthday greetings go to Marge Litchfield this week — it is an exciting one for Marge, who will be 70 years young! Hope your day is a happy one, Marge, and the next 70 years, too!

Canned fruit, snack food and crackers, fruit juice, sugar, cereal, rice, personal products and household products are all on the wish list for the Cohasset Food Pantry. Please do whatever you can to make the list of needs shorter — It matter to so many!

We wish Bob Pattison a "bon voyage" as he heads to sunny Honolulu. Hopefully he will bottle up some of that sunshine and bring it back to all of us in this cold, dismal climate! Seriously, have a wonderful time, Bob!

This winter's weather doesn't keep Eleanor Cooney Smith inside. Eleanor, a retired librarian, who has lived in town for more than 50 years, stays in shape by skiing to her letter box during one of our recent snowstorms. Photo by Althea Stamp

Speaking of all the lousy weather we have had this year, one person seems to love it — Louis Bailey! Did you know that he is out plowing during every storm, volunteering his services? We all thank you, Louis. Your help is grand!

Congratulations go to Tara Hettstrom, Erica Hettstrom and Jodi Colwill, who were named South Shore League all stars during the final League meet.

Did you know that the George H. Mealy Legion Post 118 has said they will reinstate a team into American Legion Baseball for the 1996 season? Players who are interested in being considered for the season should call John Carr (383-0331) or Scott Arnold (545-1896).

Good luck to the CHS basketball team as it begins its quest for the championships — keep watching for all the results!

Wildflowers was topic

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset held a meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 27, at Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephen's Church. Susan Dumaine, the first recipient of the New England Wild Flower Society's Katheryn S. Taylor Award for excellence, demonstrated how wildflowers can become a beautiful addition to any home landscape.

Mary Monteiro turns 90 in style

Mary Monteiro holds a bouquet of tulips at her 90th birthday celebration, Feb. 23.

Mary Monteiro is surrounded by some young friends at a special party in honor of her 90th birthday at the First Parish House last week.

On Friday afternoon, Feb. 23, friends, neighbors, and relatives met to wish Mary Monteiro a happy 90th birthday.

After a special Mass celebrated by Father Mulvehill at St. Anthony's Church, a reception was held at the Unitarian Parish House, where arrangements of spring flowers, a cake (with 90 candles!), and trays of delicious food set the party atmosphere.

"Mimi," who was born in the house on Stockbridge Street where she has resided all her life, was congratulated by many of her friends, including 25 of the hundreds of children she has cared for over the years.

We all wish her many more years of good health and lots of sunshine for working in her beautiful garden.

Give your candidate the convention bounce

Tuesday is presidential primary day. For the first time in history all the New England states except, of course, New Hampshire will hold their primary on the same day.

The presidential primary is a red letter day for the American voter.

It gives us clout in the electoral process. It empowers the people.

First there is the obvious result. The primary commits the state's politicial party delegations to vote for the popular candidate on the first vote at the convention.

Of course, after the first ballot on the convention floor, the delegates are on their own.

In the primary we select the members of our town committees. These members caucus and send delegates to the state convention where the delegates to the national convention are chosen.

In short, the primary gives a political party's rank and file a greater voice in the choice of candidates.

The first primary dates back to New York City in 1827. The idea took a back seat after that for almost a century.

In the early 1900s, some progressive Republicans in the midwest resurrected the primary. They wanted to minimize the clout of state party machines.

In 1901 Robert LaFollette, governor of Wisconsin, promoted a direct primary bill.

By 1916 both Republicans and Democrats were choosing most national convention delegates by this method.

But then, again, the primary went on the back burner — this time for 50 years. It returned with a vengeance in the early '70s as more and more states have seen the advantages of holding them.

Not everyone agrees on their importance. In 1952, Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee won most primaries, but Adlai Stevenson took the Democratic nomination. Stevenson called the primary an "almost useless institution." He said it was confusing, time-consuming, expensive and exhausting. It burns up all the candidate's energy and money. "All it does is destroy some candidates," he said.

Yes, the primary is expensive and exhausting. But the grueling process certainly weeds out the weak of heart, tests the mettle of the person and puts the candidate under the most extraordinary scrutiny .

If the candidate can't stand the heat and pace of the primary process, how about the pressure of the White House!

The primary process gave Kennedy the bump he needed on his road to the White House in 1960. The Massachusetts Democrat found that the process was a shakedown cruise for his staff and a test of his vote-getting ability.

In 1976 Jimmy Carter was living proof that the one who wins the early primaries can gain unstoppable momentum.

The winner of the most primaries goes into the convention with bounce. In recent history, that bounce is likely to be the deciding factor in the nomination.

If you want your candidate to have bounce going into the convention, if you want a say in who will be your party's candidate, if you want to feel empowered during this presidential campaign, vote in the primary Tuesday.

A COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER COMPANY

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

New school compromise is sought

To the Editor:

We voted differently at the recent school override election, but both of us want what is best for all Cohasset residents to include our youth.

We both attended the Feb. 22 "Where do we go from here" meeting with the selectmen, school superintendent, school committee, and school facilities committee. There was an excellent spirit of cooperation and the substantial audience was well-balanced between those who had voted "No" and those who had voted "Yes."

We both left the meeting convinced that the Osgood should be replaced and the Deer Hill needs minor expansion and significant renovations. However, both objectives can be achieved at significantly less cost than previously proposed.

We both recommend:

A. The actual project cost be reduced by:

– Reducing square footage of new construction by 5 percent.

– Reducing square footage of renovation construction by 5 percent.

– Reducing the cost per square foot of new construction by 5 percent.

– reducing the cost per square foot of renovation construction by 5 percent.

B. The school committee and selectmen make a firm commitment to sell the Osgood School and its 4.9 acres for commercial redevelopment and return it to the tax rolls as elderly housing or some other acceptable usage.

The net effect of the above will be:

A. Project cost reductions will equal 8.6 percent, or, $1,152,180.

B. Sale of the Osgood property should realize at least $1,000,000 (current assessed value is $2.856 million, which is undoubtedly high — the school facilities committee should immediately get a realistic appraisal).

The net effect would be to reduce the original project cost from $13.46 million to $11.31 million; this is a $2.15 million cost reduction; or, 16 percent.

We realize that some people want to compromise by replacing the Osgood School and leaving the many deficiencies at the Deer Hill School for another day. Only addressing the Osgood problem might reduce the immediate project cost by another $1.5 million-2 million ($9.5 million-10 million). However, very serious functional and state code deficiencies will persist at the Deer Hill. They will have to be paid for soon, at greater cost and most likely without 60 percent state assistance.

We are all going to have to compromise to address the needs of our youth at a cost we can afford. Please call your selectmen and school representatives and support the compromise outlined above.

Selling Hagerty house supported

To the Editor:

Happy after three years to finally see the house on the Hagerty property is to be sold, as was originally implied in persuading the town to purchase the property. After all, we need the money; as evidenced in the vote against building a new elementary school. But why set a floor on the price?

I can't think of a more sure way not to sell a house than to put an artificial floor on the price. The fact that three years ago a committee felt the house was worth $200,000 has nothing to do with today's market realities.

Are you going to turn down a buyer who offers $199,000 or $195,000? Are you crazy? Put the house with the best brokers in town and simply get the best price you can for it.

Robert M. Davenport
Black Horse Lane

Thank you's to all concerned

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Arts Boosters and the Cohasset High School teachers and students who participated in the annual Valentine Cabaret at Kimball's would like to thank Kimball's by the Sea's staff who make it possible every year for them to conduct the dinner/cabaret on their premises. Kimball's not only provides the intimate dining and performing space, but also a reasonably priced and sumptuous fare.

The Cohasset Arts Boosters would also like to thank the multi-talented high school students, as well as a seventh and eighth grader this year, who sang solos, played flutes, trumpets, guitars and piano, sang duets and chorale pieces and danced Irish step as well as exhibited their art and photography.

It is a thrilling experience to witness not only the range of talents but also the professional presence these young people of Cohasset offer us each year. They and their teachers and accompanists Marcia Lajoie, Bryon Marks, Tom Sippel, Ilene Rohrer, Ann Whiteley and Gary Ritts are to be congratulated.

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to last week's Question of the Week:

• What is the most important issue facing the town department (or board) you would like to represent? How will you make a difference?

Martha Gjesteby, selectman

The board of selectmen performs a large number of important tasks. To mention a few:

1. The board oversees contract negotiations with all employees except the school department.

2. It executes decisions made by town meeting and serves as executive branch of town government.

3. Some of the departments it oversees are public safety, harbor, building department as well as the new public works department.

How will I make a difference?

The remaining members of the board have only two or four years experience. This fact makes my long-time experience very valuable to the board and to the town. I have served nine years on the board of selectmen. I also have been a member of the school committee, capital budget committee, planning board, South Shore Coalition and on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, where I also served as treasurer and executive committee member.

While on the board, I always worked toward consensus in decisions that we had to make.

My election on state-wide boards of selectmen, Governors Advisory Council and Massachusetts Municipal Association give me access and connection to a variety of local and state government officials. This is valuable to the board as well as to the town.

Ronnie McMorris, selectman

The greatest issue facing the Cohasset Board of Selectmen this spring is leadership. In order to lead the community, its members must work together, listen to residents, talk, compromise, avoid political rhetoric, and finally take positive action on issues facing the town.

Right now Cohasset is facing significant financial challenges and decisions that will affect the character of our town for years to come. It is important for the members of the board of selectmen to work closely with residents as they take an increasingly active role in planning the course we as a community will take.

I sincerely believe that I have the qualities and abilities needed to provide that leadership.

1. My skills as an attorney and mediator, and my service on the conservation commission give me an understanding of a broad range of town issues.

2. Three generations of my family live in Cohasset, providing me with an understanding of the needs and interests of our various residents.

3. I will bring energy, empathy, initiative, and a new perspective to the board.

I believe that Cohasset's residents are informed and caring. I will listen, respect diverse opinions, and act when leadership is needed.

Nan Roth, selectman

Management of capital improvement expenditures is the most critical challenge facing the board of aelectmen. Confronting a rising tax rate, the Board must balance the needs for improved or new services with concern for the ability and willingness of citizens to pay. The selectmen must provide leadership to bring the diverse groups, individuals and boards in Cohasset together. Differing views and needs must be heard. To develop successful outcomes every voice and opinion deserves cordial attention.. The selectmen must develop creative solutions including regionalization, centralization and other changes in the structure of town government to solve problems with maximum efficiency and minimal expense.

Citizens have had too many surprises over the last few years. Major capital projects and a large maintenance backlog face us. We must cap the landfill, expand the sewer system, prevent environmental degradation, accommodate increasing school enrollment and repair deteriorating buildings within the upcoming years. A good capital plan will help us do this efficiently and economically. By carefully designing, timing and funding our projects, we can provide for the future while maintaining tax rate stability.

My four years as chairman of the advisory committee has given me broad understanding of all parts of town government: employees, assets, services, budgets and problems.

Joseph Buckley, treasurer-collector

The acting treasurer had an accident and is in the hospital. The assistant collector is now acting treasurer and is managing the office by herself with assistance from accounting and other departments. The candidate that is elected should have the experience to immediately take charge. Of all the candidates, my 35 years as a chief financial officer qualifies me as that person.

Another important issue is: if the citizens wish to have this office appointed instead of elected.

Although, I know I am qualified and I would like to serve the full three years, if the article to appoint passes the town meeting, I am willing to step down, if elected, when the selectmen wish to appoint a treasurer-collector.

Managing millions of dollars, various trust funds and increasing bond issues have changed the office of treasurer-collector greatly. In nearly 50 percent of the towns in the Commonwealth, the office is appointed.

In closing, I would like to thank Betty Ripley for her years of service to Cohasset and to congratulate her on the way she has developed the treasurer collector's office. Betty leaves for a similar position in Marshfield, which was appointed not elected.

Wigmore Pierson, treasurer-collector

This critically important department in town government processes nearly $22,000,000 annually. Because of Elizabeth Ripley's unexpected resignation effective Feb. 16 and Sally Lincoln's untimely hip injury, the office is currently managed by Linda Litchfield, alone.

The 2/3 reduction in staff in one week leaves this office desperately short-handed. Therefore, personnel shortage is the most important issue facing the treasurer-collector. I will bring an immediate and vigorous full-time commitment to the position.

In addition, with my background as president of a multi-million dollar investment company and wide contacts in the investment banking community, I intend to activate and expand the investment advisory committee to insure the maximum return on our funds consistent with sound fiduciary guidelines.

Patricia A. Walsh, treasurer-collector

Former treasurer-collector Betty Ripley improved this office's efficiency by increasing the rate of overdue collections, encouraging volunteers to stuff tax bills, quarterly billing to improve the town's cash flow, implementing bi-weekly payrolls, and investing in CDs when the rates went as high as 16.5 percent.

Candidate Patricia Anne Walsh, after seeing the recent vote on the school proposition 2-1/2 override, in addition to more capital debt planning, wants the treasurer-collector's office to be in more frequent communication with town department heads — not just the selectmen, so they are not brought in at the last minute with their engineers/architects/contractors concerning their misconceptions about bonding debt.

Cohasset's citizens should also understand early the tax implications when they vote infra-structure debt such as a new school. e.g. without the new school, last week the town accountant figured the average tax bill ($300,000) would go from $4,554 in FY '97 to $5,557 in FY 2002 because of past commitments.

Walsh believes it is better to have the facts in advance, than to have flip-flop votes because of perceived lack of communication. e.g. the school department had its great informational question and answer meeting after, rather than before, town meeting and the override vote.

John P. Rafferty, water commission

I will have three primary goals as water commissioner: fiscal responsibility, water quality (long term), and customer service. However, the most important issue facing the water department currently is fiscal responsibility.

Fiscal responsibility means:

• Supporting the existing capital improvement program, but with care not to overspend.

• Formalizing a long term capital budgeting plan to avoid future financial surprises. We should make future capital improvements on a steady, prudent basis to minimize disruptions in service quality.

• Communicating our long term plans consistently to the selectmen, advisory committee, capital budget committee, treasurer, controller, and town residents.

• Benchmarking operating performance against other water companies to find cost reduction opportunities. Only through comparative financials can we truly know how well we are doing.

I am keenly interested in the water industry and will provide experienced financial oversight to annual operations. My background includes an MBA degree and 15 years of corporate banking experience, most recently as Director, Resources & Utilities at Shawmut Bank. Furthermore, my recent banking experience concentrated in the chemicals and utilities industries and included a thorough research of the water industry. I remain fully aware of key issues facing the water department through regular meeting attendance over the past year.

Rick Shea, school committee

The most important issue facing the Cohasset School Committee is ensuring a quality education for all Cohasset students, while maintaining the cost of that education at a level commensurate with what Cohasset residents can support.

During my term of office on the school committee, I will make a difference in the following areas: (1) education programs, (2) management practices and (3) communications. Having worked with high tech and financial services companies for 10 years with Coopers & Lybrand and in biotech for the past three years, I know the skills required for tomorrow's workforce. Beyond basic reading and computational skills, students need to learn problem solving skills, how to work in teams and how to use technology to access information. I will ensure that our educational programs meet this challenge. Second, both in teaching and in the administration of the schools, we need to implement the best practices available to maximize productivity and to control costs. Lastly, I will make a special effort to confer and consult with Cohasset residents who do not presently have children in the schools about the school committee's programmatic and financial plans.

Ted Guild, sewer commission

The most important issue facing the sewer commission is the major sewer expansion project under the town's new Agreement for Judgment with the Commonwealth. This will entail the largest capital expenditure in the history of our town.

I have been a member of the board of sewer commissioners for 13 years, including eight years as chairman. Consequently, I am thoroughly familiar with the ecological requirements, engineering details, and economic aspects of our sewer expansion project. This knowledge is of great importance to ensure the most ecologically acceptable and most cost effective solutions for our town's major wastewater program.

Question of the Week:

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street or mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050. Or they may be FAXed to our Hingham office at 617-740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Noon on Tuesday. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses to the candidates must be brief — a 250 word limit. Articles which exceed the limit will be cut. So be specific and make every word count. (Please note, responses to this week's question were limited to 200 words).

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is:

• For selectmen candidates: at times selectmen's meetings have resembled the Punch & Judy show. What causes this board discord and what could you do to change it?

• For school committee candidates: citizens not being aware of the school vacation policy change and plans for the new school until the 11th hour are just two examples of problems the school committee has had in getting the word out, some say. Do you agree? What would you do to improve communication between the school committee and the public?

• For treasurer-collector candidates: selectmen are considering asking voters to make the treasurer-collector's position appointed. What's the value in having an elected treasurer-collector?

• For water commission candidates: North Cohasset residents are seeing red over their Hingham water bills. Would it be feasible to hook these homes up to Cohasset's water system?

• For sewer commission candidates: as is proposed for West Corner area homes in Hingham, should the town share part of the cost of hooking Straits Pond area residents up to the Hull treatment plant?

• For planning board candidates: what role will the planning board play when Greenbush railroad construction comes to town?

• For health board candidates: last year there was a move afoot to increase the health board from three to five members. Is this a good or bad idea? Why?

Question of the Week

Michael Mullin, planning board

Let's face it — Cohasset's a great place to live. Because of its unique size, it can offer a range of services and activities unequaled by any of its neighbors.

For this reason, Cohasset's a builder's dream. New construction sells before the ground is even broken.

But as tempting as it is to turn empty lots into revenue, we must fully consider both the short and long term effects that any new construction will have on our town.

As a planning board member, I will make sure that building requests, no matter what size, are cautiously considered before being approved.

As father of two small children, I'm well aware that the choices we make today will have long lasting effects on the future of this town. We must choose wisely so that the Cohasset 50 years from now is as great as it is today!

Keith Knowles, school committee

The events surrounding the defeated school override exemplify the most important issues in the race for school committee, communication and diversity. At the recent meeting of the three boards involved in picking up the pieces, the point was made that such a meeting should have been held long before the issue was brought to voters. I agree. The fact that it took a negative response to prompt such a meeting underlines the first issue, communication.

The school committee, either through naiveté or arrogance, does not adequately communicate with the taxpayers at large on any matter. The school committee blames us for not knowing. I believe it is their responsibility to keep us informed. If elected, I plan to communicate with the taxpayers frequently. The town's alternate newspaper has agreed to provide a forum. I'm sure the Mariner would be equally amenable.

Secondly, the current makeup of the committee virtually guarantees their isolation. Every member is either an educator or comes from the PSO. Since there is no representation from the community as a whole, the committee has no idea how we feel about them or their issues. My record of community involvement and business and professional background will bring balance to the committee.

Kevin Ulmer, board of health

The most important issue facing the Cohasset Board of Health continues to be the Cohasset Heights Limited landfill. I have been actively opposed to both the proposed Area V expansion and the continuing operation of the landfill for several years now, based on my own scientific analysis of CHL. This landfill poses a very real threat to the public health for generations to come, particularly with regard to our drinking water supplies.

My decision to seek a seat on the board reflects my desire to bring my broad scientific background in biology, chemistry, physics and oceanographic sciences to bear on the complex technical issues the board is facing in their deliberations.

I believe that I will bring an important new dimension to the board as they seek to enforce regulation of ongoing operations, oversee the closure of existing portions of the landfill, and deal with any appeal that may arise out of the current hearings. The board will face similar issues as we cap our own municipal landfill in the coming year.

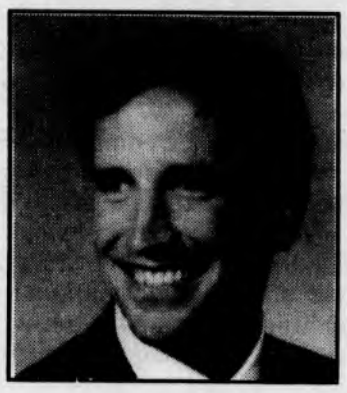
John Rafferty announces candidacy for water commissioner

John Rafferty has announced his candidacy for the Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners. The board of selectman recently appointed Rafferty to the Cohasset Water Resources Protection Committee. He also is a new member of the American Water Works Association.

"I have a keen interest in clean water and would love the opportunity to serve the Town of Cohasset in an elected capacity. I have attended almost all of the water commission and Water Resource Protection Committee meetings over the past year and am fully aware of the critical issues."

Rafferty would bring 15 years of corporate banking experience to the board, most recently as a director in the Resources & Utilities group at Shawmut Bank. He has a detailed knowledge of both the chemicals and utilities industries, having participated in financing numerous companies in those industries over the past two years. He has an M.B.A. degree from the University of Connecticut and a B.A. in economics from Trinity College.

"Under Fred Koed's leadership as chairman of the Cohasset Water Commission, the Cohasset Water Department has made great strides in improving operations. I plan to focus on three goals as commissioner: fiscal responsibility, water quality, and customer service. The commission has focused on emergency distribution system improvements over the past year. We must now shift to a second stage of managing the department efficiently, maximizing each dollar spent, and improving customer responsiveness."



John Rafferty

John and his wife, Jennifer, moved to Cohasset in August of 1994 from the Hartford area, purchasing the home of long-time Cohasset residents, Peter and Sandra Greenman, on Stoneleigh Lane. They have two young sons, Bryce and Keefe. You can often find John taking advantage of the clean, cool water at Black Rock Beach from early spring to late fall.

You can reach John with questions or concerns at 383-9608 or through email: jnrafferty@aol.com.

Richard 'Chipper' D. Muncey to run for water commission

Richard D. Muncey, a life-long resident of Cohasset, has filed papers for a three-year term on the Cohasset Water Commission. The seat is presently held by William Montuori, who is not seeking reelection.

A 1986 graduate of Cohasset High School, Muncey recently resigned his position with Cohasset Water Services, Inc. to take a position with the Town of Pembroke Water Department as a water technician. Muncey assumed his new duties with Pembroke Feb. 12.

"I would like to continue to serve my hometown as a water services professional and by continuing to upgrade and improve the current distribution system and treatment facility. I hope voters will view my over eight years' experience with the Cohasset Water System and my new responsibilities in Pembroke as meaningful credentials," he said.

Muncey is presently taking water technical courses at Quincy College. Currently he holds the highest Distribution Operator's License, a grade 4D, in the Commonwealth. He also holds a Treatment Operators License grade IT and is working towards a Treatment Operator's License, grade 4T. His professional affiliations are with the following: American Water Works Association, New England Water Works Association, Massachusetts and Plymouth County Water Works Association.

For many years he served as a Cohasset Special Olympics Coach and worked on the Cohasset Rotary Road Race. He lives at 377 South Main St.

CHEF'S CORNER

The mannequins in the windows may not have vocal chords, but they say a lot about us!

You can go to lots of stores to get things for your kitchen, most of which will be poor quality. We can show you real quality equipment, lots of it made in the USA, and also good quality made in other places. We've found that the French make some things better than anyone else, and we offer all we can get. We've found that Italy makes some awesome hand painted pottery, so we feature their finest. We've found that the Germans make great cutlery, baking pans, etc. and we carry that. Most important, we've found that many things just can't be made anywhere like we make them in the good old USA. We carry butcher blocks and other products made here that are far and away better than anybody in the whole world makes. In short, while we make every effort to keep our prices competitive, we really do select the finest quality products from around the world (something those other stores always claim but never do). We can get almost anything you want in kitchen equipment (including restaurant equipment), and usually at the lowest prices in the area.
We are a Norwell family operating a Norwell company, we buy local products and services whenever we can, we support our town and local communities, we plan to be here a long time, and we hope we can bring an extra measure of quality to your cooking and dining life!

Traffic concerns dominate recent landfill hearing

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

Recent sessions of the Board of Health on the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) heard testimony on increased traffic along Route 3A and to what extent this traffic would impact neighboring Hingham.

Consulting engineer Robert Blumenthal, speaking for Cohasset Heights, stated that by using a 1990 study which he prepared on existing landfill traffic, which allowed for the possibility of future expansion, and based on figures supplied by CHL's engineering firm of SAIC, it was his conclusion that "additional traffic will not create problems for safety" if the landfill expanded.

He based his opinion on figures that showed that during peak traffic hours along Route 3A only one percent of the total traffic involved trucks, while daily traffic averages, he said, showed trucks made up only 5 percent of total volume.

Blumenthal told the board his statistics showed that fewer than expected trucks, and a fairly higher percentage of passenger vehicles, would use an expanded facility.

CHL figures showed approximately 369 vehicles currently enter and exit the landfill by way of the Route 3A/Crocker Lane intersection during the 10 hour operating cycle of the landfill.

Blumenthal stated that the majority of trucks would arrive by way of Route 3 through Rockland and Norwell, continuing down Route 228 through Hingham and, finally, along Route 3A until entering the landfill.

William Scully, from the transportation engineering and planning firm of McDonough & Scully, Inc., and speaking for the town of Cohasset, took exception to this testimony based on his study of traffic flow patterns.

The 1990 study, he said, which Blumenthal used, relied too much on other studies that were either not completed or were, themselves, not properly updated.

"We disagree with the proponent's (Blumenthal's) analysis," he said.

"Most times the level of service (trucks doing business at the landfill) is not the issue, but how traffic moves through the area is."

According to Scully, peak landfill traffic hours would coincide and overlap with school and commuter peak hours (both mornings and afternoons), thereby posing a danger.

Additionally, approximately 150 new trucks per day traveling to the landfill could potentially clog traffic along several Hingham roads. This would be by way of excessive delays in attempting to come out of side streets entering onto Route 3A.

Scully further noted that virtually the same problem would then develop at the Route 3A/Crocker Lane intersection to the landfill. Increased traffic traveling Route 3A would create a back-up for trucks attempting to exit the facility.

Cohasset Height's attorney Anton Moherke questioned Scully on this last point as well as the contention that an expanded landfill would create a public safety danger based on truck traffic estimates.

Using a graph showing peak traffic hours, Scully stated that, starting at 3 p.m., 1,500 vehicles per hour would travel along Route 3A and somewhere between 1 to 6 percent of this total would be truck traffic.

Moherke did get Scully to admit he could not state conclusively just how many of these trucks would be going to or coming from the landfill.

On the topic of a Route 3A/Crocker Lane danger, Scully was also unable to cite any known traffic accidents related to trucks entering or exiting the Cohasset Heights facility.

Blumenthal, speaking for Cohasset Heights, said that increased traffic from an expanded landfill would pose no safety dangers to residents of Cohasset or Hingham.

A 1990 study on traffic conducted by his firm for CHL and revised in November 1995, Blumenthal explained, showed that large truck traffic along the "study route" (Route 3 to Route 228 to Route 3A) would result in an increase of approximately 21 additional vehicles per day traveling through both communities.

He added that passenger vehicles and smaller pick-up trucks would probably use alternate roads to the landfill, depending upon their work locations.

When asked if the restoration of the Greenbush Line to the Old Colony Rail Road and future expansion to Cohasset's Cushing Plaza were taken into consideration, Blumenthal said that they had.

According to figures from the M.B.T.A., a one percent per year increase to area traffic is projected once the rail line is operational. At present approximately 16,500 vehicles per day travel past the landfill using Route 3A, while approximately 9,000 vehicles use the Route 228/3A intersection daily.

When questioned by Nicola Favorito, counsel for Hingham, if he realized truck traffic travels through historical sections of the town, Blumenthal remained unfazed.

"Yes, but we didn't feel there would be impacts on any historical districts," he [illegible].

On the subject of pedestrian traffic, Blumenthal stated that Hingham was looked at, more so than Cohasset, as the study route was exclusively through residential sections of that community.

In concluding his two hours of testimony, Blumenthal stated that increased large truck traffic, based on approval of the Cohasset Heights expansion application, would be "minuscule" and that the passenger vehicle safety of both towns would not be jeopardized.

"There are no real high accident locations in the area," he said.

Town engineering consultant Scully again stated his opinion that peak traffic hours along Blumenthal's study route coincided with and overlapped peak hours of both commuters and school children, therefore creating hazards in both communities.

Scully noted peak traffic along Route 3A to be between 2 to 6 p.m. and that during this period increased traffic due to an expanded landfill would create conditions which could potentially lead to motor vehicle accidents.

He theorized that shorter gaps in traffic on Routes 3, 228 and 3A would cause vehicle operators on side roads to experience a "frustration factor" and elevate the risk of accidents as they try to quickly enter into the main flow of traffic.

Though, under cross-examination from CHL attorney Moherke, Scully admitted to not doing his own independent traffic study, relying instead on figures taken from Blumenthal's traffic projections, and that he was unable to state just how many vehicles would actually be going to or coming from the landfill.

This prompted Moherke to discount Scully's testimony on the basis that increased traffic alone did not constitute truck traffic exclusive to a Cohasset Heights expansion.

Landfill expansion hearings set

Site assignment hearings by the Board of Health on the proposed 27.5-acre "Area V" expansion of Cohasset Heights landfill have been scheduled. Hearings are held on either Tuesdays or Thursdays from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. at either Cohasset Town Hall or the Second Congregational Church. Meetings are as follows:

Feb. 29, Town Hall: Water supply protection issues; March 2 surface and groundwater issues, etc.; March 5, Second Congregational: wetland sissues, stormwater management, rebuttal and miscellaneous issues; March 7, Second Congregational: Closing statements by parties; March 16, briefs submitted by parties and participants to the board of health; April 5, decidion on site assignment by board of health..

It should be noted that the meetings are not public hearings. The only people allowed to speak are the parties, who may present evidence for the record through expert and lay witnesses. Parties who have been accepted for the hearings are: Cohasset Heights; Town of Cohasset (Board of Selectmen, Conservation Commission and Water Commission), represented by environmental attorney Ken Kimmell; Town of Hingham (Board of Health and Conservation Commission); Trustees of Reservations and a consolidation of the Ten-Citizen Groups, represented by Kevin O'Donnell, John McNabb, Jim Kinch and David McMorris.

The Board of Health, since it is now in a quasi-judicial role, is taking no advocacy role in the proceedings. On March 2, an all-day session, Cohasset and Hingham residents who petitioned to participate in the hearings will be allowed to speak.

The hearings will be broadcast live on Cohasset Cable Channel 3.

Shea kicks off campaign for school board

Rick Shea, candidate for the single school committee seat, kicked off his campaign at a recent gathering. "I am running for school committee to ensure that the primary goal of the Cohasset Schools is a high quality education for all students," Shea said.

"Our public school system is an important component of our town that binds the community together, from Beechwood to Sandy Beach and from Ledgewood to Lamberts Lane. We should be proud of the quality of our schools. But we can do better. I would like to use my energy, enthusiasm, and my 19 years of experience in financial management, public management, and education to help make our schools the best they can be."

"In addition to my primary goal of quality education for all students, my goals for the school committee include implementing innovative 'best practices' in school management, professional development, and integration of technology and a timely and cost effective program of capital improvements. I will be discussing these and other specific ideas for the school committee as my campaign progresses."

Shea is a C.P.A. with a B.A. from Princeton and an M.B.A. in public management from Boston University. He is the controller for Genetics Institute Inc., a biotechnology firm, and worked previously for Coopers & Lybrand. He has also worked as a financial analyst and taught at the Burke High School in Dorchester. He is president of the Cohasset Education Foundation, a private, non-profit organization that provides innovative resources for the public schools. Rick and his wife Gitte have three children, one in each of the Cohasset schools.

McMorris meets supporters

Roseanne "Ronnie" McMorris met with supporters last week and announced her campaign committee. Ronnie is seeking one of two open seats for Cohasset's Board of Selectmen.

A 10-year resident of Doane Street, Ronnie became active in town affairs as an advocate for the repair of the Doane St. bridge. She went on to a seat on the Cohasset Conservation Commission, and has served as its chairman. Ronnie is the mother of four school age children, has volunteered in the schools, and served on the executive board of the Cohasset Parent School Organization.

The Committee to Elect Roseanne McMorris will be co-chaired by Mary Foley and Donna French. The treasurer is Ned Tebbetts. Other committee members include Tony Finegan, Ruth Wilcox and Denny Meikleham.

When asked why she was working for Ronnie's candidacy, Donna French said, "Ronnie's professional background as an attorney combined with her active involvement with the town's public health, safety, and education issues make her uniquely qualified to lead our town through the changes we inevitably face and still maintain the town's physical beauty and unique character."

Johnston to renew efforts for health insurance reform

Philip W. Johnston, Democratic candidate for the 10th Congressional District, will discuss his commitment to health insurance reform during a campaign coffee on Sunday, March 3, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the home of John and Caroline Stouffer, 7 Howard Road.

Johnston, a Marshfield resident who recently resigned his federal appointment as regional director of health and human services in order to campaign full-time, will address a major theme of his candidacy — the economic insecurity faced by workers throughout the district and the need to ensure that all working families are provided with adequate, affordable health insurance.

From 1975 to 1983, Johnston was a five-term state representative from the 10th Plymouth District. In 1993, President Clinton appointed Johnston as regional director of Health and Human Services, an office he held until his resignation in January.

For more information about the Johnston campaign, call (508) 747-1996.

New school to go before voters again

By DOREEN LEGGETT
Cohasset Mariner

A different "new" school proposal will come before voters at the annual town meeting March 30.

After more than three hours of discussion with various committees and community members Thursday, selectmen unanimously voted to put a new school article on the town warrant.

If approved, an override vote will be scheduled for April 6.

But, it is not quite that simple. There are factors that will influence exactly what article goes before the town.

As of Thursday, officials said the article would not be a carbon-copy of the original proposal — it would only include the new school for $9.8 million.

However, Flansburgh Associates (architects hired by the school department) and the school facilities committee are revisiting the figures for the original $13.4 million option that was rejected by the voters.

The original option factored in renovations and additions to the Deer Hill School. If they are able to substantially reduce the figure, within a week or so, that option will appear on the ballot.

If not, the $9.8 million option will go before townspeople.

The deadline for submitting a ballot question is March 3.

Selectmen also unanimously agreed to put an $180,000 appropriation figure on the warrant.

That sum is to pay for the architects who have to continue to do work if the town is going to meet the state's June 1 deadline (see related story).

If the deadline is not met the waiting list for state reimbursement, in Cohasset's case 60 percent, would double. So instead of waiting three of four years for funding to kick in, the town could wait eight or more years.

However, the architect needs the money now.

If the project is approved, the $180,000, which is already included in the total cost, would be reimbursable.

After the last new school proposal failed three Saturdays ago several selectmen were leery of putting the same option before the town again.

"We can't say, 'Let us try again — I didn't like your vote'," said Selectmen Chairman Merle Brown.

But because of the condition of the Osgood School, selectmen agreed a new school was needed.

Favoring the first option that went before the town but feeling it was too expensive, many in the audience said that they wanted work done to the Deer Hill School because it made more economic sense to get the reimbursement.

Others didn't think that shaving the final figure was the solution.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said that such a cut would adversely impact the quality of the schools being built.

David Soleau, the architect representing Flansburgh, said that the figures arrived at were ba[illegible] on state guidelines and were "not Cadillac standards."

Transportation meeting

The South Shore Coalition will hold a meeting on transportation issues, including the possibility of additional parking spaces at the Quincy Adams and Braintree subway stops, on Feb. 29 at 7 p.m. at Hanover town hall.

The public is welcome.

Capital budget resignation

This week selectmen accepted with regret the resignation of George Kovach from the capital budget committee. Although they said he will be hard to replace, anyone interested in serving on that committee should contact selectmen.

Plans for new school move forward

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Architectural plans for a new elementary school will go ahead thanks to a generous citizen.

School facilities committee chairman said Clark Chatterton, who is athletic director at the high school, has offered to loan the town the $180,000 needed so architects can start work on the "new" school proposal.

The estimated $9.9 million project has been pared down from the original $13.4 million which included upgrades to the Deer Hill School. By a margin of 28 votes, voters turned the dual project down at the Feb. 10 override election.

The failed vote sent the school board and school facilities committee back to the drawing board to try and save at least part of the project. The state will not reimburse the town for upgrades to the aging Osgood School because it's too old and most townspeople agree the Osgood must be replaced, officials feel.

Architects need to start now work in order to have some formal drawings completed, so the new school construction project, if approved voters, meets the June deadline for state reimbursement.

Two articles will appear on the March 30 annual town meeting warrant. One asking voters to approve borrowing to pay for construction of the new school and the other to appropriate $180,000 for architectural fees. If the articles pass, they will set the stage for an override April 6.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson is working out the details of the loan which has a precedent. A citizen lent the town $250,000 for a new fire pumper truck in 1993.

Beggan said the facilities committee will not recommend paring down the project from the $143 per square foot for new school construction allowed by state guidelines. Committee members, who have looked closely at all aspects of the project for the past four-to-six months, feel strongly that figure represents the minimum needed and does not allow for extravagances.

"We're not looking at a Cadillac here but we want something more than a Hyundai," he said.

The school facilities committee and school board plan to meet with selectmen Monday to discuss the project.

A Choice You Can Feel Good About.

Most people think mothers like to cook. But with Mom living alone these past few years, things had changed. She got tired of grocery shopping and fixing her own meals. We began to worry about her eating properly. Bathing and taking her medications on time were becoming difficult, too.

That's when we looked into assisted living at Allerton House. Allerton House is managed by the Welch family, a trusted name on the South Shore for over 45 years. Our first visit convinced us. This was a choice we all felt good about.

Last month, Mom moved into her own private apartment at Allerton House. Tomorrow, she's having us over for dinner. And she won't have to lift a finger.

Tough end can't taint gymnasts' season

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

It's official. There will be no MVP award presented to anyone on the Cohasset High gymnastics team.

As head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni sees it, the votes came out even. It was an eight-way tie, just as she predicted it would be as early as the first week of practice way back in August.

"We didn't vote for an MVP because everyone was so valuable," she said.

Even as they rolled through their South Shore League schedule on the way to league title No. 3, Ardizzoni was fully aware that the girls' bubble could burst at any point along the way. Whether it be during a practice, meet or while going about every-day activities. Disaster was always just around the corner waiting to stick out its ugly, unfair head and come down upon the Lady Skippers' crack squad of motivated gymnasts.

And it wouldn't have to be a catastrophic injury; the flu here, a bout of tendonitis, maybe a hamstring or back pain. All it would take, too, would be one gymnast.

With just eight varsity members, the Lady Skippers, despite their abundance of individual talent, couldn't afford to lose a single gymnast if they wanted to show Hanover, and especially Scituate, exactly who the queens of the league were.

Cohasset managed to dodge the injuries during the regular season and claim the title for its own. The only blemish to an undefeated was a loss to the surging Hanover squad by a mere .30 points.

Cohasset dominates Harwich in 69-54 first-round win

By JIM O'SULLIVAN
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Skippers played host to the Harwich Roughriders on Tuesday in their opening game of the Division 3 South Sectional tourney.

Jared Hardwick and Ryan Bishop had no problem getting in the tourney mood.

Hardwick poured in 28 points and Bishop had a huge game with 15 points, 14 rebounds and five blocked shots to help No. 4 ranked Cohasset (16-6) eliminate Harwich (13-9), 69-54. In dropping the No. 13 seed, the Skippers go on to play the winner of Canton/Cardinal Spellman in Friday night's first round at Cohasset.

Hardwick put the Skippers on the board with a layup less than a minute into the game. Bishop followed with a layup of his own. Paul-Michael Quintin popped a three-pointer, putting Cohasset up, 7-4. Hardwick then stuck a pull-up jumper over the outstretched hand of defender Paul Gonsalves, Harwich's leading scorer with 22 points. Bishop knocked down two free throws and came up with one of his rejections, a monstrous stuff which drew cries of amazement from the Skipper faithful. Hardwick grabbed an outlet pass from Bishop and dribbled coast-to-coast, slipping by all five Harwich defenders and driving to the rack for a pair. Bishop's putback widened the Skippers' edge to 15-8. Howard passed ahead to Hardwick, who took it all the way in for a raucous slam dunk. Quintin stuffed a Harwich shooter and triggered a 13-0 Cohasset run. Bishop took a nifty pass from Burke Davis and netted it and Hardwick finger-rolled one through for two more, building the lead to 21-17. He added three more, swishing a trey from well beyond the line. Quintin and Davis made it three three-pointers in a row. J.L. Williams, playing despite an illness, threaded a pass to Hardwick, who capitalized. Hardwick followed with an off-balance runner in the paint and Bishop came up with two more stirring rejections on the same play. Bishop ended the half by taking another pass from Davis to the hole for two more, making the halftime score 36-24 in the Skippers' favor.

Hardwick started the second half the way he got things rolling in the first by scoring on a layup. Howard and Hardwick ran a textbook fast break give-and-go with Howard capping it with a pretty layup. Bishop's fourth stuff of the game set up a Hardwick layup and free throw at the opposite end. Hardwick swished two more from the line, making the tally 45-30. Williams wiped the offensive boards clean and followed with a layup. Davis nailed one from

Three skiers off to States

Congratulations to three Cohasset High School varsity ski team members who will be traveling to western Massachusetts (Berkshire East Ski Area, Charlemont, Mass.) to compete in the Massachusetts State High School Ski Championships. They are Ryan Sawchuck, Bobby Stansell and Caitlin Stansell.

During the race season at Blue Hills Ski Area, these team members competed against high school students in the Mass. Bay East Division. They consistently scored points at each race for the CHS ski team, which qualified them all as individual competitors at the state meet.

beyond the arc and Bishop hit a free throw. Davis tossed a pass to Hardwick, who delivered yet another crowd-pleasing jam. Howard pulled up on the break and hit the jumper. Bishop's two swishes from the foul line upped the lead to 57-42. Williams grabbed another offensive board and hit a layup and Hardwick chipped in two more free throws. Quintin tore down an offensive rebound and went right back up with it for two. Williams picked up his third offensive putback, making it 65-52. Quintin and Davis each nailed free throws, Davis' coming only moments before taking a nasty spill which opened over his left eye. He left the game and was later given a clean bill of health, though he would still need stitches.

Bishop substituted in for Davis and responded by knocking down Davis' two free throws. With the score 69-53, head coach Ron Ford put in Matt Belson, Grant Emde, Jamie Buick, Andy Hamilton and Justin McNamara, who also saw action in the first half. Belson came up with two big steals while Buick and Emede each had a robbery of their own. Hamilton played the point and directed the offense with McNamara in the waning seconds.

"We played well, executed on offense, and stepped up our defense a notch in the second half," said Howard. "I feel bad for Harwich because they played a tough game and I'm sorry one team had to lose. I'm just glad it wasn't us."

"We played hard; we came here ready to play tonight," said Hardwick. "They couldn't handle us inside and we knocked down our open threes."

Ford was particularly impressed by the performances of Bishop and Williams. "J.L. played a great game for us," he said. "He's coming off a sickness and he was huge for us tonight. He's playing on his deathbed, had the flu for two days and he gave us a tremendously productive effort tonight. I couldn't be prouder of him. Our two big guns, Jared and Ryan, really turned in outstanding performances for us tonight."

The win was also the first game without junior forward Lutz Grunwald, an exchange student from Germany. Grunwald was an integral part of this year's squad and will be sorely missed by everyone on the team.

Tough end can't taint gymnasts' season

The Lady Skippers fared well at the league meet, but the first sign of big trouble was there. All-Star Erica Hettstrom watched the competition from the sidelines sporting a leg brace. Hettstrom, the SSL's all-around champion two years ago, sustained a painful knee injury while playing soccer in gym class when she was accidently kicked square on the knee.

And although the meet was purely an individual championship, things began to look very grim for the Lady Skippers' chances at a strong score in the South Sectionals.

The squad was in trouble with Erica out. And when her sister Tara, the league champion on the floor exercise, couldn't compete because of a bad case of the flu, Cohasset was truly in dire straits.

At full strength, the Lady Skippers earned the No. 7 seed based on their team average of 124.6, a new school record. But with the Hettstroms scratched from the competition, Cohasset could do no better than 11th with a disappointing 113.85.

"We knew we were pretty much in trouble," said Ardizzoni. "The whole evening was a little disappointing for the girls.

"With six kids we did the best we could."

Ardizzoni, though, felt especially bad for Erica who missed both the league meet and South Sectionals last season.

"It's a carbon copy of last year," she said. "We were bound to hit a roadblock somewhere."

Adding insult to injury, Erica won't be competing in this weekend's State Individual meet. She qualified for the prestigious competition based on her school record 8.6 and solid average through the regular season.

Although not at full strength, Ardizzoni said Erica could probably compete but she doesn't want to risk a more serious injury to the knee. Ardizzoni would rather she take the time for it to heal now, then return to the gym and prepare for her senior-year season.

"In the long run she's better off," Ardizzoni said. "She wants to finish off with a really good year."

Ardizzoni said the disappointment of the South Sectionals couldn't overshadow the fantastic season the girls had in winning the championship. The squad set a number of new school records and Ardizzoni believes a deeper look into the record books will reveal a few more.

"I thought after last year you couldn't have a better season," she said. "I picked them to finish in the top three only because of the possibility of sickness or injury. To achieve what they did with only eight kids, they should be very happy."

Police help local homebound elders

The Cohasset Police Department has joined with South Shore Elder Services to ensure that isolated homebound elders receive meals during weather emergencies. SSES appealed to the police after severe snowstorms forced the cancellation of several Meals on Wheels deliveries.

According to SSES Nutrition Director Linda Fitzgibbon, elders are supplied with emergency packs, which do not require refrigeration, that contain the essentials to make up one meal. Although during a storm family and neighbors will often help elders, some may be without food if more than one storm hits or if storms occur during a weekend.

The Police Department stores emergency food packs and delivers them to those in need during a severe storm.

SSES operates the Meals on Wheels program in Cohasset in conjunction with the Social Service League of Cohasset. For further information, call SSES at 848-3910 or the SSL at 383-0771.

Police Chief Brian Noonan accepts emergency meal packs from Meals on Wheels volunteer Ginny Riley of Cohasset. Riley is a long-time board member and past president of the Social Service League of Cohasset. South Shore Elder Services and the league operate Meals on Wheels for the town. (Editor's note: in last week's issue, this photo ran without the related article).

Town's voice drowned out

North Cohasset left high and dry

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

Faced with the same 164 percent water rate hike that will affect their neighbors in Hingham and Hull, a group of North Cohasset residents launched a letter-writing campaign last month protesting the increase and were ready to do battle with other frustrated rate payers at an evidentiary hearing before the state Department of Public Utilities (DPU).

But unlike residents in Hingham and Hull, the 600 or so Cohasset residents — about 10 percent of the town's population — who receive their water from the Massachusetts-American Water Company, may not be represented at the March 14 hearing.

Maria Plante and Barbara Mullin, two residents leading the rate-hike fight in Cohasset, had just come back from distributing about 225 flyers encouraging residents to put their opposition in writing to local legislators, when they learned from the DPU that selectmen had not filed a petition to testify at the hearing in time and therefore could not act as "interveners" in the rate case.

"I was very upset, because selectmen had promised to help us," Plante said. "Someone in the selectmen's office should have stayed on top of this. There's no reason an issue this important should not have been followed through on."

Town Administrator Greg Doyon said efforts are being

Davenport opts to run for selectman

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset native Robert V. Davenport, 53, of Sohier Street has decided to throw his hat into the ring for the selectman's race.

Davenport had turned in nomination papers for both the health board and selectman seats and had until March 4 to make up his mind.

The sitting health board member will not seek re-election to that board because issues surrounding a possible conflict of interest regarding Cohasset Heights Landfill had not been completely resolved in time.

Davenport — who owns property in the vicinity of Cohasset Heights, the privately-owned landfill seeking expansion — has not been able to participate in the hearings on the proposed expansion due to the conflict-of-interest issue which is now at the state level, he said this week.

"It's not fair to the other two (health board) members to bear the whole brunt of this," Davenport said referring to the on-going landfill hearings.

Davenport, who operates a boat storage and brokerage business, is a regular at selectmen's meetings.

Sen. Bob Dole wins easily in Cohasset

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

As predicted Bob Dole won big with Republican voters in Cohasset in Tuesday's Yankee Primary.

With 423 votes, Dole handily beat Patrick J. Buchanan who finished second with 101 votes and Steve Forbes, who was a close third with 96.

About 21 percent of the town's 5,079 registered voters participated in the primary which was one of several held March 5 across New England and the nation.

Election workers said the polls, which were open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at town hall, were slow all day reaching a peak of about 100 voters per hour and a low of about 40 per hour.

President Bill Clinton received 168 votes, with challenger Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr., getting nine.

No one in Cohasset took a Libertarian Party ballot.

Pleasant Street resident Frederick R. Koed, who was unchallenged, garnered 178 votes to win re-election as Democrat State Committee Man for the Plymouth & Norfolk Districk.

Polly Logan, who lives on Nichols Road, was the top "vote-getter" of the day with 636. Logan was unchallenged for re-election as Republican State Committee

New town counsel predicts drop in legal costs

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

With minimal discussion Monday night, selectmen unanimously picked the Boston law firm of Deutsch Williams Brooks DeRensis Holland & Drachman to serve as town counsel.

Paul DeRensis, a partner in the firm, will handle the bulk of the legal business, while the other 40 attorneys at Deutsch Williams will help with various matters.

The firm represents the towns of Nantucket and Randolph and host of other municipalities, counties and special governmental agencies, (such as airports,) in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Vermont. Some 70 percent of their clients are public entities,

Four injured in accident

Four persons were injured late Tuesday night when their vehicle struck a utility pole on South Street in Hingham as they were reportedly returning from a basketball game.

Hingham firefighters and hospital paramedics transported the driver and three passengers to South Shore Hospital.

Hingham Police Capt. Joseph McCracken identified the car's occupants as John Simons, 67, of Ripley Road, Cohasset, who was driving the car; Jessica Niessink and Jen Meehan, both 14 and from Cohasset; and Jonathan Kerins, 13 from Scituate.

McCracken said police received several reports around 10:30 p.m. of the accident, near the intersection of Hersey Street, where the four-wheel-drive Chevrolet is believed to have been travelling toward Hingham Square when it skidded on the rain-slicked road.

A South Shore Hospital spokeswoman said Simons was listed in fair condition. The three teenagers were treated and released.

Subdivision must wait for sewer connection

The 31 houses in the proposed Jerusalem Road Estates subdivision will not be able to connect to the sewer system, sewer commissioners have decided.

In a Feb. 28 memo to selectmen, commission chairman Edward "Ted" Guild stated that since capacity is limited, connections must be reserved for existing houses.

"Under this policy, sewer capacity would not be available for the Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership, (which is proposing the subdivision)," Guild said.

The planning was scheduled to hold a hearing on the subdivision Wednesday, as the paper went to press.

Selectmen agreed to notify the planning board that they are concerned about the subdivision's feasibility if septic systems would be required. Septic systems in the area have been blamed for causing pollution in Strait's Pond.

In addition, selectmen are worried about the subdivision's potential to create additional traffic on the windy and narrow portion of Jerusalem Road and to increase drainage runoff. Jerusalem Road is also prone to icing in winter.

Owen O'Malley campaigns for Pat Buchanan outside the polls Tuesday. Republicans in town opted for Bob Dole who won handily over Buchanan and Steve Forbes. For election results, see page 11.

New school proposal to face town meeting voters

Selectmen endorse $9.9M plan

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

For the second time in three months, voters will have the chance to consider a proposal for a new elementary school, as selectmen this week placed the question on the March 30 town meeting warrant and on the April 6 election ballot.

Selectmen stressed that the proposal is different from the earlier, $13.4 million plan which sailed through town meeting, but was defeated by 28 votes at the polls.

Voters will face a request for the nearly $9.9 million new kindergarten-through-grade-three elementary school to be located off Sohier St. behind the Deer Hill School and a request for $180,000 for engineering money.

"We bent over backwards to avoid the appearance of going behind the voter's backs," said selectman Peter Pratt.

"This makes logical sense for the town," said selectman Michael Sullivan, who added that if the override fails, they will simply have to hold another one, since replacing the Osgood School is a necessity.

Selectman chairman, Merle Brown, said, "We need a new school and this is the way to do it."

The selectman's vote was unanimous, in contrast to the three to two vote to oppose the first request.

Much of the discussion centered on the $180,000 request. The sum is included in the total $9.9 million, but has been pulled out as a separate item since if the larger amount is defeated, it is hoped the smaller sum will still be approved.

School athletic director and holder of the Music Circus refreshment concession, Clark Chatterton, is donating the money to the town, which will be deposited in a special fund. He had intended to loan the money, but town meeting has yet to accept the loan.

It is also likely that other individuals may donate to the fund.

If the $180,000 request fails, then his money will be used to pay for engineering plans which will allow the building's blueprints to be drawn up.

The school department has been anxious to get the project underway since the deadline for state reimbursement under the current formula is June 30.

Pratt said the town has "a moral obligation" to come up with the $180,000, to reimburse Chatterton.

Roy Fitzsimmons, a resident, wanted to know how the town could incur a debt without a town meeting vote.

"You are putting undue pressure on the taxpayers," he stated. "The townspeople voted no."

During the discussion, selectman Jane Goedecke said that engineering studies are usually done in before an item is submitted to town meeting vote, so that asking for the $180,000 is justifiable, even if the total project should be defeated again.

North Cohasset could be left high and dry made by town council Richard A. Henderson to allow Cohasset to file late and participate in the upcoming hearing or to try to "piggy back" on the testimony given by Hingham or Hull.

"We've heard from residents and understand their concerns and we're trying to pursue it at this point," said Doyon, who noted that the town's involvement with the Cohasset Heights Landfill hearings has eclipsed some other issues and has diverted financial resources as well.

Henderson said he was asked to file for the town on Feb.12, but has not yet heard from the DPU on whether Cohasset will be permitted to participate.

"The hearing officer was not optimistic," said Henderson, who said despite being six weeks past the filing deadline, he felt that he made a good case for the town to intervene as it shares many of same concerns that Hingham and Hull do.

"I don't think they understood the magnitude of this," Henderson said of the board's oversight. Citizen involvement helped bring the issue to light, he added.

Following the public hearings with Mass-American held in Hingham and Hull in January, Mullin, Plante and other resident volunteers set to work trying to inform their neighbors, some of whom are on fixed incomes, about the possible tripling of water bills if the new rates are approved.

The Massachusetts-American Water Company filed its rate case with the Department of Public Utilities in November and if the proposed increase is approved in full, the average rate payer will see their annual water bills go from about $257 to $680.

Much of the water rate increase, company officials say is needed to cover the expense of building and operating the $39.5 million water treatment facility which is under construction in Hingham and slated to go on-line in May.

Now faced with the possibility that their concerns will not be voiced at the hearing, Mullin said she's glad that she was at least able to circulate the fliers.

"If we didn't distribute the fliers and send letters we wouldn't be heard from at all. We have to be optimistic, at least they (the DPU) have heard from us on some level," she said.

"I hope we got the word out," Plante said, adding, "we've done as much as we can do as citizens of Cohasset."

New town counsel predicts drop in legal costs

with private practice taking up the rest.

Selectmen chose the firm in part because of its experience in environmental, land use and harbor issues, and also because the other two finalists represent neighboring communities, which could have caused a conflict.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said he had been advised against hiring any firm which represents a contiguous town.

Kopelman and Paige, one of the finalists, represents Scituate, which has already quarreled with Cohasset over the fees charged to use clam flats lying in Cohasset Harbor, which actually belong to Scituate.

The other finalist, Murphy, Hesse, Toomey and Lehane, is legal counsel to Hingham, with which Cohasset is now negotiating a sewer contract.

(The third finalist, the Cambridge firm of Anderson & Kreiger, did not show up for its interview last week, and already has a conflict of interest with the town since it is representing a South Main Street couple suing the conservation commission.)

In an interview this week, DeRensis, 51, predicted that legal costs will likely decrease from the current levels.

"I believe that they (costs) will go down," he said.

Cohasset will be charged an annual retainer of $30,000, which will cover the work DeRensis spends on the town's legal business, regardless of much time is involved.

The general municipal rate is $110 per hour, while the firm will bill Cohasset at the special counsel rate of $120 per hour for matters relating to labor, litigation and real estate.

Current town counsel Richard Henderson bills the town at $85 per hour, which amounts to about $45,000 per year.

However, the town hires special counsels to handle specialized matters, at costs ranging as high as $200 per hour.

Selectmen have recently been frustrated over skyrocketing legal costs, especially relating to the hearings on the Cohasset Heights Landfill expansion, which are expected to cost some $244,000 between November and June.

By hiring a large firm selectmen hope to reign in the use of special counsel and keep legal bills under tighter control.

A Newton native who graduated from Harvard College and Harvard Law School, DeRensis said he applied for the Cohasset position in part because it is a coastal community facing many of the same problems Nantucket must grapple with.

These include relations with federal and state regulatory agencies, the loss of land from erosion, storm damage, planning and dredging.

"Those are fun issues," he said. "Those are the kind of legal issues I get excited about."

In addition to harbor matters, DeRensis said his firm has expertise in procurement (the bulk purchasing of supplies), ethics, labor relations, planning and land use, eminent domain (land taking), road layout and acceptance.

One of the other partners, Robert Holland, is a well known labor expert.

Selectman Peter Pratt praised Holland's work as labor counsel in Somerville, which Pratt previously served as administrator.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby reported that she has seen Deutsch William's work first hand at the Mass Municipal Association's policy committee, with which she has been active.

Another Deutsch Williams lawyer, Robert Hillman, is currently serving on Cohasset's Cable TV Council.

DeRensis stated that Hillman will be resigning from that committee and will not handle any Cohasset business, at least for a while.

In addition, Henderson will continue to handle matters relating to James Lane because Hillman lives in that area. Selectmen have planned to erect a barrier on a tiny corner of Hillman's property to prevent vehicles from entering the dead end street at the wrong end.

Henderson is also expected to review the contract between Deutsch Williams and the town, and may also handle some other ongoing issues with which he is familiar.

DeRensis and Henderson will likely meet soon to review town meeting articles. Henderson has indicated he would like to step down by mid-March.

Selectmen have said that the change from an individual lawyer to a firm will likely change the way Cohasset government operates in some ways.

During last week's interview with Deutsch Williams, selectman Jane Goedecke pointed out that Henderson often waits at home and appears at a meeting in five minutes if requested.

DeRensis said that he will be available 24 hours a day, stating that he was once called by Nantucket selectmen at one a.m. and asked a question via a conference call.

Selectmen liked the answer and seemed amused that there are other boards whose meetings last even longer than their own.

Record for most snow could be set this week

Plowing costs pass $100K mark

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

Once again this winter, a weekend storm dumped six inches of heavy, wet snow, with an additional half-inch Tuesday, as the season's total closes in on the snowfall record set just two years ago.

Cohasset Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling has recorded the season's total snowfall at 91-1/2 inches as of Tuesday night, putting this season firmly in second place for total snow accumulation.

Another five inches of snow will make the winter of 1995-96 the snowiest on record, passing the 95.1 inches that fell during the winter of 1993-94.

That record could be broken by the end of the week, with forecasters predicting a sloppy combination of snow, sleet, and freezing rain today.

This, just two weeks after temperatures soared to the 60-degree mark, cleared away the remnants of snow, and caused an outbreak of spring fever, complete with scattered sightings of crocuses.

Cohasset's snow plowing costs have crossed the $100,000 mark, with Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield putting the figure at $100,270.62 as of Tuesday. This figure will increase when the department receives additional bills from private contractors who supplement town workers, he added.

Saturday's storm followed a similar schedule of a storm on Feb.16-17, with the bulk of plowing and sanding required after regular working hours, increasing the expensive snow removal process.

While this season and the winter of 1993-94 have both seen snow accumulations well above normal, Litchfield observes that the weather patterns are different. This year, there has been more snow from a few storms, while two seasons ago, there were modest accumulations from several storms.

He is also questions the benefit of subscribing to a weather service to advise the highway department of snowstorms, as is done in Hingham, adding that is unlikely that the town would be willing to incur the additional expense.

"I asked the advisory committee once," he said. "and they laughed at me."

But as the likelihood of a new snow accumulation record increases, Litchfield sees no reason to increase the snow removal budget. The procedure that allows the department to use deficit spending for snow plowing is satisfactory.

"We've got no money now anyway," he said, noting that the original appropriation was spent months ago.

Since 1982, Cohasset allocates $45,000 a year for snow removal. Litchfield said that when he took over the highway department in 1978, the budget was $40,000.

Town administrator Gregory Doyon said raising the annual snow plowing budget is "something we may have to look at." However, since there is no way to predict the weather, "I'd hate to see us tie up [Cohasset's] resources."

There had been three consecutive years when the highway department returned unspent snowplowing funds to the town prior to 1993-94, Doyon added.

The first day of spring is two weeks away, but Litchfield marks the change of season by the last time the plows and sanders take to the streets. And, there's no way to predict that.

He said that last year, when there was very little snow, icy conditions required road sanding for the last time on March 17. The previous year, the last sanding occurred on March 11.

"But there was one year—I can't remember when—when we had a foot of snow in April," he said.

Doyon has high praise for Litchfield who, he said, "understands the taxpayers and doesn't spend more than necessary."

"He gets the bulk of the complaints, and he's the one the police call when the roads get slippery," Doyon said.

Snowplowing and road sanding are not only budget issues, but also a public safety issue, he added.

Hedlund to hold Cohasset office hours March 8

Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, will hold office hours on Friday, March 8, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the downstairs meeting room at Cohasset Town Hall. Office hours provide an opportunity for constituents to voice their opinions and comments in person without having to travel to the State House.

To make an appointment, call Jeff Granatino at (617) 722-1646. Walk-ins are encouraged.

Hedlund has announced that Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) and Dept. of Environmental Management (DEM) summer positions are still available for the 1996 season. Interested applicants may contact Senator Hedlund's office at 722-1646 for referral slips, which must be returned to either the MDC or DEM by March 15.

Financial situation darkens

Cohasset's literary set may face a long hot summer after all.

In the wake of the worsening financial situation, selectmen Monday night reversed their previous support for a town meeting article seeking $50,000 to install air conditioning in the Pratt Memorial Library.

Selectmen said they were responding to a Feb. 28 memo from town accountant Michael Buckley, which reported that the town's free cash is dangerously low.

According to the memo, articles for the March 30 town meeting will appropriate $228,380 from free cash, leaving a balance of only $17,523.

Buckley said some $150,000 is recommended.

However, many of the articles are necessary and cannot be postponed.

Advisory committee chairman Roger Whitley said that committee had yet to take a position on the library air conditioning, but has voted not to support the refurbishing of the high school auditorium.

The committee has voted to support the new equipment for the highway and tree and parks department.

In a related matter, selectmen voted not to seek an override request to pay for costs related to the Hagerty Property and capping the landfill. Although these items have already been voted, placing the costs under a debt exclusion would help the financial situation overall.

Selectmen said the subject would be confusing, since these items were already voted.

Gen. Colin Powell and Jack Kemp received one write-in vote each from those who cast Republican ballots. Bob Dole earned a write in on the Democratic side and so did resident Roy Fitzsimmons.

Cohasset has 1,067 registered Democrats, 1,107 Republicans, 3 Libertarians, and 2,879 unenrolled voters.

as anyone sitting there now," he said. "I could put another perspective on the board."

Davenport joins incumbent Selectman Martha Gjesteby, former advisory board chairwoman Nan Roth and conservation commissioner Roseanne "Ronnie" McMorris in the race for two selectman seats.

Organic market slated for North Scituate village

The old Country Package Store in North Scituate Village will soon be reincarnated as an organic food market.

Michelle Goodson of Cohasset has reached an agreement to lease the vacant storefront for the Ancient Farmer's Market, Inc., a food market and collaborative selling organic and locally farmed vegetables, fruits, herbs, flowers and homemade breads.

The announcement gives a boost to the North Scituate Village business environment. Since the departure of the package store early last year, the storefront at the corner of Country Way and Gannett Road has remained vacant.

"I think anything that enhances the village and produces new business in North Scituate would certainly be welcome," said Tony D'Onofrio, treasurer of the Scituate Chamber of Commerce. Sea 'n Cheese market, which was forced to leave its Cushing Plaza location in Cohasset last year when Shaw's Supermarkets bought the plaza, was interested in moving to the package store site. But Sea 'n Cheese failed to reach an agreement for a lease, disappointing merchants and residents alike who had looked forward to the arrival of the specialty market.

Last year, Goodson attempted to lease the defunct North Cohasset fire station on Hull Street for the same purpose. The proposal was derailed at the last minute when sewer commissioners said they would need the fire station site for a pumping station.

Goodson received a site plan waiver from the Scituate planning board. She plans to apply to Scituate selectmen for a retail beer-and-wine license to sell a small quantity of high-quality, imported beer and wine. She hopes to open for business in May.

Eligiblity sought on local veterans

In the ongoing effort to complete the World War II Cohasset Historical Military Memorial, an oversight committee was established. The purpose of the committee is to determine to the best of its ability whether names in question meet eligibility requirements for inclusion on the wall.

After diligent research, the committee is left with several names it can find nothing about, and it is appealing to the public for help. Anyone with information that would help the committee determine the eligibility of the following people is asked to call Town Hall (383-9900): Margaret Drucilla Coleman, Ernest Elden Decker, Helen Marion Heartz, Joseph Lay Rohr Jr., William Roger Scannell and Shirley Eleanor Wright.

Those who call with information are asked to leave their name and telephone number at the selectmen's office and a committee member will contact them.

A Choice You Can Feel Good About.

Most people think mothers like to cook. But with Mom living alone these past few years, things had changed. She got tired of grocery shopping and fixing her own meals. We began to worry about her eating properly. Bathing and taking her medications on time were becoming difficult, too.

That's when we looked into assisted living at Allerton House. Allerton House is managed by the Welch family, a trusted name on the South Shore for over 45 years. Our first visit convinced us. This was a choice we all felt good about.

Last month, Mom moved into her own private apartment at Allerton House. Tomorrow, she's having us over for dinner. And she won't have to lift a finger.

Belated 'leap-day' birthday wishes to Carol Gates

We must begin by apologizing to Carol Gates for not mentioning her birthday last week. After all, she only has one every four years. The very least we can do is make a big day of it! Happy birthday to you, Carol, our favorite Leap Year gal!

Sr. Anne Monica Ruane, principal of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, announced the honor roll for the second semester, and we congratulate the Cohasset students who made the grade: Principal's list — Julie Catalano; first honors — Lauren Campbell, Jennifer Cellucci and Sally Hamill; second honors — Stephanie Canton, Kelleen Dwyer and Julie Smith.

Now it's time to wish two special gents a speedy recovery after recent surgery — Herm Fichtner, who is in Braintree Rehab as this is being written, and Pop Fone, who is in Maine doing very well, especially when you consider he is 92 years young! Hope that there is a spring in your step long before spring officially arrives, guys!

News from Poughkeepsie, N.Y.: Joe Slotnik '99 of Cohasset (and a CHS grad) is a member of the 1995-96 Vassar College men's basketball team. To date, the Brewers have an even record of nine wins and nine losses, with six games left to play. Joe averages 7.3 points and a team-leading 8.4 rebounds and 2.3 blocks per game. Good going, Joe!

For the painting "Lemon Pitcher and Pear," watercolor artist JoAnne Chittick is the second-place winner in watercolor in Duxbury Art Association's 22nd annual Winter Juried Show.

Of the more than 600 works submitted for jurying, 115 were accepted, representing the categories of oil/acrylic painting; watercolor painting; drawing/pastel; prints; three dimensional and photography. The show, which is exhibited at the Duxbury Art Complex Museum, 189 Alden St., will continue until March 24.

Erin K. Steimle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund A. Steimle of Cohasset, has been named a college scholar, the highest recognition for academic achievement for the fall term at Middlebury College. Students who receive this coveted designation must have a grade point average of 3.5 or better and have no grade lower than a B- for the semester.

Kudos go to Curtis Collins, principal of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School, and if you don't believe us, ask the Boston Globe! He was mentioned in connection with the report, "Breaking Ranks: Changing an American Institution," which is about high schools in America and encourages everyone to inspire young minds.

Mr. Collins helped draft the report and "embodies its energy." The Globe states that the report should be "required reading for anyone who cares about high school education. And everybody should care."

Anyway, aren't we glad we have a principal who cares, and who is doing something about it and encouraging others to do the same? Congratulations to you for your efforts, Curt.

Speaking of the high school, it's time to congratulate the boys basketball team. As this is being written, they are still in the quest for the championship, and we hope that it is a successful one. Win, lose or draw, thanks to all of you for an exciting season! You are awesome.

Here's a reminder for you. Don't panic when you go to the old home of Buttonwood Books & Toys and find it's not there! They have moved to a "temporary home" across the parking lot, next to Walgreen's. Luckily for us they didn't have to leave our town, and you can bet that when the new plaza is built, their store will be an awesome one.

The reviews are all in, and they all said the same thing — Cabaret '96, performed by the First Parish Church, was a smashing success, and a great time was had by all. Just one complaint — there should have been more performances, because everyone loved it so much. Such a big crowd, in spite of the horrid weather!

Finally, we congratulate Ryan Sawchuk, Bobby Stansell and Caitlin Stansell, three CHS varsity ski team members who will compete in the Massachusetts State High School Ski Championships. They all did very well during the season for our team, and we hope they can continue their good work at the state meet. We'll let you know. One thing we do know is they do have enough snow!

Please, when something happens that is newsworthy in your home, give me a call! All of us love your news!

— Sallyann

Creative financing

To outsiders the school department's plan to salvage its new school proposal this year may seem truly bizarre.

You'd be hard pressed to find another town where a citizen offers to loan the town a large sum of money, with some risk attached, to save a project.

But this is Cohasset.

Maybe it's the salt air, the water, or all that ledge. But one thing is for sure — to borrow a line from a cruise commercial: "It's different out here."

Regardless of what happens, Cohasset owes school athletic director Clark Chatterton a big thank you for stepping up to the plate with some badly needed cash.

The finer details of the "loan-turned gift" are still being worked out. But essentially, here's what is happening.

The school department is under the gun to get a new school proposal, which must include blueprints, before the state by June 1 to get on the list for 60 percent reimbursement.

The town narrowly defeated the $13.5 million new school/Deer Hill renovation project in the Feb. 10 override election after it overwhelmingly passed town meeting. So believing there is support for a scaled-down project and because the state-reimbursement-funding stakes are so high, the school department, with the backing of selectmen, is going to ask voters to support building a new school at about $9.9 million and hold off on the upgrades to Deer Hill.

But to meet the June 1 deadline, architects must proceed immediately with drawings and they want some guarantee of payment. Town meeting isn't until March 30 and an override is slated for April 6 — which puts the school department in a time-bind.

So Clark turns into Superman and saves the day.

For the record, it's not the first time the town has received a monetary gift. An unidentified citizen helped buy a fire truck three years ago.

And on the smaller side, a few years back former Fire Chief John Nadeau talked about needing a computer at a televised selectmen's meeting and within a few days, one was given to him by a generous citizen. And when the town needed a Christmas tree for the Common, a citizen provided that too.

The town is known for its benefactors who have helped with private projects such as refurbishing the Lightkeepers' residence.

Some may have the perception that the school department is sending the wrong message by trying to circumvent the wish of the electorate.

Yes, the people spoke, but not convincingly — so an energetic group of school supporters aren't going to give up. No one should blame them for trying.

The voters will have the final say — which is as it should be.

But as usual in Cohasset, stay strapped in, because it's going to be a wild ride to town meeting.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Improved communication is key goal of school board

To the Editor:

As chairman of the Cohasset School Committee, I would like to address the issue of communication (or lack of communication) between the committee and the residents of Cohasset. For the sake of brevity, I will limit myself to two observations and a request to my fellow townspeople.

First, the record will demonstrate that, in my nearly seven years of serving the people of Cohasset as a member of the School Committee, we have made Herculean efforts to "get the word out" on major issues as well as to solicit input from residents. Two examples should suffice. With regard to asking folks what's on their minds, we recently sent an extensive survey to every town resident (18 percent of the surveys were returned), then held numerous public hearings to discuss the results. With respect to trying to inform townspeople on major issues, a cursory glance at back issues of the Cohasset Mariner will demonstrate that the vacation policy issue (which you cite in your "Candidates' Question of the Week" as an example of what some say is a poor communication effort) was covered extensively by your paper from the beginning and throughout the debate.

Second, our democratic system is founded on the premise of an informed citizenry. But being an informed citizen requires at least as much individual responsibility as it does reliance on government institutions. Our Founding Fathers (and, presumably, Founding Mothers such as Abigail Adams) set as a cornerstone of our democratic institutions the requirement of an active involvement on the part of citizens. Passivity is a fundamental threat to democracy.

The School Committee and the School Department have tried newsletters, public forums, town-wide surveys, media coverage and other means of establishing dialogue with our friends and neighbors in the town. If the premise of your candidates' question is correct, however, these efforts have not been entirely successful. And that leads me to my request. If any citizen of the Town of Cohasset has a suggestion for improving communication from and/or to the School Committee, please take a moment to drop me a note. Improved communication is a key goal of the new strategic plan we adopted this year and we would welcome all the help we can get in accomplishing this goal.

Sewer article is unprecedented

To the Editor:

I was delighted to read your question of the week for the candidates on page 11 in the Feb. 29 edition of the Cohasset Mariner.

It is important for the residents in the North Cohasset area to know what position the candidates are taking relative to the recent proposal of the 164 percent increase in the water rates by the Massachusetts American Water Company and how the Water Commission will help us!

To add to this outrageous cost, the Sewer Commission has inserted an article in the March 30 Town Meeting Warrant to burden these same homeowners with paying 100 percent of the $6 million project connecting this section of town to the Hull treatment plant. This is an unbelievable precedent being set by the Sewer Commission, over and above each homeowner paying additional hook-up charges, and monthly fees to Hull.

This is a community effort and the capital project should be shared by the entire town (just as we in North Cohasset supported and paid for the Elm Street sewer project and its continuous up-grading) without benefit to us.

Please do not support granting the Sewer Commission this unprecedented power!

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to last week's Question of the Week:

• Selectmen: at times selectmen's meetings have resembled the Punch & Judy show. What causes this board discord and what could you do to change it?

Nan Roth, selectman

The selectmen of Cohasset are elected to lead the town. Unfortunately, recent Selectmen's meetings have sometimes degenerated into forums for invective instead of forums for leadership. We face too many important issues to allow personal discord between Selectmen to interfere with the hard work needed to meet our challenges. Selectmen must focus on the citizens' needs now and in the future, making fair decisions and not allowing personality conflict or political grandstanding to sidetrack discussion.

Selectmen must be consensus builders, bringing people together, considering all points of view and creating considerate policy. They should feel free to disagree respectfully, when necessary, while always maintaining decorum appropriate to their standing and mission.

When confronted with conflict, I, as a selectman, would maintain a neutral stance and continue to direct discussion to the substantive issues at hand. We must remember that the citizens of Cohasset have vested each selectman with equal authority, responsibility and trust.

Acknowledging this responsibility, as selectman I would work together with all others on the board and in the community, and communicate with respect, concern and politeness in order to act fairly and effectively.

Ronnie McMorris, selectman

Last year, amid speculation that selectmen were trying to boost their cable television ratings, residents turned off "Murphy Brown" and tuned into the Monday night excitement at the Board of Selectmen's meetings. Those "exciting" meetings provided proof that our selectmen face difficult issues. They are five different personalities who sometimes disagree intensely.

The ultimate goal of the board's discussions is to reach solutions that best serve the interests of the entire community. To do that, members of the board must listen to residents and each other, work with other boards, and find compromises. I believe I can help make this happen.

I have served on the Conservation Commission for a number of years and been a past chairman. We have nine different commissioners with diverse viewpoints. Our discussions are heated, and yet we do work together to find viable solutions.

My approach on the commission has been to treat my fellow commissioners and residents with fairness and respect. I listen to their concerns and we work through disagreements toward acceptable compromises. I intend to do the same on the Board of Selectmen.

I want residents to know that I am approachable. I will return your calls. Most importantly, I will behave professionally on the board. I will bring my training as a mediator, and my experience as an attorney conducting administrative hearings to the job of selectman.

Martha Gjesteby, Selectman

The Board of Selectmen consists of five members all elected individually. They come with different backgrounds and experiences. It would not be reasonable to expect them to agree on all issues at all times. The board members should be ready to respect their colleagues and their opinions and to debate solutions with a hope to arrive at a consensus. However, we should not expect unanimity at all times.

There is nothing wrong with a split decision. That only shows you have a board with members who are searching for the best solutions, but do not all agree what the solutions should be. I do, however, agree that personal attacks on fellow board members, for any reason, should not be tolerated.

• School committee: citizens not being aware of the school vacation policy change and plans for the new school until the 11th hour are just two examples of problems the school committee has had in getting the word out, some say. Do you agree? What would you do to improve communication between the school committee and the public?

Keith F. Knowles, school committee

The examples cited in this week's question are only two of the most recent incidents in which the School Committee failed to communicate. As a business person, I learned early in my career that communication is the responsibility of the communicator. If you don't receive or understand my message, that's my fault, not yours.

Communication with the community would be one of my first priorities as a School Committee member. The timely communication of issues and needs will be the cornerstone of that priority. No one is sympathetic when a need that has existed for years suddenly becomes an urgent priority. I will bring these matters to the taxpayers as they occur, providing sufficient time for the information to be disseminated, questions asked and answered, and informed positions taken.

That communication also needs to be consistent and understandable. One of my current responsibilities is the creation and publication of a monthly newsletter for my employer. I believe that I have both the skills and the incentive to communicate with those who elected me.

Facilitating communication from the community is an equally urgent priority. Currently, there is no simple way for a parent or taxpayer to express their concerns to the School Committee or administration. In some cases, fear of retribution prevents parents from communicating. I propose to create the function of ombudsman that will allow for open and, when necessary, anonymous communication. As that process develops, the administration may stop feeling threatened by those who question or criticize and we will all benefit from that change.

Rick Shea, school committee

Both the school vacation change and the new school vote illustrate there is an opportunity for the School Committee to improve its communications. I have three suggestions: (1) a "community liaison," (2) informal breakfast meetings and (3) an open "warrant review" meeting.

One School Committee member should be designated as "community liaison" with responsibility for communications. I offer to serve in that role. I would monitor the adequacy of communications with students and parents coming from the principals and from the superintendent. Communications with residents without school-age children should come through news articles and, for significant matters, executive summaries of reports.

To reach out to residents unable to attend evening School Committee meetings, I would hold monthly breakfast meetings which would be informal discussions, open to all.

Lastly, I propose to reinstate the "warrant review" meeting held prior to town meeting, to discuss in detail major warrant articles. Everyone who attended the Feb. 22 new school meeting agreed that it should have been held prior to Town Meeting. This warrant review meeting would include the selectmen, Advisory Board, Capital Budget Committee, Town Accountant and boards and committees sponsoring major warrant articles, including the School Committee and Sewer Commission. The aggregate impact of the articles and the five-year capital plan's expected impact on the tax rate would be presented.

Owen O'Malley, School Committee

I would not have made the decision to change the school vacation week. Had I done so, I hope that I would have had the humility to change my vote before I caused a near rebellion in the Cohasset public schools.

Congratulations to Nichole Santoro and others who courageously and properly challenged this ill-advised policy.

• Treasurer-collector: selectmen are considering asking voters to make the treasurer-collector's position appointed. What's the value in having an elected treasurer-collector?

Patricia Anne Walsh, treasurer-collector

Appointing, instead of electing, department heads can result in cronyism, favoritism, nepotism, and patronage. Just look at the lead story in the 2/29/96 Mariner, concerning Cohasset Selectmen not considering their sincere, capable lawyer-moderator for Town Counsel. It may be better to trust the collective wisdom of the voters rather than political bosses who seek more power in their hands.

Four courageous candidates took out nomination papers for Treasurer-Collector, worked to get the required signatures, and their filings were accepted by the Town Clerk for placement on the April ballot. The selectmen can be challenged in court, and a judge required to rule within 10 days, if they attempt to interfere in the upcoming election. However, they could request voters to change over to an appointed position following the three-year term or a vacancy.

I don't want to be a "seat-warmer." The separate departments I alone ran for Jordan Marsh ranked third highest in money receipts (exceeded only by men's suits and lingerie), surpassing the profits of my boss, the gift buyer, to her discomfiture but the delight of merchandise managers. I worked with and alongside of the employees and salesgirls assigned to me. I would expect to do the same, following past practice in the Treasurer-Collector's office, especially since employee hours have been cut from next year's budget.

My goal is to increase the 4.30 to 6.85 percent return on the present investments. Treasurers are limited where they are allowed to make investments.

Joe Buckley, treasurer-collector

Cohasset has been very fortunate over the years in having such dedicated elected town officials. You may not agree with them, but they have been dedicated.

When I am elected, I suppose I should be very content knowing that if I carry out my duties honestly and to best of my ability, I could collect my $40,000 for the next three years. I could set my own hours, and within certain guidelines, I could do what I wanted. Nobody could really tell me what to do because I only have to answer to the electorate three years from now. You know the only qualifying requirement for this office is to win the election.

But, when we talk about government, we keep saying, "Would you run a business that way?" The Treasurer-Collector should be part of the management team. Today, the Executive Secretary, the Accountant, Fire Chief, and Police Chief are appointed. Soon the Superintendent of Public Works will be appointed. Why not the Treasurer?

In the past, it was said that having the Treasurer/Collector appointed would give too much control to the selectmen. We now have five selectmen, and it is very difficult for any one or two to exert undo pressure. We can change the makeup of the Board of Selectmen every year, but we would have to wait three years to change an elected Treasurer-Collector.

Either way, elect me. I have always been a team player.

Wigmore Pierson, treasurer-collector

More than 50 percent of the cities/towns of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts have opted to retain the office of Treasurer-Collector as an elected position, thereby insuring accountability to the residents and taxpayers of their respective communities.

Since Thomas Jefferson penned the still vibrant words, "Government of the people, by the people, and for the people" in the Declaration of Independence in 1776, this position has remained an elected position here in Cohasset.

I believe that changing a town bylaw, especially the taking away of another elected position from the people, is analogous to changing the United States Constitution. Therefore, a change should be made only after the most careful and thoughtful consideration. The proposed change should have a full public hearing with thoughtful proponents and opponents given an opportunity to state their views in front of the entire town.

Further, perceived distancing of public officials from the electorate may add to the feeling of alienation many citizens already believe exists in their relationship with local, county, state and national governments.

Finally, trying to impose this change when an election is pending has the aura of trying to thwart the will of the people. A change to an appointed position for Cohasset's Treasurer-Collector should coincide with the conclusion of the three-year term of office now set for April, 1999.

The Mariner welcomes letters to the editor

Question of the Week

• Water commission: North Cohasset residents are seeing red over their Hingham water bills. Would it be feasible to hook these homes up to Cohasset's water system?

John P. Rafferty, water commission

Hooking up North Cohasset residents to Cohasset's water system presents financial, legal, and water supply challenges, all of which remain unclear at this point.

From a financial standpoint, North Cohasset residents have benefited in recent years with water bills roughly 55 percent of Cohasset's, based on an assumed usage of 2,000 cubic feet/quarter. The proposed 164 percent increase will raise the North Cohasset bill to 46 percent over Cohasset's. However, Hingham's proposed rate increase remains in dispute and may change over the coming months during regulatory hearings. The financial impact is simply unclear now. While the new North Cohasset water rates will be higher, residents should benefit with higher quality water.

Hingham's water company, Massachusetts-American Water Company, legally owns the water main distribution system supplying most North Cohasset residents. The revenues from North Cohasset customers are an integral part of the $41 million project financing for their new treatment plant. Cohasset could offer to purchase the North Cohasset distribution system and customer base, but this might be expensive and would require additional Cohasset bond issues, if not water rate increases. Cohasset Water already raised rates two years ago to finance water main system improvements.

We should do our best to fully assess how we might help North Cohasset residents long term and should follow the Hingham regulatory proceedings closely. However, we should be careful to avoid any significant rate increases in the near future as town residents adjust to tax rate increases for other town capital improvements.

• Sewer commission: as is proposed for West Corner area homes in Hingham, should the town share part of the cost of hooking Straits Pond area residents up to the Hull treatment plant?

Ted Guild, sewer commission

This is an excellent question, but it is not particularly pertinent at this time. In due course the Sewer Commissioners will recommend how the users/taxpayers should pay for the new system. Ultimately, this will probably be based on a methodology of betterments and assessments assigned to the users, but the final decision will be made at a later Town Meeting.

In the past, Cohasset has adopted the policy under Proposition 2-1/2 that the users of various facilities should pay for them. I believe this principle should apply in future sewering, including the Straits Pond/Hull Street area, because the people who will be sewered will be receiving very substantial benefits from sewering. For example, as matters now stand, very few of the houses in the area could be sold, because of the new Title V regulations, without expensive major upgrades or system replacements. Once sewered, this will not be a problem.

As to cost, the capital cost for sewering is not more than a typical Title V upgrade. Furthermore, the people who will be sewered will be able to repay the cost over 20 years at a subsidized interest rate of less than 3 percent.

The value of a house typically increases by 10 to 15 percent when municipal sewering is provided — another benefit of being sewered.

With new strict Title V regulations, it is not fair to ask unsewered taxpayers who are in jeopardy of costly Title V upgrades to subsidize those who will benefit from the new sewers.

• Planning board: what role will the planning board play when Greenbush railroad construction comes to town?

Terry Atherton, planning board

When the Greenbush railroad construction comes to Cohasset, the Planning Board will be charged with the same responsibilities it has now; the board will review site plans to insure conformity with the town's zoning bylaws. In this case, the Planning Board will likely be most concerned with the traffic impact of the proposed station at the former Winter Garden skating rink on Route 3A. In the evening, cars exiting the station's 300 car parking area will be trying to get onto Route 3A just at the time when that road is most congested. The Planning Board must carefully review the plans for this station to insure that sufficient measures are taken to minimize potential traffic problems.

Another issue is the possibility of petitioning the MBTA for a secondary station. I believe the town's residents would benefit from the addition of a stop in the village center so people could walk to the train. The 3A station is only accessible by car for most people, and with the addition of a stop in the village, many people would also have the option of walking to the station to catch a train.

• Health board: last year there was a move afoot to increase the health board from three to five members. Is this a good or bad idea? Why?

Kevin Ulmer, board of health

The Board of Health should definitely expand from three to five members, primarily to deal with Cohasset Heights Limited. The current site assignment hearings for the proposed Area V expansion are a critical step in these matters, but they by no means represent an end point in the town's dealings with the landfill.

Continuing operating violations, closure and post-closure issues for the existing portions of CHL remain ahead of us, as will any appeal from the current hearings. Unfortunately, this landfill and its problems will be with us forever. The taxpayers of Cohasset are paying dearly in our fight to block the expansion, and we need to make the most effective use possible of those precious financial resources.

Expanding the board, especially to include expertise in scientific, engineering, legal and financial matters, would significantly strengthen the board and would spread the burden over more individuals. The town should be most grateful to the current members of the board for the time and energy they have devoted to these hearings, and future boards deserve our continued support, both financially and through expansion of their numbers and expertise.

Atherton announces candidacy for Planning Board

TERRY ATHERTON

Terry Atherton has announced his candidacy for a five-year term on the Planning Board.

"I feel that my 20 years of experience and education in transportation planning will be very relevant to many of the issues facing Cohasset, including planning for the train," Atherton said.

A principal of Cambridge Systematics, a transportation planning company, Atherton has an MS in civil engineering from MIT and a BS in civil engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

Currently chairman of the Cohasset Public Works Garage Committee, Atherton has been instrumental in finding a site and planning for the new public works garage.

"As chairman of the Public Works Garage Committee, I had to go before Town Boards to gain approval for the garage site. This experience was extremely valuable because I dealt with the permitting process firsthand, and learned what developers must go through when they apply for construction permits."

Atherton was also chairman of the DPW study committee that initially recommended the consolidation of the Town's Highway and Tree and Park Departments into a single Public Works Department.

Terry and his wife Laura, have lived in Cohasset for 20 years. They reside at 34 Clay Spring Rd. and have two children, Sarah and Leigh.

Question of the Week:

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street or mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050. Or they may be FAXed to our Hingham office at 617-740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Noon on Tuesday. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses to the candidates must be brief — a 250 word limit. Articles which exceed the limit will be cut. So be specific and make every word count.

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is:

• For selectmen candidates: public records are just that public. What would you do to make sure that the press and local residents aren't stymied in their efforts to access these documents?

• For school committee candidates: the high school auditorium hasn't been refurbished since it was built in 1950, Supt. Stephen Hart told selectmen last week. In light of this and other deteriorating school facilities, do you think the school department has an adequate long-range plan to cope with capital improvements? What contribution would you make to this effort?

• For treasurer-collector candidates: it's a hassle getting billed quarterly for property taxes. Would you support returning to a semi-annual billing system? Why or why not?

• For water commission candidates: what will you do to help restore public confidence in the water department after two summers of dry taps due to distribution problems?

• For sewer commission candidates: how did Cohasset get into this fix with the state ordering it to correct its sewer problems in the first place?

• For planning board candidates: other towns, like Hingham and Hanover, have a full-time planning administrator on staff. Is there a need for a position like this in Cohasset?

• For health board candidates: Cohasset Heights and Title V take up the lion's share of the health board's time. What's third on the list and how important is it?

Buckley announces candidacy for treasurer-collector

Joe Buckley, who has lived for 44 years at 28 Linden Drive with his wife Mig, has announced his candidacy for Cohasset Treasurer-Collector. Joe and Mig have been married 51 years, have four children, eight grandchildren and one great-grandson.

JACK BUCKLEY

In Joe's opinion, there are two very important issues facing the treasurer-collector's office at this time. First, the acting treasurer had an accident and is in the hospital. The assistant collector is now acting treasurer and is managing the office by herself with assistance from accounting and other departments. The candidate that is elected should have the experience to immediately take charge. Of all the candidates, Joe feels his 35 years as a chief financial officer qualifies him as that person.

Another important issue is: do the citizens wish to have this office appointed instead of elected.

He believes managing millions of dollars, various trust funds and increasing bond issues have changed the position of treasurer-collector greatly. Almost 50 percent of the towns the size of Cohasset in the Commonwealth now have appointed treasurers.

Buckley says, "Although I know I am qualified and I would like to serve the full three years, I am willing to step down from the office if I am elected and the article to appoint the treasurer-collector passes town meeting.

Joe believes that the following experiences make him the best qualified candidate for this office: employed for 45 years by the Buckley Corporation, 35 years as the chief financial officer; served on the Cohasset Advisory Committee; four years as treasurer of Cohasset Elder Affairs; responsible for preparing the budget, presenting the budget to the board of selectmen and the advisory committee for approval and operating the department within budget; presently chairman of Cohasset Elder Affairs; seven years a S.H.I.N.E. (Serving Health Information Needs of Elders) counselor; worked with the assistant town treasurer on several occasions concerning retired town employees; member of school facilities committee.

He was the 1995 Cohasset Citizen of the Year. He served two terms on the board of directors of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce; was on the board of the South Shore Economic Development Cooperation for 15 years, serving as treasurer for many years. The S.S.E.C. approves loans and oversees the repayment of those loans for the S.B.A. (Small Business Administration). He has served on the advisory committee for South Shore Elder Services and is presently on their board of directors and vice chairman of the finance committee.

Pierson announces candidacy for treasurer-collector

Wigmore A. Pierson, 123 Atlantic Ave., Cohasset, today announced his candidacy for a three-year term as treasurer-collector.

In making his announcement, Pierson said, "I want to build on the outstanding record that Elizabeth Ripley has compiled during her 11 years in office."

Since moving to Cohasset in 1985 from Bethesda, Maryland, Pierson has been active in town affairs. He was appointed by the board of selectmen to the first Drug and Alcohol Committee in 1988 and subsequently was appointed to the Cohasset Historic District Commission and since 1990 has been a member of the historical commission. He is also a member of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce and the town's historical society.

Recently he authored a resolution, approved by the historical commission, and adopted by the selectmen, to be placed in the warrant for the Town Meeting March 30, calling for the establishment of a town committee to write a town history covering the period 1950-2000.

Separately, he has taken a leave of absence from his critically acclaimed South Shore public affairs television program, "Pierson to Person," for the duration of the campaign.

Pierson has been active in public affairs since he was a Peace Corps volunteer in Peru. Twice, he was a candidate for the Massachusetts House of Representatives and was appointed to several boards by the Mayor of Newton, Gov. John Volpe and Gov. Francis Sargent.

He served as chairman of the Massachusetts Chapter of the Partners of the Americas, an outgrowth of President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress. The Commonwealth's sister state is Antioquia, Columbia, South America.

Subsequently, he was called to Washington to be an associate director of the Partners of the America's international program. Before that, he was appointed by the White House to a special national task force to coordinate relief efforts after a devastating earthquake struck Peru in 1970, killing more than 70,000 people.

In Washington, Pierson was a member of President Gerald Ford's advance staff in 1975 and 1976.

"Special challenges face our town in the immediate years ahead," Pierson said, "as we enter a period of severe fiscal difficulties and a divided town as to the appropriate solutions to a complex financial issues. I welcome the opportunity to contribute to our town leadership in finding solutions to our common problems."

Pierson said he is "especially interested in making sure that town money is appropriately invested to ensure a maximum return consistent with sound fiduciary guidelines."

Pierson noted his special respect for the concerns of the tax paying citizens of Cohasset who feel that few public officials are listening to them and do not understand or care about their budget difficulties in agreeing to higher taxes, however meritorious the need may be.

He serves as president of Pierson Corporation, an investment management company.

Pierson earned a BA from Lake Forest College, where he served as a trustee for eight years, and attended the Tuck School of Business Administration at Dartmouth College.

He is the father of three children: Elizabeth, 16; Morgan 14; and Carrie, 12.

Skippers sail past Scituate

Hoopsters advance to South Sectional finals

by Jim O'Sullivan
Special to the Mariner

Destiny's team cleared another hurdle Tuesday night, as Cohasset vaulted over top-seeded Scituate, 67-59, to advance to Sunday's Division 3 South Sectional finals at UMass/Boston. The Skippers will play the winner of the Medfield/Rockland game for the South title.

The Skippers were led by Jared Hardwick, the senior forward who was recently named Herald Player of the Week. Hardwick poured in a routine 28 points that were anything but routine. Matched up against the South Shore League's second-best player, Chris Brown, Hardwick was outscored in the points column, but got what counted, another W in the victory column. Junior center Ryan Bishop, hacked throughout the game while officials turned a blind eye, somehow managed to come up with 11 points and numerous rebounds.

Hardwick started the game with a three-pointer, and Burke Davis followed with a layup. Davis would finish with seven points, while playing tenacious defense. Bishop battled through traffic for a pair, then Hardwick hit from the paint. Bishop was fouled on the way up for a layup, which he hit, and nailed the foul shot. Free throws would be the clincher for CHS, as they nailed theirs when it counted, in the final 30 seconds of the game. Hardwick stuck a pull-up jumper over Brown's head and the conflicting cries of "MVP! MVP!" arose between the Cohasset and Scituate stands.

Hardwick picked up two more in the lane and J.L. Williams, who finished with seven points and a huge game under the boards, drilled a three and a free throw to make the score 20-17. Hardwick sank two free throws and Williams and Paul Michael-Quintin knocked down threes. Quintin also finished with seven points and tore down several key offensive rebounds.

Hardwick netted one from the line and Brian Kilroy, a junior forward, found the big forward with a nice pass, which Hardwick converted for a bucket. Following a Scituate three-pointer, Hardwick beat the half-ending buzzer with a nifty baseline finger roll, making the score 33-29 at the half.

Hardwick opened the second half with two free throws and, after a six-point Sailor run, Howard went coast-to-coast for two. Hardwick tied the game with a steal and a ferocious double-fisted slam dunk over Brown that left the Skipper fans crowing and the Sailor rooters gaping. Bishop's good hustle earned him a basket, and Davis' three pulled the Skippers even at 44. Bishop's lefty layup edged the Skippers ahead, 46-44, and Howard and Hardwick ran a clever give and go, which resulted in a Howard layup. Bishop pulled down an offensive rebound and put it back for a basket, and the boys in blue never trailed again.

After a technical foul was called on a Scituate player, Hardwick swished a free throw and Quintin hit nothing but nylon with a long-distance bomb. Hardwick hit Howard with a touchdown inbound pass that had the Skipper bench grinning. Davis hit two clutch free throws and Bishop retained possession at a crucial point in

Ardizzoni steps down after 11 years

Popular gymnastics coach to concentrate on judging meets

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

Ruthann Ardizzoni has never been one to take on a project or challenge haphazardly. So when the Cohasset High gymnastics coach of the past 11 years saw her free time all but disappear, she knew it was time to make a change.

Ardizzoni recently announced she won't be back for a 12th season as the Skippers' head coach. The decision, she said, was hardly an easy one, but one she had to make.

"There are a lot of things I want to do," Ardizzoni said. "When the high school team is good it turns into a 15-week season. I was having dinner with my husband (Tom) about once a week. My marriage is more important to me than coaching gymnastics."

She plans on judging meets during the weekends over the summer and at high school competitions during the fall and winter.

"It's a hard decision to make because I love all the girls," Ardizzoni said. "Whose to say when I start judging it won't be something I really love. But how would I know if I don't try it?"

Ardizzoni has won two Coach of the Year awards and led the Skippers to three consecutive South Shore League titles.

Ardizzoni first told the team of her decision on the bus ride home from the South Sectional meet and assured her gymnasts, many of whom she has coached since they were toddlers, her plans to step down from the position had nothing to do with them. Ardizzoni said the girls will still workout with her at the South Shore Community Center in Cohasset Village.

Students document boat restoration

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

Dawn Faith's eyes were stinging and her arms ached as she held them upright while examining the screws underneath the skeleton of the lifesaving boat.

Faith, a member of Cohasset High's EXCEL program, had bits of epoxy "flying every which way," when unclogging the foreign substance around the screws.

Faith and the rest of the students are logging the work they are doing on the 26-foot surf boat, the type of boats traditionally used for lifesaving.

The work has been anything but glamorous for Faith.

"February 2, 1996 is the first day when I actually worked for a decent amount of time underneath the boat," Faith wrote in her journal. "One is destined to become a tad-bit dirty while doing all of this under the boat (the word filthy comes to mind). Anyway, several of the screws had become either stripped or clogged with epoxy."

Under the direction of Jack Buckley, the students are learning the step-by-step process of restoring the boat. Last Friday afternoon, local Marine carpenter Mike McNabb guided the group through the process of securing new ribs to the boat.

The ribs are the structural supports that run perpendicular to the keel and have planking fastened to them. Made of green Oak, the ribs are steamed for four hours at temperatures between 180-200 degrees. The heat makes the wood easy to work with.

"They come out very pliable," Buckley said.

On this day, the wood went into the steam box at 7 a.m., and is ready to be taken out near lunch time.

McNabb, who is known in local circles for his art work and maritime knowledge, assigns a particular task for the students then returns a few days later and goes over the work they have done.

Buckley said McNabb's role in the restoration has proven to be invaluable.

"It has been a great experience for the kids to work with someone as talented as Mike," Buckley said. "We try to have as much hands-on experience in the class.

Fred Howard runs potent offense

By JIM O'SULLIVAN
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Skippers boys varsity basketball team runs like a machine. Each player has his own individual job to fulfill, his role to play. Senior forward Jared Hardwick, averaging more than 23 points per game, is the team's leading-scorer, followed by junior center Ryan Bishop. But how does the ball get to these two unstoppable big men? More often than not, the ball they put through the hole is one just passed to them by one of the most underrated Skippers, Fred Howard.

Howard, a senior point guard, is not only a superb basketball player, but a physical specimen as well. With long arms, cat-like quickness, a great first step, and superior jumping ability, Howard has been a force this year. Controlling the Skipper offense, Howard's job is not to score, but to distribute. Which is not to say that Howard can't score if he needs to. A la Dennis Johnson, Howard is a master at sticking the foul-line jumper in clutch situations.

Laid-back and personable, Howard also has a smile and a joke for everyone. In this typically modest manner, he had this to say about his performance this year.

"I think I've played all right this season," he said. "Certainly, there have been some games when I've fallen into lapses, but now it's tournament time, so hopefully that won't happen again."

And it hasn't. Howard scored seven points against Scituate, and, even more importantly, used his jumping ability to snatch 10 rebounds. Howard's crisp passes found his teammates wide open, helping them to score 67 points, and his shadow-like defense made it difficult for any Scituate players to penetrate the lane.

Howard's coach, Ron Ford, had nothing but glowing words for his floor general.

"Fred's improved steadily as the year's progressed," Ford said. "Defensively, he's picked it up a notch in the tournament. He's playing like a senior.

"I have a lot of respect for Fred. He's not always had an easy road, and he's certainly had many opportunities to say 'Hey, this coach is crazy, it's not worth it,' but Fred hasn't quit. He's a survivor, a fighter and I don't think people realize that. Freddy goes home all the time, it's a long ride for him. He stays with the Williams family in Cohasset. But, even so, he's had a tough road, but he's really put a lot into it, and I think he has an opportunity to go on and be a college player; he's a great kid."

"I'd like to go to college," Howard said. "And hopefully play college ball, but I'm focusing on the tournament right now."

With Howard improving every game, Cohasset has a stellar starting lineup and should be tough to stop for the rest of the tournament.

Hoopsters advance to South Sectional finals

the game by diving to the floor for a loose ball.

Quintin ripped down a huge offensive board and went to the line, sinking one. Hardwick's free throw extended the Skipper edge to 62-57. Howard tossed in a free throw and Hardwick popped two to ice the victory.

A raucous bus ride home followed the victory and, unfortunately, any interviews were very much out of the question. Slight eavesdropping, however, did catch Head Coach Ron Ford uttering the following: "I feel like we stole every egg out of the henhouse. I'm very proud of our guys. This is the best team we've ever beaten. This win was without question the toughest win this program has ever had. I'm incredibly proud of our team; we've peaked at the right time. We believe in ourselves and in each other, and that's what it comes down to."

In the second round of the Division 3 State Tournament, the Skippers matched up against the Canton Bulldogs Friday night in Quincy. The Skippers squeezed by the Bulldogs by a score of 64-58, led by a great effort by Hardwick, who poured in 29, and Bishop, who muscled in 19, under heavy defensive pressure.

Hardwick started the contest with a free throw and Quintin took a pass from Howard to the basket for two points. After a 10-0 Canton run, Hardwick answered with a runner in the paint. Hardwick wouldn't score again, saving his best performance for when it counted most.

Meanwhile, Canton had to be contained. Bishop laid one in off the glass and Hardwick hit a streaking J.L. Williams for two points. Quintin and Williams both drilled threes to pull the Skippers within one, 16-15. Bishop closed out the half for the Skippers by putting back two offensive boards, making the halftime score 21-19 in Canton's favor.

Hardwick came out and dominated early in the second half, hitting a free throw to begin his run. He followed that with an offensive putback. Jarod Cowens, Canton's bulky power forward, hit a trey, but Canton's fate was signed, sealed, and delivered on the next play. Hardwick took an inbound pass and beat Cowens downcourt, slamming a violent tomahawk jam on the forward's head, much to the delight of the Skipper faithful. Hardwick's dunk was "the best high school dunk I've every seen," said Ford.

Then it was Bishop's turn to catch on fire. A left-handed baby hook was followed by a power layup, a foul, and the ensuing free throw. With the score 32-31 and Canton in the lead, Hardwick popped a three from the corner over the outstretched hand of a bewildered Cowens. Bishop's hustle earned him a pull-up jumper, which he made. Hardwick hit a layup and finished with the resulting free throw. Bishop's textbook left-handed hook made the tally 41-35. Hardwick hit two free throws and Quintin knocked down a pull-up jumper, which must have left Canton defenders wondering who they could leave open without being torched. Hardwick hit a jumper and Bishop took a pass from Howard to the hole for a deuce. Davis nailed one from the foul line and Quintin brought the Cohasset crowd to its feet with one from beyond the arc. Hardwick hit another one over the dazed Cowens. Cohasset closed out its scoring by nailing free throws. Hardwick knocked down seven in the final minute and Bishop added two, making the final score 64-58.

Ruthann Ardizzoni steps down after 11 years at gymnastics helm

Ardizzoni, the SSL representative to the State Gymnastics Committee, told the other coaches this would be her last season at the All-League meet. Their reaction was quite a surprise.

"The coaches were really disappointed I was leaving the league," Ardizzoni said. "It was nice to know people liked me and were disappointed I was leaving. I didn't expect that reaction from the other coaches."

At last Sunday's awards banquet at Kimball's, Ardizzoni told the gymnasts and their parents she was "really happy to be a part of three league championships," and was awarded with a bouquet a flowers, a gift certificate to the Cafe Eleganza restaurant and a painting done by the team captain Tafana Fiore.

The lone regret Ardizzoni has is that the team never went to the South Sectionals at full strength in any of its championship seasons.

"I can't say there's anything I would have done differently as a coach," she said. "The only thing I find is that it would have been nice to have had everybody healthy and well at the South Sectionals to see how we would have done against the other good teams."

Without him we wouldn't be able to do this."

Once the ribs out of the steam box, the group puts together an "assembly line" to install the wooden planks.

"Each new piece we install gives the boat new life and new strength, bringing the horizon of completion closer and closer to our eyes," they wrote.

The students explained in their journals that the activity has kept them busy with maritime-related work while the winter has kept them from their usual outings into the ocean.

"Perseverance is the key to our long, arduous task of rebuilding a boat," the students wrote. "That is what keeps us all going."

Once they removed the boat from Buckley's trailer, the students inserted strong supports underneath the structure to enable them to work in the boat.

"We gathered up our tools consisting of an awl, a hammer, a scraper and a screwdriver," they wrote. "The plan is to scrape away the paint so that the area of where the epoxy is covering the screws is highlighted."

The class is currently halfway through the ribbing process. Buckley said the students are making good time and could have the boat ready for this summer if they worked on it exclusively. But because they work on the boat three days a week, Buckley believes the summer of '97 is a more realistic target date for completion.

Once the construction of the boat is finished, the students' next project will entail doing research into the lives of local lifesavers and lifesaving vessels. Buckley said the group will then come up with a name which is historically connected to the lifesaving boats or people of Cohasset.

Choral festival results listed

Bryan Marks, choral music director at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, announced the results of auditions for the Southeastern Massachusetts District Choral Festival. Seventy-five communities participated in the competitive audition process.

Seventh-grader Jacqui Dupré, a soprano, and eighth-grade baritone Khalil Modyum were accepted. The Senior High District Festival held in Bridgewater was directed by Tamara Brooks of New England Conservatory.

Sophomore Katie Buckley, an alto, senior soprano Grace Deveney and junior Mark Whitman, a tenor, made the grade. Whitman scored in the top 10 percent of those auditioning and was recommended for All State Festival Chorus auditions, where he scored 97 out of a possible 100 points.

"Mark's success is attributed to the wonderful combination of talent and work ethic which he brings to his music," said Marks. "What a superb effort."

Mark will be part of a 250-voice choir performing in Danvers March 14-16 at the All-State Festival.

New police recruit training policy agreement is enacted

Patrolman William Quigley, who was hired last year, will be the first Cohasset police officer subject to a new agreement obligating him to reimburse the town for the cost of his attending the police academy if he should leave the department before serving five years.

This year the state is charging towns $1,800 per recruit for police academy training. The money will be subtracted from the town's "cherry sheets," which is the money the state provides the town in revenue sharing.

Until this year the state did not charge for recruits to attend the academy.

Under the new agreement, the town will pick up the $1,800 fee if the officer remains with the department for five years. The officer is responsible for reimbursing the town the full amount if he/she leaves earlier, Police Chief Brian Noonan explained.

This agreement is allowed under state guidelines and has been approved by town counsel Richard A. Henderson.

The town was not charged when former Cohasset Police Officer Richard G. Abbadessa, who recently resigned to join the Weymouth Police Department after serving about two years in Cohasset, attended the police academy.

Quigley will attend the academy in April.

Users could pay entire sewer costs, officals say

Title V threat removed from homeowners

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

If a future town meeting agrees, homeowners directly benefitting from the upcoming sewer projects — including the upgrading the wastewater treatment plant — will pay the costs entirely, as opposed to the town as a whole.

However, sewer commission chairman Edward "Ted" Guild said that the costs for individual homeowners will not likely exceed those incurred by the repair of a private septic system under Title V.

It will cost homeowners in the Strait's Pond area some $18,000 to connect to the Hull sewer plant.

This cost includes $16,000 spread over 20 years, covering $500 annual amortization and nearly three percent interest on construction; plus the one-time cost of connecting each house.

Guild explained that homeowners are responsible for getting their homes connected to the sewer system, which will cost an average of $1,500 to $2,000 to install a pump, lay the pipe to the house and to disable the current septic system. Septic systems must be sanitized with hydrogen peroxide, the top must be crushed in and the existing pipe disconnected.

In an effort to help homeowners, Guild said the department may be able to line up contractors to connect certain streets at a time and possibly at a lower rate.

The project, which is one of eight sewer articles facing town meeting, authorizes an agreement under which Hull will accept 65,000 gallons per day.

Guild said a 150,000 gallon tank will be built at the site of the North Cohasset fire station to handle flow during peak periods.

A pumping station, which will be sound proofed, with the pumps placed below grade, will also be built at the fire station site.

"It will not be offensive to the neighborhood," Guild stressed.

He also stated that priority will be given to the 250 to 280 houses existing in the area.

"We're very tight in our capacity," he said. "We will only sewer existing structures."

At least one builder has developed plans for a subdivision in the area.

Residents will probably be required to hook into the new system even if their septic systems have recently been rebuilt to comply with Title V.

It is expected that the sewer line will increase property values since any uncertainty over Title V will now be removed.

In addition, it is hoped that by eliminating pollution in Strait's Pond, the midge problem can be greatly reduced.

Other sewer articles:

- petition the legislature to allow the town to lay and maintain pipes in Hull;
- authorize an agreement for Hingham residents of the Bonnie Brier area to use the system;
- appropriate $15,000 for benthic testing of various organisms in the harbor, a cost to be borne by the entire town;
- permit the town to apply for 25 percent state funding for some $70,000 in repairs which were already approved at an early town meeting.
- allow some $200,000 in repairs to sewer pipes in the harbor, which will also be submitted for state funding;
- authorize the commission to recover costs from users;
- grant the commission the right to acquire easement by eminent domain over property to lay sewer pipes.

Tri-town sewer project to move ahead

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset will go ahead with the $4.1 million project to connect 250-280 homes by a sewer line to the Hull treatment plant whether or not Hingham decides to join the project.

The tri-town project would also connect Hingham homes in the Weir River Watershed Area near its border with Cohasset and Hull.

The Hingham project is contingent on town meeting approval and the proposal in that town has the taxpayers picking up about half the cost.

If Hingham joins in, it would share with Cohasset the cost of the pumping station to be installed at the site of the North Cohasset Fire Station and pipeline in Hull.

In Cohasset, the people who benefit — not the town as a whole — will pay for the project's cost through betterments, Sewer Commission Chairman Ted Guild said. He explained the cost is comparable to what individual homeowners would have to pay to have their septic systems repaired.

"But they have 20 years to pay for it this way and their worries are over," Guild said.

He later told selectmen (see related article) that the project will cost homeowners an average of $16,000, which will be paid for over 20 years.

That will amount to $500 each year amortization and three percent interest in financing from the state. Guild explained that a three percent loan is the equivalent of a 25 percent state grant.

Guild was to have met this week with officials from the state's revolving loan fund to arrange a so-called bridge loan, which would help the town out with construction costs. The project could affect the tax rate during the construction period and before rate payers are connected and assessed charges.

In addition, homeowners are responsible for connecting to the sewer line, which will cost from $1,500 to $2,000 for a house located some 75 feet from the road and with a yard without a great deal of ledge to blast through.

Guild said the town may line up a contractor to handle the connections, hopefully at a low average cost than and on a set schedule.

The Straits Pond area has been plagued with failing septic systems and under Title V, the state's environmental code, homeowners must upgrade their septic systems before they can sell their property.

About 100 citizens attended an informational two-hour meeting on the project at town hall Feb. 26, Guild said. Another meeting is slated for 5:45 p.m., March 20 at town hall.

"It was an amazing meeting and people were satisfied with what they heard," Guild said.

The town is under a court order to resolve its wastewater problems or it could face fines of up to $1/2 million a year. The Straits Pond project is separate from plans to expand and upgrade the capacity of Cohasset's sewer plant which serves the central part of Cohasset.

The agony of the Fleet

Skippers stalled after South title

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

BOSTON — The Cohasset High boys basketball team enjoys the most success when it is able to get in a rhythm and sustain it for an entire game.

Unfortunately, Winchester High was able to throw the Division 3 South Sectional champs off their game enough to break away for a 68-51 victory in Tuesdays Division 3 EMass finals at the FleetCenter.

"We just never got into a groove," said Cohasset coach Ron Ford. "This team is a momentum team and we never got the momentum going. Winchester did a great job. They kept us off balance all night with their press. We never really solved it."

The Skippers' loss to the Sachems came two days

Cohasset High basketball players Ryan Bishop, Paul Michael-Quintin, Burke Davis and Fred Howard show the disappointment of defeat in the closing seconds of Tuesday's 68-51 loss to Winchester in the Division 3 EMass finals at the FleetCenter. The loss, however, couldn't tarnish 19-7 Cohasset's second consecutive South Sectional title and huge tourney win over rival Scituate.

Town thrown lifeline at water hearings

May appeal for full status

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

Cohasset's chances of having full representation in the Massachusetts-American water rate hearings that begin today (March 14) at the state Department of Public Utilities remains murky.

The water rate increase issue which will affect about 600 residents in North Cohasset —about 10 percent of the town's population — came into view in February when several residents mustered to fight the proposed rate hike through a letter-writing campaign.

Massachusetts-American Water Company officials say much of the rate increase is needed to cover the expense of building and operating the $39.5 million water treatment facility which is under construction in Hingham and slated to go on-line in May. Mass-American, which serves about 10,500 residential customers in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, filed its rate case with the DPU in November and if the proposed increase is approved in full, the average rate payer will see their annual water bills go from about $250 to $680.

Selectmen said they missed the December deadline for filing to participate in the hearings because they thought the town, by "piggy backing" testimony and questions onto Hingham or Hull, could get the representation it needs. Then due to public outcry, the town applied to participate after the deadline.

On Monday, just four days before the evidentiary hearings which could continue through the middle of April, the DPU denied Cohasset's late petition to intervene.

Thanks to last ditch efforts by both state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who brought the town's predicament to the governor's attention, the DPU decided that Cohasset officials will be allowed to act as a "limited par-

Officials to get on board for train committee

Anti-rail group still fighting

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Even as MBTA officials arrived in town this week to discuss the actual construction on the new Greenbush railroad, members of the anti-train Coastal Coalition refused to concede defeat.

Sporting their trademark yellow "No Train" stickers, some 20 coalition members packed Monday night's selectmen's meeting, which included a discussion with MBTA officials about ways to reduce the train's impact on Cohasset.

Selectmen chairman Merle Brown said that the meeting was not a debate on the merits of the train, which he opposes, but rather a discussion of how to represent the town in construction decisions.

However, several coalition members said there is still a chance the train will not be built.

"It's not a done deal," said Doug Yeager of Sohier St.

Brown and the other two selectmen present, Martha Gjesteby and Peter Pratt, (Jane Goedecke and Michael Sullivan were absent) agreed to consider the membership of a temporary committee to study potential problems the train might create.

Cohasset's Week

Residents concerned about legal bills

In the aftermath of last week's Mariner article on legal costs skyrocketing because of the Cohasset Heights Landfill expansion hearings, Ray Kasperowicz of South Main Street urged selectmen last week to monitor the situation.

He asked selectmen to seek a better rate from the Warner & Stackpole law firm, which has run up most of the bills.

"Even OJ Simpson didn't pay full hourly rate," Kasperowicz said. "If it were my legal fees I'd be on this guy like a cheap suit."

Selectman Peter Pratt said, "Quite frankly, Ray, I agree with you. I think an alarm bell should have been rung by someone somewhere."

Selectman Michael Sullivan said "It was rung," by the lawyers involved when it became clear that the hearings would drag on longer than expected.

"The board of health are the people who hire these people (lawyers)," said selectman Jane Goedecke. "We've never gotten a comment from them on this subject, except an approved bill, many approved bills."

She added later that attempts to reduce the number of lawyers at the hearings were opposed by the board of health and conservation commission.

"We were blasted for not having two people there (at the hearings.) We were nailed," she said.

Robert Davenport of the health board replied that the legal projections have always been just estimates. He also said the hearings will likely end next week.

Selectmen were also irritated that they had not been told that there is a cap on the fees paid by the landfill, leaving the town to foot the entire expense of lawyers and professional witnesses after a certain point.

In addition, Goedecke said that the participation of so many citizen's groups has slowed down the process and added to the material which must be transcribed and then evaluated.

Letter to John Pfaffman

Selectmen plan to send a letter thanking John "Fritz" Pfaffmann for his work on the harbor committee, from which he recently resigned.

New town report available

Featuring Janice Sargent's stunning photo of the Minot's Ledge Lighthouse fog bell on the cover, the 1995 town report is now available at the town clerk's office and the selectmen's room at town hall. The report contains vital records for the past year, lists the account of town meeting and contains the municipal budget. All committee, commissions and boards are also listed.

Voter deadlines noted

The last day to register to vote for the annual town election on Saturday, April 6, is Wednesday, March 20. The Town Clerk's office will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Registration forms are also available from the Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The form may be mailed or hand-delivered to the clerk's office, but must be received or postmarked on or before the deadline.

You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

- absence from the town during the hours the polls are open;
- physical disability;
- religious beliefs which prevent voting at the polls on election day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office, or a written, signed request may be sent by mail, fax or hand-delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absent voter, sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand-deliver the application to the clerk's office.

Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or may be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 6 to be counted.

Mosquito board vacancies

There are still two vacancies on the mosquito committee. Anyone interested is urged to contact selectmen immediately at 383-9900.

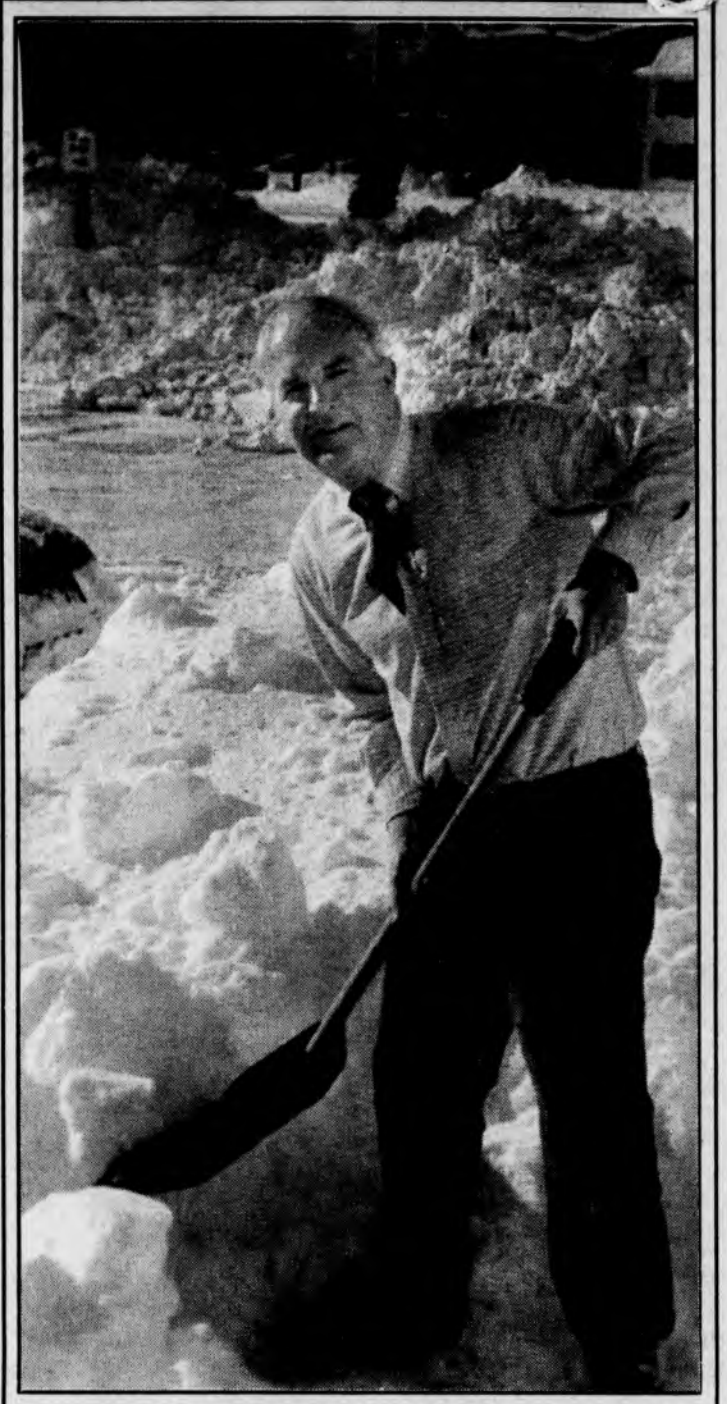
Election polling hours set

For the local election Saturday, April 6, the polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Selectmen set the hours this week.

John Brister named to harbor committee

Selectmen have named John Brister of the yacht club to the harbor committee.

The Big Dig



The Mariner caught building inspector Bob Egan hard at work outside town hall during a recent snow storm.

Refreshments Will Be Served

The South Shore Charter School is a tuition free public K-12 school open to all interested South Shore students. Our educational approach ties together our rigorous curriculum with hands-on experience for a comprehensive and long-lasting education. Whatever a child's ability or interests, SSCS works individually with each student to develop both marketable skills and a strong academic foundation for the future.

At SSCS we prepare students for success. Classes are small, no larger than 18 students per class. Classroom instruction is complimented by self-paced, computerized instruction modules allowing every student the time, tools and teachers to gain a solid grasp of the subject matter. Computer skills, math and science are integrated into daily classroom activities from K-12. Spanish, French, Russian, and ASL are available with collaborative relationships with partner schools in Spain, France and Russia. College courses are available to juniors and seniors. All students participate in quarterly public exhibitions of mastery. Our student-centered governance process encourages student responsibility and initiative. Extended-day and extended-year programs and full-day Kindergarten are available.

At SSCS, students learn from the best. SSCS has attracted an outstanding faculty and partner/client group who bring expertise from across the country and the world. These respected experts, drawn from public schools, colleges and professions, bring new perspectives to each student's studies and experiences through our classes and twenty student-driven projects.

SSCS is different. Parents are critical and invested partners in the SSCS community and in their child's education. Through our specially licensed software, parents are able to access their child's progress in all subjects on a daily basis. Parents and students can also contact teachers through e-mail allowing for timely communication. SSCS works closely with community organizations to develop sites for internships and apprenticeships as well as to serve as valuable resources for in-school development of life and career skills.

Bedrock fractures focus at Tuesday landfill hearing

[redacted]RIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

The potential impacts to area surface and ground water from the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) was to have been the topic addressed by the Cohasset Board of Health last Tuesday evening.

Instead, as the hearing sessions entered their eighth week, board members were given a "great lecture" (as Hearing Officer John Shea called it) on the subject of "fractured trace analysis" by geologist Patrick J. Barosh.

Speaking for the town, Barosh, who holds a doctorate degree in geology, was testifying as an expert in the field of locating bedrock fractures relating to ground water flow and hazards caused by contaminants in such cases.

He stated that the topography of the local region is made up of ancient granite and that "a network of faults" permeates the local area.

Relying on United States Geological Survey maps and Department of Environmental Protection aerial photographs, Barosh showed that that one such fault zone, as well as part of an eight mile magnetic dike, that used to carry iron mineral deposits intersect in an area directly adjacent to Cohasset Heights. He felt this area was of particular concern.

> 'They would be great open conduits for water.'
> — Patrick J. Barosh predicted.

Noting that because of this fault zone and other smaller fractures in the local topography, bedrock on the South Shore does not conform to expected standards, and he explained this then makes for unexpected problems with regard to water run-off in areas where bedrock is extremely close to the surface of the ground.

"There are no uniform layers. Everything is variable and this is a nightmare for people," he said.

Barosh stated that in addition to this north/south fault zone another zone running in an east/west direction would also be affected by water run-off from CHL.

"They would be great open conduits for water," he predicted.

Barosh disagreed with CHL experts who felt that area peat deposits would help control water emanating from the landfill. He stated it was his opinion that these deposits were little more than sand and gravel and would have little if any effect.

He further stated that potential trouble spots would be in the James Brook area situated directly across Route 3A from the landfill, Sanctuary Pond and the Great Swamp. These areas would be particularly susceptible when heavy rainfall caused flooding.

Because of this detailed geological testimony Cohasset Heights attorney Anton Moherke questioned Barosh on whether or not he had the authority to speak on the subject of ground and surface water.

Though Moherke was cut short by the sudden adjournment of the night's session, cross-examination will recommence Thursday evening. While most hearing sessions have run well over the three hour time limit originally established, Tuesday's session lasted a relatively brief two and one half hours.

All parties are hoping to wrap up testimony on Friday, March 15. On that day the board will hold hearings starting at 9 a.m. in the Second Congregational Church and continue until closing arguments are completed.

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

EMINENT DOMAIN

QUESTION: My town wants to build a highway and my home is in the way. Can it take my property without my consent?

ANSWER: I'm afraid the answer is YES! It can do it by the power of eminent domain. This is the right of the government to take private property for public use with just compensation paid to the property owner. The town does not need the property owner's consent.

The town will appraise the property and offer you the fair market price for it. If this amount is not acceptable, you have the right to recourse in hearings or, if needed, in court to challenge the price but not the taking.

Officials to get on board for train committee

MBTA environmental manager Andrew Brennan said the committee should likely include officials from various departments, such as public safety, selectmen and conservation, which will have an interest in how the rail line is designed.

The group will be formed soon and will meet for about two months, preparing a report in June.

The comments will be included in the environmental impact report which is due to be given to the citizen's advisory committee on the train by Labor Day and subject to a 30-day review.

The environmental review process should be finished by the end of the year, with preliminary construction due to start in late summer 1997.

Most of the 15-month construction period will start in spring 1998, with service to begin in 1999.

Plans currently call for the train to stop at the site of the former ice skating rink on Rte. 3A and in North Scituate Village.

Brennan said that although the MBTA will consider adding a stop in Cohasset Village, he was not optimistic that it will be built.

He said the village site is on a curve with poor visibility and therefore a spot engineers would be reluctant to stop at.

Secondly, the Americans With Disabilities Act requires full-sized, 800-foot long platforms for handicapped access, so a "whistle stop" without a platform, which some officials had hoped for at the village, is not likely.

However, Brennan praised a stop in the village because it would be within walking distance of a considerable number of residents, allowing them to commute without using their automobiles at all.

"I'd like to give it (Cohasset Village stop) full consideration," Brennan stated.

In response to questions about the role of the mitigation committee, Brennan said, "Our whole objective is to give you the opportunity to be involved."

He also said that if the town did not wish to participate, the effort will still proceed. "I'd rather come with it (the mitigation study) with the town's input than without it," he said.

"The cheapest and best mitigation is not to build it at all," said Beechwood St. resident Peter Robb.

However, Brennan disputed Robb's claims that the diesel train engines will cause more pollution than the cars that would be removed from the roads.

Conservation commission chairman Thomas Callahan, who said he was speaking as a private citizen and not on behalf of the committee, said he was disappointed to learn that the MBTA will file its applications under the state wetlands protection act and not under the local by-laws.

Brennan replied that as a state agency working in 104 communities, they need to file under a uniform law. However, he said that local laws would in fact be upheld.

Callahan then said he hoped the mitigation committee would include various points of view. "I hope they are not just a rubber stamp and sold a bill of goods . . . as the CAC (citizen's advisory committee) is . . ." he stated.

Gjesteby praised the formation of the committee, stating that it is necessary for the town to work with state officials to make the project as safe and convenient as possible.

Pratt criticized the process, saying that because the train will be built with state, not federal money, he hoped the Greenbush corridor communities will not be denied their full rights.

Brennan said that the state guidelines under which the project will be reviewed are as strict and in some cases tougher, than the federal guidelines.

Pratt to seek state ruling on conflict issue

Selectman Peter Pratt, an abutter to the Greenbush tracks and a Greenbush opponent, will petition the state ethics commission for a ruling on his status as an official regarding issues related to restoration of the train.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Pratt said he realized the potential of a conflict during discussions with an MBTA official at the selectmen's meeting Monday (see related story).

"Maybe I can't or shouldn't comment on any of it," Pratt said about upcoming mitigation discussions.

In the fall of 1994, Pratt checked with town counsel regarding his participation in decisions and discussions about the proposed restoration of the train and was given the go-ahead.

At that time, Pratt said if the train goes ahead he would not vote on matters that directly affect abutters.

"That's a fairly well demarcated line" between the overall issue and those directly affecting abutters, he said at the time.

Hingham to sue MBTA over train

Cohasset readies for rail impact

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

As Cohasset readies itself to mitigate impacts that the restoration of the Old Colony Greenbush line will have on the community, its neighbors in Hingham have played their historic trump card, and voted last week to sue the MBTA.

The suit appeals a recent decision by the Federal Transit Administration which will allow the MBTA to "segment" its three pronged rail restoration, using federal funds for the Middleboro and Plymouth lines currently under construction, but covering the costs of the Greenbush line with state money.

The elimination of federal funds, Hingham selectmen say is a blatant attempt by the MBTA to evade tougher federal environmental laws that protect valuable resources like the town's nationally registered Lincoln Historic District, and is the latest in a series of MBTA maneuvers to push the line through as quickly as possible, and at any cost.

Hingham will use the remainder (about $90,000) of the $100,000 appropriated through last year's town meeting to deal with the Greenbush issue "head on."

For nearly a year, Hingham has worked closely with Washington D.C. attorney Andrea Ferster, an expert in historic preservation law, who will file the suit in U.S. District Court in either Boston or Washington D.C.

The court battle could take from one to two years, said Selectmen Chairman Katharine Reardon, who noted that the injunctions will also be considered to prevent construction from beginning on the line.

Reardon estimates that this court action will use up the town meeting appropriation, and the board will have to tap the taxpayers for any further legal efforts. Hingham selectmen also transferred an additional $20,000 into their unclassified account last week, to pay for "technical assistance" needed to review the project and all desired mitigation measures.

Cohasset Selectman Martha Gjesteby, who is also a member of the state appointed Citizens Advisory Committee reviewing the MBTA's environmental feasibility studies, said if Hingham wants to sue, it's their right to do so.

"As a member of the CAC, I'm busy studying the finance and safety issues of the project. We're doing our job for the final environmental impact report," she said.

Eligiblity sought on local veterans

In the ongoing effort to complete the World War II Cohasset Historical Military Memorial, an oversight committee was established. The purpose of the committee is to determine to the best of its ability whether names in question meet eligibility requirements for inclusion on the wall.

After diligent research, the committee is left with several names it can find nothing about, and it is appealing to the public for help. Anyone with information that would help the committee determine the eligibility of the following people is asked to call Town Hall (383-9900): Margaret Drucilla Coleman, Ernest Elden Decker, Helen Marion Heartz, Joseph Lay Rohr Jr., William Roger Scannell and Shirley Eleanor Wright.

Those who call with information are asked to leave their name and telephone number at the selectmen's office and a member of the committee will contact them.

Transportation issues are fielded at regional forum

By DAVID TIBBETTS
Cohasset Mariner

The future of transportation on the South Shore glitters like a distant star. There are plans to reopen the Old Colony Railroad, widen Route 3, and add additional parking facilities to South Shore communities.

Yet some of the plans threaten to swallow part of that luster like a black hole. Incomplete plans for Route 3 widening have communities mulling banding together to protect their interests. And Hingham gets ready to sue to block the Greenbush Line.

The South Shore Coalition and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MEPA), two regional citizen's groups, held a joint transportation forum in Hanover earlier this month. The forum was billed as a chance for South Shore residents to see how these projects would affect their communities. Many questions, however, remained unanswered at the end of the meeting.

The most ambitious project to improve traffic conditions on the South Shore is a plan to widen Route 3. A 1985 plan recommended widening Route 3 from Route 18 in Weymouth to Route 44 in Duxbury. That plan was put on hold because of environmental concerns and because of the Central Artery Project.

With the artery project well under way now, state planners have turned their attention back to overcrowded Route 3. The 1985 plan had to be abandoned because much has changed in the last 11 years. Higher population numbers and changing demographics have forced planners to draw up a new plan.

The new study calls for Route 3 to be widened from Route 18 in Weymouth all the way to the Sagamore Bridge on Cape Cod.

According to Dan Beagan, director of Transportation, Planning and Development — Executive Office of Transportation and Construction, some ideas include using only the median strip to widen the road and creating an HOV lane along Route 3.

Tim Roache is the Route 3 project manager for the Massachusetts Highway Department. He said the state has set aside $15 million to study the widening and reconstruction of Route 3. Roache said that the state is considering adding a web-site so people can get information about the project on line.

Roache also said that the state was performing a "Major Investment Study," which institutes federal guidelines requiring the state to include the general population in the planning process.

It is too early for cost estimates or construction schedules, Roache said. He added that at this point, there are no concrete plans on how the widening would be accomplished. Also not addressed was the issue of the rotary at the Sagamore Bridge.

Jane Goedecke, chairman of the South Shore Coalition, said that the rotary will have to be included in the study. She said that MEPA is recommending the formation of an advisory committee to deal with Route 3.

State Rep. Jan O'Brien, D-Hanover, attended the forum. She advised residents of communities affected by the plan to take the initiative and get involved early in the planning stages.

The future of the Old Colony Railroad is more certain than the Route 3 project. The Old Colony Railroad ceased operations in 1959 due to financial insolvency. The MBTA is almost finished laying new track and making other improvements necessary to revive the defunct rail line.

The main section of the line will open on Dec.15, 1996. Trains will run from South Station to destinations in Middleboro, Kingston and Plymouth.

The Greenbush line remains embroiled in a controversy over the potential impact the railroad will have on an historic district in Hingham.

At the meeting Andrew Brennan, manager of environmental affairs for the MBTA, said that there was a strong possibility that Hingham would sue the MBTA to block the project. (See related story page 4).

"Few things in life are certain, but one thing that is certain is that Hingham will sue to block the Greenbush line. I'm not sure what they will sue us for, but I'm confident this project will continue because we're in line with federal and state regulations," he said.

The Greenbush line is scheduled for completion in 1999.

State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, offered some welcomed relief when he announced a recommendation by a special state commission studying MBTA financing to abolish property tax assessments for MBTA services.

Fringe communities like Hanover that don't have commuter rail service are expected to pay an assessment because many residents use commuter rail service in neighboring towns. The commission ruled that it is impossible to accurately predict how many people from fringe communities actually use the commuter rail in towns that receive service. The report recommends that all commuter rail property tax assessments should be abolished. (The governor, however, has filed a bill to eliminate the MBTA advisory board, which could result in keeping fringe community assessments without the benefit of a vote on the T budget.) Other recommendations include a freeze on all other assessments, downsizing the MBTA work force, increasing fares and using state revenues — not property taxes — as a source of equitable funding.

Hynes also said that the state has earmarked $50 million to expand marine commuting services on the North and South Shores.

Ron Morgan, the planning coordinator for the MBTA Park and Ride, provided a list of expanded Park and Ride services in South Shore communities. A 1,334 space garage will be added to the Quincy Adams garage in Quincy; 400 spaces will be added to the Quincy Center location and 308 spaces will be added to Hingham this summer.

ticipant" and can attend the hearings and give written testimony, but will not be permitted to cross examine witnesses.

"We won at least half a loaf," said Cohasset Selectman Peter Pratt, who noted that the board is considering an administrative appeal of the DPU decision. Pratt said, with two board members out of town this week, selectmen will seek the advice of new Town Counsel Paul DeRensis on whether to appeal or at least file to reserve the town's rights to appeal the decision.

Pratt said it's important to study the implications of the DPU ruling and "whether or not the town will lose any substantive rights because we're not a full player."

While the board once thought Hingham, Hull and Cohasset's interests were similar enough to allow for "piggy backing" testimony, Pratt said it is now clear that the towns may have divergent views. At public hearings in January, Hull residents questioned why they were expected to pay as much their neighbors in Hingham. Hingham, by forcing Mass-American to change the site of the water plant in town, increased the cost of the plant substantially and will at least reap the benefit of having the company on its tax rolls. Cohasset rate payers share some of these concerns as well as a skepticism that, after paying triple what they are now paying, their water will be any better.

"We have lousy brown water and low pressure now," said Jerusalem Road resident Maria Plante, who wonders how much better her "treated" water will be after it has travelled through 100-year-old pipes.

Pratt too has concerns about the condition of the pipes in the North Cohasset water district, which he said were installed in the early years of the 20th century as part of a private water system serving old estates in the area.

"In my opinion, the pipes in North Cohasset are probably the most decrepit in the entire system. The district is vastly undercapitalized," he said, adding "at the end of the day, we ought to know the depreciated value of those facilities."

Submerged beneath numerous other issues facing the town such as a proposed new school, sewer system upgrades and the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill, the water rate issue has surfaced and the board is determined to keep rate payers from getting soaked.

"Cohasset is in the thick of it now, with all kinds of issues, and guess what? We have another one," Pratt said.

Cohasset will have until tomorrow, March 15, to appeal the DPU decision.

The water rate hearings will take place starting at 10 a.m. in the 12th floor hearing room at the Department of Public Utilities at 100 Cambridge Street, Boston. For more information call the DPU at 727-3500.

Baptist Church group can continue to meet

Selectmen this week gave the Cohasset Community Church permission to continue holding a Bible study group Friday nights at the town hall.

According to the Rev. Robert Hurlbut, group has attracted about four people at each meeting.

The congregation is affiliated with the Baptist church.

Rivers Bill is topic March 26

The public is invited to an open meeting of the Gulf Association to learn about the Rivers Bill on Tuesday, March 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers' House.

The Rivers Bill has been before the Massachusetts Legislature for five years, and has been passed by the Senate. It still faces an uphill battle in the House.

The proposed Rivers Bill will affect everyone who owns property on or near the Gulf River, and it is vital that we all be informed of its implications.

Our speakers are Paul Burns, an environmental attorney on the staff of MASSPIRG, who will speak in favor of the bill. In opposition is Stephen Ryan, associate counsel for the Massachusetts Association of Realtors.

At this meeting both sides will be represented and there will be an opportunity to ask questions.

Refreshments will be served.

AROUND TOWN/Sallyann Chatterton

Leap baby joins the Doggett family of Cohasset!

Hasn't Leo's Exxon looked dashing lately, complete with the Tiger that has been out front on the weekends? When we asked Bob Fiori what the occasion was, he replied that it was "just to show appreciation to all of our customers!" They were even passing out beautiful carnations, something that most certainly was appreciated that freezing cold day. (Mine is still going strong and as lovely as ever.) Anyway, it's time to tell the Fioris that we appreciate them, and we do!

Hopefully you were at the game — Cohasset vs. Rockland at UMass, Boston, and saw the big win! Then, on Monday morning it was nice to open the Boston Globe and see Coach Ron Ford and the team on the front page as the Div. 3 champs!

Did you know those guys would make a great trivia question? They were the last Cohasset High team to play at the Boston Garden and will be the first Cohasset team to play at FleetCenter. As this column goes to the paper, we don't know how the game will turn out, but want to take the time to thank our boys for an exciting season and say thanks for all their hard work and super playing. Hope they had as much fun as we did! Good luck!

On the subject of sports, just to let you know — spring sports start the day school reopens — Monday, March 18.

Headline — "Leap Year baby joins the Doggett family!" Conner Keith Doggett, born in the last two hours of Feb. 29, is the latest grandchild of Tom and Polly Doggett of Hugh Strain Road, Cohasset. Conner is Dana and Chris Doggett's fifth child.

Despite his love for Cohasset, Dana continues to feel that Orem, Utah is the place to live and raise his family. Hopefully we will get a chance to see Conner and the rest of his family during their next visit to his grandparents' home! Congrats to all of you.

A Bible study is taking place on Friday nights at Cohasset Town Hall. Entitled "Who is Jesus?", it runs from 7 to 8 p.m., and everyone is welcome. For more information, call 383-9761.

Folks are really pleased for Michelle Goodson, who will finally realize her dream of opening an organic food market. It won't be in Cohasset as she had hoped, but it will be closeby in North Scituate, next to Wilbur's, so that will have to be good enough for us. I can't wait until May — that's when Michelle hopes to open her store. We will be sure to keep you informed.

Hats off to Don DeMichele, who was recently promoted to senior vice president of sales and communications for Ocean Spray Cranberries, Inc. That's one business that has to continue to thrive — what is a turkey without cranberries in some form?!

If you missed it , there is still time! Signups for Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football and cheerleading for the fall season will be Saturday, March 16, at the main entrance of Scituate High School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. or at Deer Hill School from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. (Boys and girls ages 7 to 13 are eligible to participate in three levels of competition based on age and weight.)

For information, call Joe Hughes, who will tell you about the football program (834-6504). For cheerleading info, contact Judy Pollard at 545-2259.

We congratulate Mark Whitman, a junior at Cohasset High School, who is a celebrity, especially this week. Mark auditioned for the All State Festival Chorus and scored 97 out of a possible 100 points. As a result, Mark will be part of a 250-voice choir that will perform in Danvers March 14 through 16 at the All State Festival.

Still on the subject of music, be sure that you mark Saturday, March 23, on your calendar right now. That is the date the Second Congregational Church will host a coffeehouse, featuring an evening of music and humor with folksinger Eric Kilburn. He is an extremely talented artist who has produced five albums, including his latest "Detours," which was nominated for a Boston Music Award for Outstanding Folk Album. Proceeds will benefit the Appalachia Service Project. A $5 donation will be accepted at the door. There will be a variety of crafts from Appalachia for sale as well. The time is 7 to 10 p.m. Go and enjoy yourselves!

There are so many people who are away this week, hopefully having wonderful weather and a super time doing what they love best. Let's hope they will call when they get home and fill us in on their holiday delights! Please do — we are waiting to hear from you!

Alice W. Badger

Summered in Sandy Cove

Alice Wetherbee Badger, 93, died Feb. 11 at The Arbors in Shelburne, Vt. after a long illness.

Mrs. Badger, the daughter of Winthrop and Alice (Clark) Wetherbee, was born in Boston and graduated from the Winsor School. She was a social worker before her marriage to Theodore Badger, a physician, who predeceased her in 1980. They lived in Chestnut Hill, Mass. and summered at Sandy Cove, Cohasset for more than 50 years, where Dr. Badger was an active participant in community affairs.

Boston antiquities, history, genealogy, gardening, conservation and birding were among Mrs. Badger's many interests. She was one of the oldest living members of the Massachusetts Audubon Society. She belonged to the New England Historical and Genealogical Society, Colonial Dames of America, Massachusetts Historical Society and the Society of Mayflower Descendants.

Pursuant to her interest in genealogy, she published a book in 1982 entitled "Four Ancestral Lines and Descendants of Erastus Beethoven and Fanny Babcock (Campbell) Badger and a monograph, "Some Descendants of the Early Welds Who Settled in the Boston Area."

In the book Mrs. Badger published, she describes the relationship of the family to the history of Minot's Light. She quoted from the diary of Dr. Badger's grandfather, Erastus Badger, in 1909: "April 16, 1851 was the high tide when Minot's Ledge Iron Frame light was swept away with the loss of two keepers. We lived at 24 Bridge Street and the water was so high it came into our kitchen and put out the Fire in our cooking stove. It was a terrible storm."

She writes further: "Later this hurricane was recorded as having the highest tide ever known for the City of Boston.

"E.B. Badger's company, Hicks and Badger, Coppersmiths and Sheet Metal Workers, worked on the rebuilding of the lighthouse at Minot's Ledge. (Mr. Badger's name was found on the copper sheathing of the lighthouse dome when it was repaired a few years ago.)

"Badger, who was 32 at the time, was the youngest of the group of workers whom he supervised. But he undertook to row them the mile and a half from the nearest point of land to the lighthouse each day, thereby wearing out the seat of his trousers!

"Erastus Badger recorded between 20 August and 15 November, 1860, 'Lighted the Lamp on Minot ledge light House for the first time. Cpt. B.S. Alexander US Engineer was there.' The lighthouse was officially lighted the evening of 15 November 1860, when the two keepers took charge."

In the '70s, Dr. and Mrs. Badger helped locate the original bell from the lighthouse that had been sold to a church in Bethel, Maine and now stands on Government Island in Cohasset.

Mrs. Badger was known for her wit and charm and an inimitable sense of humor, for her "green thumb" and for her outgoing nature.

She leaves two daughters, Martha B. Simpson of Bloomfield, Ct. and Ann B. Emery and her husband, Stanley, of South Burlington; six grandchildren and many nieces and nephews, including Priscilla Dewey Houghton of Cohasset.

Memorial gifts may be made to the Massachusetts Audubon Society, Lincoln, Mass.

A memorial service will be held April 20 in the Church of the Redeemer, Chestnut Hill.

Anna Lawrence

Lifelong resident

Anna J. (Faria) Lawrence, 90, of Cohasset, died March 9 at Logan Health Care Facility, Weymouth.

Mrs. Lawrence, a lifelong resident of Cohasset and a graduate of Cohasset High School, was a member of the Cohasset Senior Citizens.

She was the wife of the late Bernard Lawrence and leaves a sister, Christine Devereaux of Winthrop and many nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass was celebrated March 12 in St. Anthony's Church.

Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home,

Donations in Mrs. Lawrence's memory may be made to the charity of one's choice.

Half a loaf for North Cohasset

North Cohasset folk haven't needed much of a voice about water issues until now.

When the taps started to go dry in town due to Cohasset's antiquated system of pipes and pumps two summers ago — North Cohasset residents, who get Hingham water, happily stayed out of the news.

Now the 600 or so Cohasset homes in the north end of town are no longer on the sidelines.

Those homeowners are faced with soaring water rates because of improvements, including a new water plant on Main Street in Hingham, being installed by Mass. American Water Company which also supplies water to Hull.

Now, thanks to some outspoken citizens who demanded attention — our town and state officials have worked overtime in recent days to make sure the interests of North Cohasset are represented at the Department of Public Utilities hearings on the water rate hike.

Our state legislators, Mary Jeanette Murray and Bob Hedlund, implored the governor's office to intervene with DPU chiefs and, as Selectmen Peter Pratt says, "won half a loaf for the town."

Cohasset officials, who had been excluded from participation because they missed the filing date, may now submit written and oral statements but cannot ask questions.

Selectmen have authorized new town counsel to make an appearance at the hearing today and secure the town's right to file an appeal to this DPU ruling.

As Mr. Pratt explained this is not a simple issue. Hull is mad that its being made to help pay the extra costs incurred when, at the town of Hingham's request, Mass. American increased the cost of the project by moving the water plant from its original site. Initially our selectmen believed Cohasset could "piggy-back" its testimony onto Hingham's and Hull's, but now that may not serve the town's best interest.

There are clearly some unanswered questions.

Cohasset may feel the same as Hull does about the increased cost. And the North Cohasset distribution system, dating to the early part of this century, is one of the oldest around, according to Mr. Pratt, who says there should be some depreciation there.

Being embroiled in a myriad of other issues — such as Cohasset Heights, the proposed new school, sewer upgrades, and our own town water capitalization project — is no excuse for our officials to ignore this one.

We're glad the citizens of North Cohasset spoke up and brought the problem to the forefront . Although our elected officials had to play catch up, they have promised not to drop the ball on this matter again.

Sewer article is unfair to some

To the Editor:

I am responding to the Strait's Pond Sewer article on page 24 in the March 7 edition of the Cohasset Mariner. It is important for the residents of Cohasset to know that as currently proposed, the town will require all existing homes within the proposed sewering areas to be hooked up, regardless of the condition of their septic system.

In 1992, I was required to construct a septic system by the Town of Cohasset because my house had a failed cess-pool. The septic system was designed anticipating the adoption of Title V by the state. The cost of this system was $32,000 and there was no option to wait for a pending sewer.

In February, I was informed by Ted Guild, sewer commissioner, that my house was now included in the Straits Pond sewer area and that I will be forced to abandon my system, hire a contractor to remove the existing tank and install a pipe connection through ledge to the street and be subject to betterment charges of a yet undetermined amount. Current $16,000 estimates do not account for ledge, and will ultimately be assessed at the end of construction.

While the benefits of the proposed sewer system hold true for those properties with failed or antiquated systems, they do not hold true for those few properties with newly constructed systems. The goal of cleaning up town watersheds seems to be contradicted by a proposal to demolish these new systems while other failing systems in the same area remain without sewer options.

Please do not support a sewer proposal which forces abandonment of a few newly constructed private systems. A sewer commission which cannot address this inequity by exempting such systems should not be granted authority to assess unchecked betterment charges on its residents.

It's time to warm up your souls

To the Editor:

Being a transplanted Southerner, I am still learning how to conform to the New England way of life. After four years, I feel somewhat connected and yet certain experiences bring me back to my original Southern roots. My experience on a chilly January morning is a perfect example.

With my two babies in the back seat, both bundled and sleeping, we sat at a red light on the corner of Beechwood and 3A, when unfortunately my car stalled and refused to restart. With the temperature reading eight degrees and the babies asleep, I had no choice but to turn on my flashers, utilize my car phone, call AAA and a friend to pick us up. In the meantime, I was positively stunned to find car after car after car rudely honking, screeching their brakes and yelling out their windows at me. By the time I caught my frigid breath, I was horrified at the lack of cooperation for a woman obviously in distress in a stalled car, dangerously low temperatures and sleeping children in the back seat. As I sat there I counted 17 cars drive by, each one more annoyed than the other, using foul language, rolling their windows down, with one woman feeling compelled to get out of her car, knock on my window and ask me what I thought I was doing blocking traffic. When after 20 minutes a red Volvo station wagon pulled up beside me, I was hesitant to respond, but luckily my belief in human kindness was rekindled when she ask if she could help. (Thank you!)

As our winter drags on and freezes the ground, the puddles and reservoirs, I challenge you to not let it freeze your compassion for people. With the fast pace life of the Northeast, I challenge you to slow down, do something generous for someone or for your surroundings. The next time you see a car in distress, reach out and help, either by a nice gesture, a phone call or a wave. Don't turn into your current surroundings: cold, bitter and frigid. Think of the warmth of the summer, the majestic ocean, the breathtaking views from Cohasset and warm up your souls. In the South, we may be slow, but we are kind, compassionate and generous and would never let a mother with small children stay in a cold car on the side of a road for any length of time, much less give her grief.

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to the Question of the Week:

• Selectmen candidates: public records are just that [illegible]lic. What would you do to make sure that the press and local residents aren't stymied in their efforts for access to these documents?

Ronnie McMorris, selectman

An informed electorate makes good decisions. The ability of the public and the press to access documents is key to staying informed.

I don't know to what extent, if any, it is difficult for individuals to obtain information in Cohasset. If there are problems, I offer three suggestions to ease the flow of information:

• Because of the increasing complexity of town government, the Board of Selectmen and other town officials rely more on town counsel for guidelines defining a public document.

• Members of the Board of Selectmen should stay attuned to residents attending the meetings and watching at home who don't have information packets. Just a few statements on what's being considered can help the public better understand what's being discussed.

• All town officials should take on the responsibility of making sure residents are comfortable approaching them with their concerns.

As a member of the board, I will stress the importance of keeping residents informed by making sure documents in Town Hall are readily available. We're fortunate to have citizens who work hard to keep on top of the issues. Let's encourage participation, public debate and decision making in the public arena.

Nan Roth, selectman

Town records must be accessible to the public. State regulations clearly require that town officials make public documents available within 10 days of the date of request.

As selectman, I would work closely with the Executive Secretary to ensure that the town is in full compliance with these regulations. Logs with dates of the request and the status of fulfillment must be kept. Currently packets of materials for selectmen's meetings are provided to the press. I would make additional copies of materials available for the public at meetings.

Draft documents must be clearly marked to avoid misunderstandings or incorrect publicity about important issues under consideration. Legal documents involving ongoing litigation are sensitive and may be withheld upon legal opinion in accordance with the law.

As citizens, we benefit from full compliance with open disclosure requirements. We have the right to know what transpires in our town government. A well-informed electorate helps officials govern in a democratic manner.

Martha Gjesteby, selectman

The current Board of Selectmen has been criticized for unprofessional behavior. This usually refers to the time when some of my colleagues publicly criticized me for having made a document available to the press. They felt the document should remain secret and wanted to have me "censored." I thought the document should be public according to the open meeting law and I acted accordingly. History shows that when the matter was presented to the Secretary of State, it was ruled that both the meeting and the document were and should be public.

I mention this matter, not to reopen old problems but to show that I always have been dedicated to the open meeting law and the public's right to know. I intend to continue this practice to serve the people of Cohasset well.

• School committee candidates: the high school auditorium hasn't been refurbished since it was built in 1950, Supt. Stephen Hart told selectmen last week. In light of this and other deteriorating school facilities, do you think the school department has a long-range plan to cope with capital improvements? What contribution would you make to this effort?

Rick Shea, school committee

The School Committee has an appropriate plan that outlines the schools' long-range capital requirements. The challenges faced by the School Committee are to incorporate those requirements into the townwide capital plan, to communicate those plans to the town's residents and to finance that capital plan, while maintaining stability in the tax rate.

The financing of the town's capital needs is a complex task that will take a positive cooperative team effort among the town's boards and committees and creative new ideas. I will provide leadership in this effort by working with the Advisory Board, the Selectmen, the Town Accountant and with other town boards to prioritize capital improvements and devise a long-range financing plan.

The schools' capital plans and any capital spending warrant articles should be fully discussed prior to the annual Town Meeting. I have proposed the reinstatement of a "warrant review" meeting for this purpose.

In addition, the School Committee must seek innovative solutions. For capital improvements that reduce future operating costs, lease financing may be appropriate. For certain other school capital projects, alternative sources of funding should be sought to supplement town funds. While a school committee member, I will continue to work with the Cohasset Education Foundation to identify supplemental private funds.

Keith F. Knowles, school committee

During the last few months, the lack of both capital planning and the routine maintenance/improvement of our existing school facilities has become obvious. The report of the engineers hired by the School Facilities Committee and released last Fall expressed surprise at the lack of chemical treatment of the boilers in all three schools. This routine and inexpensive process inhibits corrosion and adds years to the life of a boiler, yet the school administration has seen fit to ignore this simple preventive maintenance procedure. Osgood School was allowed to deteriorate to the point that it became unusable, not through lack of funds, but through lack of attention.

At a recent School Committee meeting, those in attendance were informed that funds appropriated for maintenance and repair are often utilized for other more important educational purposes. To whit: money allocated for new windows at Osgood at least seven years ago was never expended for that purpose.

As a member of the school committee, I would insist on a specific capital and maintenance budget being submitted by each administrator and that each administrator be held accountable for maintaining the facilities put in their trust. I would also insist that a capital projection of at least three years be submitted and updated annually.

We should never again allow a school facility to deteriorate as Osgood has, nor should the taxpayer ever again be forced into the circumstances we have experienced during the last two months. Every dollar allocated for maintenance and improvements must be used for that purpose.

Owen O'Malley, school committee

If the school department has an adequate long-range plan to cope with capital improvements, it should have made it public several years ago. This action would have obviated much of the criticism of the new school proposal.

To have a long-range plan of capital improvements requires vision and courage. Unfortunately, men and women who possess these qualities either don't run for public office, or if they do run, don't get elected.

Apparently, many of us voters prefer short-term gains and gratification to long-term growth and development. The latter course requires sacrifice and honesty.

• Treasurer-collector candidates: it's a hassle getting billed quarterly for property taxes. Would you support returning to a semi-annual billing system? Why or why not?

Patricia Anne Walsh, treasurer-collector

Braintree, Marshfield, Quincy and Weymouth as well as Cohasset mail quarterly real estate tax bills four times per year. Hingham, Holbrook and Scituate mail quarterly bills two times a year, with two bills in the same envelope. Only Hull and Randolph, of neighboring communities, send real estate bills two times per year.

The reason treasurer-collectors are allowed under the law to bill more than once per year is that it evens out cash flows for the towns and saves money in not having to borrow on a short-term basis, which meant a substantial interest expense when real estate taxes were collected less frequently and it was necessary to borrow from banks to pay bills.

Moreover, mortgage lenders are required under state law to withhold real estate tax escrow payments for borrowers who put less than 30 percent down. The statute requires that lenders pay interest on these escrow accounts. One percent is the fairly standard arrangement. If the towns collect the money, they save the short-term borrowing at a higher percent, which would ultimately be a budget cost passed on to owners in higher taxes.

Several friends in towns where the bills are not mailed quarterly, but who receive two bills in the same envelope, have told me they have "misplaced" the second bill or "forgotten" to pay on time and been liable for interest payments to the town.

I would not change the Cohasset system unless a majority of all real estate taxpayers, after understanding short-term borrowing expenses, voted for a change.

Joe Buckley, treasurer-collector

To some of us, it certainly is a hassle being billed quarterly for our real estate tax bills. However, before I would support returning to semi-annual billing, I would want to study the cash flow of the town. By increasing the return on investments and stretching payment of bills, we may be able to change the payment schedule. However, it is most important to reduce borrowing by the town.

Quarterly payments affect people differently. People who make escrow payments with their mortgage payments are not bothered by either method. People who live on a fixed income may find quarterly payments more convenient.

I am glad this question came up, because for some time I have been concerned for another group of taxpayers. They are senior citizens living in Cohasset with very low monthly incomes ($700 to $1,100). If they are a couple, they may pay $440 a month for health insurance and their tax could be more than $200 monthly. They have great difficulty trying to save enough money to pay their real estate taxes. Even though they try to save some money every month, something will come up (like eating) and they will dip into the savings. When the tax bill comes, they really have to scramble to make payment. It would be nice if they could pay into an escrow account every month for their real estate tax payment.

Wigmore A. Pierson, treasurer-collector

I believe that the current quarterly billing system for property taxes should remain in place, pending a full review by the new Treasurer-Collector, the Advisory Committee and the Board of Selectmen.

Unless compelling reasons are brought forth in such a review, there are no immediately apparent reasons to make a change, especially since the quarterly collection of property taxes was adopted by the town only a few years ago.

Former Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley has said that the present quarterly system has reduced borrowing costs, improved cash flow and has been a factor in reducing delinquency rates of outstanding taxes due.

There are already too many issues causing alarm and distress among the citizens of Cohasset. Let the quarterly collection of property taxes remain in place for the time being.

Question of the Week:

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street or mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050. Or they may be FAXed to our Hingham office at 617-740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Noon on Tuesday. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses to the candidates must be brief — a 250 word limit. Articles which exceed the limit will be cut. So be specific and make every word count.

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is:

• For selectmen candidates: do you think it's time that Cohasset hired a town manager? Why or why not?

• For school committee candidates: what in your view is the chief benefit of the education reform act? The biggest detriment?

• For treasurer-collector candidates: the treasurer-collector's office is closed to the public on Wednesdays. If elected, would you support a change in that policy?

• For water commission candidates: do you think heavy residential water users should be charged a higher rate for water used in excess of what the average household uses?

• For sewer commission candidates: how has the sewer problem affected business in the village? Will restrictions be lifted when the upgraded sewer plant comes on line?

• For planning board candidates: how important is it for planning board members to understand the town's zoning by-laws?

• For health board candidates: Cohasset recycles about 38 percent of its trash, some towns do much better. What steps should the health board take to encourage more recycling?

Question of the Week

• Planning board candidates: other towns, like Hingham and Hanover, have a full-time planning administrator on staff. Is there a need for a position like this in Cohasset?

Terry Atherton, planning board

There is no question that the addition of a full-time planning administrator would be of some benefit to the town. However, the creation of a new, full-time position would also increase costs in a period when the budgets for most other town departments are being cut. Unless the need for such a new position can be clearly demonstrated, it just wouldn't make sense to burden the town with this additional expense.

While other towns such as Hingham and Hanover have established positions for full-time planning administrators, Cohasset differs from these other towns in several ways.

First, Cohasset is smaller. Hingham, for example, has a population nearly three times that of Cohasset. As a result, the scale of the planning function is also smaller.

Second, the amount of land available for new development is severely constrained by the extensive amount of ledge and wetlands areas that exist in Cohasset. As a result, only a minimal amount of new development is possible unless there is a major increase in sewer capacity.

Third, Cohasset has a very well established set of zoning by-laws that prescribe the requirements that must be met for site plan approval. The planning board's role is typically limited to making minor changes to these by-laws from time to time.

If in the future, planning activities are subject to more rigorous regulatory review, a full-time planning administrator may become a necessity. At the present time, however, it would be difficult to justify the added expense.

Mike Mullin, planning board

I do not believe Cohasset needs a full-time town planner at this time. Hingham and Hanover are both larger towns with more commercial and residential development.

As seen by the candidates in this year's election, our town has a great number of talented, caring individuals who are willing to donate their time and resources to aid the town in making intelligent, informed decisions. In light of the current issues and needs in town, it does not seem fiscally sound to spend additional dollars for a job that's already being done.

Creating a new position will not resolve the current issues. The town boards need to work more closely together — sharing information and resources — to solve the current challenges and prepare for future growth.

• Sewer commission candidates:how did Cohasset get into this fix with the state ordering it to correct its sewer problems in the first place?

Ted Guild, sewer commission

The Cohasset Wastewater Treatment Plant was one of the first secondary treatment plants in the Commonwealth. It was, therefore, somewhat surprising that in 1975 Cohasset received Citation No. 1, under the (then) recently enacted Massachusetts Clean Waters Act, long before a number of notorious harbor polluters such as Boston, Lynn and Gloucester.

Basically, Cohasset was cited for a series of minor permit violations. At that time, the town could have corrected those violations, but for whatever reason, the town did not. By late 1979, the state became impatient and took Cohasset to court, which ordered fines for Cohasset at a rate of $10,000 per day.

In early 1980, the state and town negotiated an "Agreement for Judgment" under which Cohasset agreed to build a large central sewer plant. Cohasset was also forced to pay a token fine of $10,000 (one day).

Subsequently, a series of Town Meetings over the years voted consistently not to implement this project, and in 1994, we were able to negotiate a new agreement with the state. This directs Cohasset to investigate three basic alternatives and to recommend how wastewater disposal should be handled for the entire town.

We have now reached the final stages of this investigation, and the sewer commissioners have submitted several warrant articles for the March 30 special Town Meeting to implement the first segment (the Straits Pond/Hull Street area). We expect to submit the final segment to the 1997 annual Town Meeting.

• Water commission candidates: what will you do to help restore public confidence in the water department after two summers of dry taps due to distribution problems?

John P. Rafferty, water commission

Public confidence in the Water Department has increased over the past year as the water commissioners initiated needed distribution system repairs. I would plan to formalize a better long-term capital planning process and would initiate a more pro-active communication and education program to give residents a better understanding of critical issues important to them.

The new Forest Avenue extension improved water quality and pressure in areas of North Cohasset significantly last summer. This summer, further improvements to core distribution mains will improve water service to a wider customer base. We must continue to replace or clean mains on an orderly basis to avoid future surprises and to minimize lost revenues from leakage. A well-communicated capital budget plan should help raise understanding of key financial issues and increase confidence in management.

Many residents lack a full understanding of existing water quality and of the relative cost of our water. We should increase efforts to educate residents on just how clean our water is and on how our water rates compare to other communities. Many residents think Cohasset water tastes poorly. There are reasons why the water does not taste good even though it is of high quality. We need to educate residents on the options they have to improve taste. We should also poll residents on issues that concern them and respond accordingly.

Public confidence is often increased with good communication.

Candidates Corner

McMorris plans coffees

Roseanne "Ronnie" McMorris, a candidate for the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, has three events scheduled to meet with voters in residents' home.

On Wednesday, March 20, at 9:30 a.m., a coffee will be held at the home of Victoria Hurley. This is an informal event, open to anyone who would like to meet or talk with the candidate.

Sue McNamara will host a coffee for neighbors and friends on Wednesday, March 20, from 4 to 6 p.m.

Edwin "Ned" Tebbetts is holding a coffee on Tuesday, March 26 at 8 p.m. for the candidate.

Anyone interested in attending any of these events may call 383-1219 or 383-9289.

Nan Roth plans coffees

The Committee to Elect Nan Roth to the Board of Selectmen will hold coffees every Sunday until Election Day. Anyone who would like to meet Roth and discuss her views on town government is welcome to attend and should call coffee chairmen Margie Steele (383-1319) or Ann Whelan (383-0034) for times and locations.

Candidates' night is slated

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's next scheduled meeting is its annual "Candidates' Night," which will be held Thursday, March 21, at 7 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church.

The program will begin promptly at 7 p.m. so as to allow all the candidates a chance to present themselves and also to field questions from the audience. In addition to the seated audience, there will also be a viewing audience present via a live airing on our local cable station.

Each candidate can expect to have up to five minutes to present their positions to the business community and to the community at large. Competitors for the same office will follow one another alphabetically. Once all of the presentations for a particular office have been made, the audience will be invited to ask specific questions of those candidates. A chamber member will moderate the answer and rebuttal time in an effort to provide an equal forum for each participant and to insure a timely progression to the next group of candidates.

Ulmer announces run for board of health

Dr. Kevin M. Ulmer of 30 Margin St. has announced his candidacy for the open seat on the board of health.

"Anyone who has attended the recent hearings on the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights Limited landfill or watched on channel 3 will recognize how technical these deliberations have become. My broad scientific background in biology, chemistry, physics and oceanographic sciences will add an important new dimension to the board at this critical time," cites Ulmer. "I have been actively opposed to both the expansion and the continuing operation of CHL for several years now. Based on my own scientific analysis, the landfill poses a very real threat to the public health for generations to come."

Ulmer will bring a very unique combination of scientific skills to the board. He received his B.A. with Highest Honors in both physics and biology from Williams College in 1972, graduating Magna Cum Laude and Phi Beta Kappa in only three years. Dr. Ulmer's Ph.D. was awarded in 1978 by the Joint Program in Biological Oceanography of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. His professional career in biotechnology started with his position as vice president for advanced technology with the Genex Corporation in Gaithersburg, Md., from 1979 to 1985. Genex was one of the original four genetic engineering firms. From 1985 to 1987, Dr. Ulmer served as the founding director of the Center for Advanced Research in Biotechnology, which is a joint center of the University of Maryland and the National Institute for Standards and Technology. In 1987, Dr. Ulmer returned to Cohasset to found SEQ, Ltd., the first of the genomics companies to evolve out of the Human Genome Project. He currently serves as executive vice-president and chief scientific officer for SEQ.

Dr. Ulmer is married with three children and also became a director of the Cohasset Education Foundation in 1995.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Osgood School should be replaced

To the Editor:

It was with great regret that I heard the outcome of the special town election, rejecting the proposal to replace the Osgood School and renovate the Deer Hill School. Just because the entire $13.4 million proposal was rejected, however, does not mean that this is a dead issue. On the contrary, I believe that now is the time for citizens on both sides of the school issue to work together to find a viable alternative to deal with our present situation of overcrowding and deteriorating facilities at the Osgood School. Now is the time to rally in support of replacing, NOT renovating, the Osgood School.

The Osgood School is of wood frame construction; it has an inadequate fire detection system; it has no sprinkler system. To say that this building is a tragedy waiting to happen is an understatement. I believe it is in no one's best interest to merely put a $2,100,000 "bandaid" on a building that is obsolete, as was recently proposed at a meeting of the School Committee. As taxpayers, we will not be reimbursed by the state for any renovations; in the future, when Osgood is inevitably replaced, the cost will be greater — we will be throwing good money after bad. Right now, the bond market is favorable; interest rates are low; and 60 percent state reimbursement is probable. Down the road, this favorable climate may not exist, in which case, the burden to us as taxpayers will be greater.

As a community, our first priority should be the education of our children, in a safe, structurally-sound and pleasant environment. As property owners and taxpayers, we must acknowledge that a sound educational system is one of the primary factors supporting our property values. It is in the best interest of our entire town to maintain our educational facilities. Had the original override proposal passed, the increased tax burden for the median house ($242,000) in Cohasset would have been $111. This is less that $10 per month; between $2 and $3 per week. A revised plan to replace only the Osgood School would cost even less.

At that price, can we, the citizens of Cohasset, honestly afford NOT to replace the Osgood School?

Replacing the Osgood School is not a possibility or even a probability; it is an inevitability. I urge you all, as concerned parents, citizens and taxpayers, to encourage our town leaders to readdress the issue of replacing the Osgood School. I believe that this is an alternative with which we can all live.

Thanks for spelling bee support

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to offer a very sincere thank you to all of the individuals and businesses who contributed to the enormous success of the Second Annual Cohasset Spelling Bee.

Because of the help from so many different people, the CEF was able to exceed their goal for this event, and raised more than $5,000. In addition to the businesses and individuals who sponsored an entire team, there were many people who gave whatever they were able toward a neighborhood team, and for this kind of support, we are deeply grateful. There is not enough space to list all of the people who helped make the evening so much fun and so successful, but to the spellers, judges, donors, and everyone else involved — many, many thanks.

Reynolds named most improved gymnast

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

There were no Mo Vaughns on this winter's Cohasset High gymnastics team.

As important as Vaughn was in helping lead the Boston Red Sox to the American League East title last season, every one of the Skipper gymnasts were just as important for their squad's third consecutive South Shore League title.

So, head coach Ruthann Ardizzoni decided she wasn't going to present an MVP award to any one girl on the squad at the annual award dinner at Kimball's By the Sea. With such a small team, losing a squad member for any length of time could have proved disastrous to Cohasset's quest for another league title.

Ardizzoni did, however, present several other awards to her squad members as a VCR played tapes highlighting the teams championship season.

Carolyn Pratt was honored as the most dedicated and won the perfect attendance award. Pratt didn't miss a single practice or meet. Kristen Reynolds was named the team's most improved gymnast and also the squad member displaying the most spirit and enthusiasm.

Balance and concentration earned Jodi Colwill and Tafana Fiore Beam Queen awards. The pair stayed on the balance beam in 10 of the team's 12 meets.

Ardizzoni, who announced last week she was stepping down after 11 years as the high school coach received gifts of flowers, a gift certificate to the Cafe Eleganza restaurant and a painting done by Fiore.

Mike Dunphy tunes baseball skills in Florida

Cohasset's Mike Dunphy is one of 26 top high school and prep school baseball players from Eastern Massachusetts who is working on getting in shape for the baseball season at the South Shore Baseball Club's annual Spring Baseball Camp in Fort Pierce, Fla.

The camp is held at the St. Lucie County Baseball Complex on Florida's south Atlantic coast, a major league-quality complex with five baseball fields, a practice infield, two batting cages, and three hitting screens. There is a minimum of three hours of workouts or outside games each day against Division I high school, prep school and junior college teams from north of the Mason Dixon line who share the St. Lucie facility. At least seven games, some under the lights, are played against these teams, which regularly draw college and professional scouts.

"This camp has proven to be an excellent venue for serious baseball players to tune up for their upcoming high school seasons," according to SSBC and Camp Director Frank Niles of Weymouth. A number of last year's seniors moved on to higher levels of competition. Mike Spinneli signed with the Boston Red Sox, while four others went on the Division I college programs. There are also five players from last year's roster who are made a return trip to Fort Pierce this year.

"Our goal is to prepare every youngster for the high school season which will get underway shortly after we return," says Niles. 'These are youngsters who take their baseball very seriously and the coaching and conditioning they receive during their stay in Florida will give them two legs up on their competition."

EXTRA POINTS/JOE REARDON

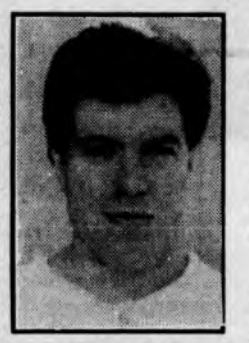
Cohasset was the best all along

Anyone who followed boys basketball in the South Shore League this season would have bet that if any team was going to win the Division 3 South Sectional title and advance to the EMass final it would be Scituate.

And who could blame them?

The Sailors finished the regular season with an undefeated record, a SSL title and No. 1 seed in the tourney. In the final SSL game between Scituate and defending champion Cohasset, the Sailors blew the Skippers away, winning by 20 points.

But the old theory that the regular season schedule goes out the window once the tournament starts proved to be true yet again.



Reardon

In their third meeting of the season in the semi-final round, Cohasset came up with a huge 57-56 win, bumping the Sailors from their focused course to the South title. The Skippers, who won the South Sectional championship last year, suddenly found themselves in position to win a second.

When the smoke cleared at UMass-Boston on Sunday, Ron Ford's crew was the South winner and off to the spanking-new FleetCenter for the EMass finals.

This was not supposed to be the year for Cohasset to be playing just six days before the start of the spring sports season. It was supposed to be Scituate's turne. The Skippers lost a whopping 10 seniors to graduation and were far from invincible. Not only did Scituate sweep Cohasset during the season, but the Skippers were on the down side of four other losses as well.

Even Ford had strong doubts the Skippers would make it all the way back to Causeway Street.

"I hoped they would," he said, "and they knew they could."

That was the key. No matter how well-

Skippers stalled after South title

after winning their second consecutive South title by holding off a surprising Rockland team, 59-53, at UMass-Boston.

Cohasset (19-7) was making its second EMass title appearance in a row after last year's classic triple-overtime defeat to Winthrop.

The Skippers' trailed by just four points, 30-26, at halftime as Jared Hardwick scored 16 of his 18 points in the first half. Cohasset stayed within six points of the North Sectional champs for the first 2:30 of the second half as Fred Howard, Ryan Bishop and Paul Michael-Quintin all collected buckets.

However, the Skippers had their problems stopping Winchester's fastbreak and the Sachems went on a 13-3 run for a 49-35 lead at 8:24. Cohasset's lone basket during the span was a three-pointer from Burke Davis, one of two he hit in the half.

Andy Murphy (19 points) was fouled on one of his countless drives in the lane. The shot was good and Murphy hit the free throw for a 39-32 lead. Davis drained his three-pointer, but Winchester scored its next 10 points on fastbreak drives. Murphy used some fancy moves inside, accounting for eight of the points.

Cohasset, though, began to make the game interesting by pulling within six points at 2:43 following a 13-4 surge. Davis and J.L. Williams connected on back-to-back three-pointers with 5:01 left. Williams was fouled and dropped in the free throw. Murphy hit a free-throw shot with Howard and Davis making good on all four of their shots from the line. Hardwick's lone basket at the half came on a bank shot to make it 57-51 with just under two minutes remaining in the game.

Hardwick's basket, though, was the last Cohasset would score. Winchester took advantage of Cohasset's fouls in the last 1:35 to go eight for 10 from the line. A Haig Goudzousian three-pointer in the final seconds capped the 11-0 Sachem run.

Ford was pleased with the Skippers' effort and their doggedness in getting back into the game after falling behind by more than 10 points.

"We had a good run going," Ford said. "Then they came down and hit those free throws. The played hard and could have quit. They're a young team and I think they learned a lot tonight. They could have folded (when) down 15 and they made a run at them.

"We have a young team with two seniors and I think we'll be back."

Cohasset had to contend with a surging Rockland High team on Sunday and couldn't afford to look ahead to a first visit to the FleetCenter.

Rockland High's basketball team had been adding exciting new chapters to its storybook postseason over the past week and a half by eliminating contender after contender after struggling into the tournament with a 10-10 record.

Cohasset, though, decided Rockland's fairy-tale campaign had gone on long enough and it was time to bring the Bulldogs back to reality.

"I thought we had one more miracle left in us, but time just ran out," said Rockland coach Tom Bailey. "That's the game. I've been around basketball long enough to know that."

The Bulldogs turned into giant killers once the regular season ended and the tournament began. They eliminated the second- and third-ranked squads of Greater New Bedford and Medfield, respectively, and also bumped Bishop Stang and Bellingham from the postseason.

Cohasset had ended top-ranked Scituate's run in the undefeated category by beating the Sailors in semifinal action last Wednesday. The victory was especially sweet after losing to Scituate twice during the regular season.

Rockland had to contend with Bishop's (19 points) inside game and a strong second half from Hardwick (19 points).

The Bulldogs were powerless in slowing the 6-foot-8 Bishop as he scored the Skippers' first eight points. Rockland hung close in the early going and took a brief 13-12 lead at 9:45 of the first half on a three-pointer by junior Jeff Gannon (18 points).

Cohasset answered with a 16-2 run, making it an 11-point contest with 1:09 left on a pair of free throws from Howard (four points).

Rockland had problems working the ball inside thanks due to numerous turnovers and sloppy passing. Peter Condon (21 points) began driving to the basket especially hard, allowing more room than the Bulldogs had seen earlier.

Condon wound up with 11 first-half points with the majority of them coming in the paint. The Bulldogs became more aggressive in the later stages of the opening half, but still trailed 31-22 at the intermission.

Ford wasn't comfortable with the lead against a team that had made a habit of coming back against its competitors all through the tourney.

"They're the toughest team to beat year in and year out," Ford said. "They're playing the same type of ball as when coach (Bob) Fisher was there.

"I told them at halftime this was Rockland and they weren't going to roll over for us. We were able to throw the punches back."

Rockland forward Chris Worden (11 points) hit a short jumper to open the second half. The Bulldogs then began to show flashes of what they had been doing since the end of the regular season. Worden's baseline drive spearheaded a 10-1 run, cutting Cohasset's lead to just two (36-34) with 9:07 remaining.

Davis scored his only basket of the game on a three-pointer, and just as quickly the Skippers connected on 10 of the next 12 points. Michael-Quintin (seven points) drained a big three-pointer with 5:53 left to play, giving Cohasset another 11-point lead, and added court space in the process.

"That was a big three," Ford said. "It opened the inside a little bit more for us."

Rockland refused to yield, however, and slowly narrowed the gap. Worden canned a three just before Gannon drew a foul while taking a shot on an inbounds pass from Tyrone Jefferson. He scored and hit the free throw Condon then made it a five-point game (53-48) on his drive through the lane at 2:25.

Cohasset failed to lengthen its lead on the Bulldogs in the next minute. It became a 53-50 contest with 1:29 remaining on Gannon's fancy move inside. He hit a three-pointer as well, but the Skippers cooly made good on four of six free throws. Hardwick then turned in a stunning two-handed dunk just before time ran out.

EXTRA POINTS

coached, seemingly prepared and motivated the Skippers were, if they didn't go on the court with confidence as part of their arsenal, they'd be gone by halftime.

Cohasset showed its true character by putting together a 13-4 surge against Winchester, refusing to let its FleetCenter premiere end without a fight. A tough fight.

Even with Ryan Bishop, the team's big low-post player, having an off night, the Skippers were hitting their three-point shots and free throws.

However, on this mild, late-winter afternoon, it was not to be for Cohasset. Winchester was the better team. The Sachems eventually wore the Skippers down to the point where they just couldn't overcome the deficit. The valiant effort was surely there. The desired result wasn't.

Cohasset, though, left the Fleet with something more important than a victory. The respect Ford had for his players multiplied 10-fold.

It's now very clear why the Skippers wound up back in the EMass finals. They were the team of all the squads in Division 3 which wanted it the most. Cohasset got a taste of the game last year against Winthrop and knew it wanted to return to face the best team the North had to offer.

Winchester's victory was not a hollow one. The Sachems beat the best team in the South Sectionals. And Cohasset knew it.

Sewer questions dominate subdivision hearing

28 houses proposed off Jerusalem Road

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Whether or not a proposed subdivision on the site of the old Curtis Estate can hook into the sewer system, dominated discussion during a planning board hearing last week.

Steven Cory of the Jerusalem Road Limited Partnership has submitted preliminary plans calling for 28 houses on 45 acres of land off Jerusalem Road, near Forest Ave., Surrey Drive and Windy Hill Road.

The hearing was continued until April 3 at 9 p.m.

Some seven years ago, a facility to care for Alzheimer's patients was turned down for the site because the land would not pass percolation tests. Therefore, the subdivision would likely require sewer service.

Cory's attorney, Charles Humphries, told the board that plans call for the houses to be connected to the sewer line once it is expanded in the Strait's Pond area.

However, in a memo to selectmen, Edward "Ted" Guild, chairman of the sewer commission, wrote that due to limited sewer capacity, only existing homes will be connected to the sewer.

Humphries said that Hull officials favor adding the development to the sewer line and that such a plan would help Cohasset residents, since sewer costs will be borne only by those households receiving service.

"Based on our knowledge of the available capacity, not only do we benefit the Town of Cohasset, but we have a right (to hook up.) Hull will welcome the flow. We cannot use sewer policy to zone the town."

Planning board member Robert Sturdy said the sewer question "really concerns me."

He said that he hoped that nothing got built which could cost the town or the buyers huge amounts of money if regulations change again in the future.

Sturdy suggested that if the houses are built without the possibility of a back-up system, such as a septic tank, and the Hull sewer plant is closed in the future, the new houses will be worthless.

"What does the next Title V look like?" Sturdy asked, adding that he hopes "the town cannot get stung and the people who buy the houses cannot get stung."

When several residents asked why the proposal was being considered if it could not be connected to the sewer line, planning board chairman Alfred Moore replied that plans can be approved even if there is no imminent chance of their being built.

Humphries stressed the preliminary nature of the plans.

"We do expect in the process there will be a lot of discussion," he said.

In order to conform with the natural features of the site, he said many of the lots will be long and narrow.

A 2,700 foot-long dead end street, with two cul de sacs will be built from Jerusalem Road.

Since Cohasset has a 1,500-foot limit for dead end streets because of safety reasons, the road would need a waiver.

A locked gate would provide emergency service only onto Black Rock Road, Humphries explained.

The plans also call for a sidewalk on only one side of the street, which would need a waiver, since Cohasset subdivision rules require sidewalks on both sides.

In addition, the proposed road would need a waiver since it would rise at an 8 percent grade in some spots. This would also need a waiver since the town mandates a grade of no more than six percent.

Along Jerusalem Road, the land lies in the residential B zoning district, 35,000 square-foot lots. The portion in the rear of the site is in the residential C district, which requires 60,000-square-foot lots.

An eight-inch water main would connect the houses to the town supply.

A number of residents spoke against the project, citing the danger of increased traffic and disruption to the environment, in addition to questions about sewage treatment.

Bill and Gina Chisholm said the proposed road would be 70-feet from their bedroom window and pointed out that there have been three traffic accidents in the area in the past 20 days.

They also reported that drainage in the area is poor, with catch basins filling up with rocks on a periodic basis.

Joseph McElroy said he is concerned about any blasting that may be required to build the subdivision and he also mentioned possible flooding as a result of destruction of wild areas.

John Semonian said that without sewage approval, the plans "put the cart before the horse."

Other residents said water draining onto Jerusalem Road frequently froze, creating hazardous driving conditions.

Andrea Buffin wondered about the loss of wildlife habitat. "It's like living in a zoo," she said.

The developer's water consultant, Dr. Jerome Carr, replied that the dense growth of briars in the area inhibited all but the smallest animals, but said he would look into the situation further.

Planning board consultant John Modzelewski cited a number of areas which should receive further discussion, including the grade and length of the road, drainage and the need to avoid draining large amounts of water onto private property.

Huge Potential Seen for Greenbush Area If Train Comes!!

This building at 50 Country Way in the Greenbush area of Scituate, currently for sale at $339,000, could be a major beneficiary of the proposed Greenbush restoration

SCITUATE - Now that the Weld Administration has given its final approval for the reconstruction of the Greenbush line there is renewed interest in commercial real estate in the vicinity of all proposed stations along that line, particularly in property near the terminus point in Greenbush. With thousands of commuters expected to use the Greenbush station as the starting point for their rail commute into Boston each day, the Greenbush locale is attracting the attention of investors and developers who see the need for expanded retail and office outlets there.

One site currently being offered for sale in Greenbush is the historic building at 50 Country Way which now houses several offices, a florist shop and three residential apartments. Situated on a 21,000 square foot lot with paved parking front and rear, the property includes an additional 22,000 square foot parcel in the rear which abuts the railroad right of way. This additional parcel would allow for a substantial expansion of the present building.

According to the owner, the current building produces an annual income of approximately $54,000 and has annual expenses, exclusive of mortgage payments, of approximately $17,000. The entire property is currently being offered for sale at $339,000. This listing agent is Chris Ford of Hallmark 100 Properties - 383-1888 (24 Hour Hotline 383-1888 ext. 2113).

Conway Realtors raise $4,000 for Community Center

Jack Conway & Company raised nearly $4,000 for the South Shore Community Center by donating the use of its offices, telephones, and staff during the center's recent phone-a-thon.

Realtors from Conway's Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Scituate offices volunteered their time to man the phones and raise money to support the center's programs.

"This was really a tremendous success," said Center director Nina Belsan. "To have so many people put in a full day's work and then cheerfully spend several hours on the phones for our center is really heartwarming."

Belsan, who noted that the center is funded entirely by private donations, emphasized how important contributions of time and services from the business community are to non-profit organizations such as the Community Center.

"Without such support from local businesses, many non-profits would cease to exist," she said. "These types of in-kind donations and fund-raising activities allow us to ave money from our budgets, money that can then be applied to our programs."

Company chairman Jack Conway said it was only natural for the Conway Company to assist an organization like the community center.

"We're a neighborhood business and the community center benefits our neighbors," he said. "By supporting the center, we're helping to provide our customers with some worthwhile educational and recreational services."

Arrests were up in February

Training programs are focus for department

Police Chief Brian Noonan said with 17 arrests, February was a "busy month for the police department."

Seven of the arrests were for outstanding warrants; four for minors in possession of alcohol; two for violations of restraining orders; and one each for breaking and entering, assault and battery on a police officer, assault and battery, operating under the influence of alcohol, and motor vehicle violations.

Noonan said there were no "breaking and enterings" reported in February and two of the three, that occurred in January, were cleared up by the February arrest.

The dispatch center received 85, 9-1-1 calls last month, Noonan said.

He noted that dispatchers received some specialized training last month from South Shore Hospital paramedic, Peggy Cass, who explained policies, procedures, and use of dispatching paramedics on medical aid incidents.

"The training consisted of some call-taking procedures, specifically caller interrogation as it relates to information needed by the paramedics, determining the need for Advanced Life Support, and incident-specific questioning," Noonan wrote in his monthly status report to selectmen.

Also covered was dispatch criteria, radio communication, and incident coordination, he said.

Two police officers also received specialized training in traffic enforcement at the new Braintree State Police Training Facility last month.

High-tech computer to come on line

Hard-wiring of the police department's $55,000 state-of-the-art computer system got underway this week.

Training of police and fire personnel, who will be responsible for developing and maintaining the data, will begin April 1, Police Chief Brian Noonan said.

The new computer system, approved by the special town meeting in November, will streamline the police and fire departments' outdated record-keeping system.

Last fall, Selectman Jane Goedecke said she found "a Byzantine paper trail required to meet legal requirements, the state has for reporting" after touring the police and fire departments' storage facilities.

A single arrest for operating under the influence, for example, requires a police officer to fill out 13 forms, a process that can take two hours.

Noonan said the computer system will do away with incident cards and a great deal of paper work. He said it will also facilitate compiling annual statistics on crime rates, a task that takes a great deal of time now.

Windy Hill residents riled over property taxes

Home values soar

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

While taxes have increased all over Cohasset following this year's revaluation, some residents of Windy Hill Road believe taxes are disproportionately high.

Seven residents of the neighborhood off Jerusalem Road in North Cohasset have applied for real estate tax abatements, according to assistant assessor Cheryl Pooler. All have been denied.

Pooler said that at 126, this year's town-wide revaluation actually brought in fewer abatement requests than the 250 average for other years following a revaluation.

The goal of the revaluation is for the assessed value of the property to accurately reflect market conditions, she said. In the case of Windy Hill Road, three houses there sold in 1993 and 1994 at prices noticeably higher than the previous assessments.

Specifically, she cited one home that had been assessed at $321,400 which was sold for $378,500 in 1993. In 1994, a house with an assessed value of $289,900 sold for $325,000. Also that year, a buyer paid $375,000 for a house that was assessed at $290,300.

However, Windy Hill Road residents have compared their valuations with those of other neighborhoods such as Fair Oaks Lane and Old Coach Road, which had more modest increases in valuations.

'I can't believe anything would go that much in one year.'

— Michael Lombardy, 27 Windy Hill Rd.

In a letter to his neighbors urging them to file for abatements, Windy Hill Road resident James Reilly said land values for his street are 25 per cent higher than land values on Old Coach Road and Fair Oaks Lane, which showed 8 per cent increases.

Another Windy Hill Road resident, Michael Lombardy, noted that the 24 per cent tax increase he faces this year is too high.

"I can't believe anything would go that much in one year," he said this week, adding, "I'd venture to say that other houses [in other neighborhoods] aren't taking the hit we're taking this year."

Lombardy said he filed for an abatement, which was denied because he missed the Jan. 28 deadline, due to incorrect information from a neighbor. He is now waiting for a response from the assessors to accept his application beyond the filing date because he made a "good faith" effort to apply in time.

Reilly also said in his letter that the tax increase for the Windy Hill Road homes is 15 per cent, or three times higher than the increase in the town budget.

But chairman of the board of assessors James Lagrotteria said one has nothing to do with the other.

"The valuation has nothing to do with the town budget," he said. The recent sales prices in the neighborhood "set the tone" for the valuations of the houses there.

The land valuations saw the largest increases, Lagrotteria said, because the land is a more valuable commodity.

"God aint gonna make any more land," he said, explaining that there is little land remaining in Cohasset that can be developed, which makes the presently developed land more valuable.

The lack of a sewer system in many areas, coupled with stricter regulations for septic systems, mean that anyone who wants to live in Cohasset is restricted to the currently available properties, he said.

Assistant assessor Pooler said the Windy Hill Road and the other neighborhoods named in comparison are not similar at all.

"There's no comparison with Fair Oaks," she said.

While Fair Oaks Lane is near the village and schools, Windy Hill Road is off Jerusalem Road and has water views. The two areas attract different buyers.

"People will pay more for those [waterview] locations," Pooler said, adding that this fact accounts for the higher valuations.

But Lombardy said that he could see the ocean, perhaps, from the roof of his house, and Straits Pond is barely visible.

For his year, Lombardy said, he probably has no recourse but to "write the check," but next year, he believes he will file for a tax abatement. In the meantime, he said, he will be paying careful attention to land values elsewhere in Cohasset.

Cable-TV talks to start

Service could expand under new law

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

Contracts for cable television service won't expire until 1999 in Cohasset and Hingham, but federal regulations allow negotiations to begin 36 months before the end of the pact.

This means the towns and the cable company can start talking now, and both sides have much to discuss.

Recent federal legislation has opened up the telecommunications markets so that cable television services will be allowed to provide telephone and internet access services, and telephone companies will be able to enter the cable television market.

Continental Cablevision itself is the subject of a recently announced intended purchase by USWest, one of the so-called 'baby bells' that was spun off from American Telephone & Telegraph in 1984.

Last month, Robert Hillman, chairman of the Cohasset cable television committee called the cable contract renewal process "frightening complicated." He asked Cohasset selectmen to consider hiring consultants to advise his committee as it bargains with Continental Cablevision.

As Hillman explained it recently, the telephone companies can move data through one form of technology, and cable companies do the same with different technology, but the coaxial cable used by the cable companies transmits more information and does it faster.

It is possible within the foreseeable future that a subscriber can have one company to provide all television, telephone, and internet services, he said.

Some of these additional services may be on the bargaining table during contract renewal negotiations.

In Hingham, cable television committee chairman James Morrison said Continental Cablevision could provide institutional network services that will link all town departments, but "it's never gotten off the ground."

Morrison called Hingham "a fairly affluent community," and guessed that 40 per cent of the households have a Macintosh or PC. Data services and institutional networks may be attractive services.

He would also like to see more television channels and equipment upgrades included under the terms of a new agreement.

J. Drew Horn, also a member of the Hingham cable television committee, would rather see greater flexibility for subscribers, who could chose the channels they want, and pay only for those. Rather

Town won't abandon ship

Water rate hike fight to proceed

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Under pressure from residents, selectmen agreed Monday to continue fighting a huge water increase facing North Cohasset residents receiving water from a private company.

Selectmen also agreed to look into the possibility of hooking the households into the Cohasset Water Co. system.

The Mass-American Water Co., located in Hingham, wants the state Department of Public Utilities (DPU), to approve a 164 percent water rate increase which would be charged to some 600 North Cohasset residents living in 220 households.

The increase is requested to pay for a new $39 million water plant under construction in Hingham.

New town counsel Paul DeRensis said the plant was expected to cost $14 million, but that complying with the Hingham Zoning Board of Appeals decision allowing it to be built, drove costs up. He also said that it appears that during construction, the company picked the most expensive methods.

"Expert witnesses will say that the plant is more expensive than it should have

This winter was one for the record books

By CHARLENE VANDINI
Cohasset Mariner

It's official: another record was broken two weeks ago when yet another snowstorm pushed the winter's total accumulation above the 100-inch mark.

Mariner weather observer Bob Skilling put the official snow accumulation, as measured at the weather station in Hingham, at 105.8 inches, easily surpassing the 95.1 inches that set a record only two winters ago.

Skilling also noted a new low-temperature record was set at the weather station on March 10 when the mercury dipped to zero for the first time ever in March.

Another record was also broken as Cohasset's snow plowing costs exceeded the amount spent the year of the previous record.

According to Highway Supt. Harold Litchfield, this winter his department spent more than $164,000 to sand, salt, and plow Cohasset's streets. With

Cohasset's Week

Selectmen table action on fire chief's contract

At the start of their meeting this week, selectmen agreed to table an agenda item labeled "take any action relative to fire chief's contract."

Selectman Chairman Merle Brown said that the contract with fire chief Roger Lincoln ends in November. However, a clause in the contract requires that either party indicate a desire to make changes six months in advance, by April 30.

Brown said the item would be discussed after the election.

Mosquito control vacancy

Although the weather is still cold, summer, with its attendant mosquitos, is just around the corner. The mosquito control committee is Cohasset's main defense against the disease-baring insects. One vacancy remains on the committee and anyone interested in helping is urged to contact the selectmen's office immediately.

New town report available

Featuring Janice Sargent's stunning photo of the Minot's Ledge Lighthouse fog bell on the cover, the 1995 town report is now available at the town clerk's office and the selectmen's room at town hall. The report contains vital records for the past year, lists the account of town meeting and contains the municipal budget. All committee, commissions and boards are also listed.

Henderson approves special town counsel

With legal costs surrounding the Cohasset Heights Landfill case skyrocketing, town counsel Richard Henderson reluctantly approved the hiring of a special counsel in the case.

In a March 4 letter to selectmen, Henderson wrote that he would approve attorney Kenneth Kimmell to represent the town at the landfill hearings now being held by the board of health.

However, Henderson wrote " . . . I did not feel that this appointment was either reasonable or necessary as, in my opinion, the town had access to sufficient professional advice to be adequately represented in the site assignment proceedings without the necessity of another special appointment."

Town administrator Greg Doyon recently told selectmen that the Cohasset Heights Landfill case is expected to cost some $244,000 in legal and engineering fees from November to June.

Selectmen plan to send the bills to the legislature and to state officials, but say they may have to borrow to pay the bills.

Fighting the privately-owned landfill has cost the town close to $500,000 in the past ten years.

Election polling hours set

For the local election Saturday, April 6, the polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Selectmen set the hours this week.

New school meetings set

There will be an open house from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday, March 23 at the Osgood School so interested citizens can tour the building. Members of the school facilities committee will be available to conduct tours.

There will be a public meeting to discuss the warrant article to construct a new elementary school to replace the Osgood School at 7:30 p.m., Wednesday, March 27 in the audio visual room of the junior/senior high school.

Rivers Bill is topic March 26

The public is invited to an open meeting of the Gulf Association to learn about the Rivers Bill on Tuesday, March 26, at 7:30 p.m. at the Lightkeepers' House.

The Rivers Bill has been before the Massachusetts Legislature for five years, and has been passed by the Senate. It still faces an uphill battle in the House.

The proposed Rivers Bill will affect everyone who owns property on or near the Gulf River, and it is vital that we all be informed of its implications.

Our speakers are Paul Burns, an environmental attorney on the staff of MASSPIRG, who will speak in favor of the bill. In opposition is Stephen Ryan, associate counsel for the Massachusetts Association of Realtors.

At this meeting both sides will be represented and there will be an opportunity to ask questions.

Refreshments will be served.

Bigger water rate hike possible

Accord Pond presents snag

By ALICE C. COYLE
Cohasset Mariner

As the town continues to fight for representation at the Massachusetts-American water rate hearings [illegible]e state Department of Public Utilities (DPU), which could lead to a tripling of North Cohasset rate payers' annual water bills, water company officials said this week a recent permitting glitch could cost customers even more.

At a press conference in the company's Hingham office, Mass-American President James Perry told town officials from Hingham and Hull that anticipated water use conditions limiting the amount of water that can be drawn from Accord Pond to be imposed by Hingham's Conservation Commission, will jeopardize the company's ability to deliver sufficient quantities of water for drinking and public safety purposes to its 10,500 customers in Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

Perry said the restrictions which are likely to be attached to a permit allowing the company to replace about 400-feet of a leaking, 90-year-old water main running through wetlands to a new booster station near Accord Pond, came as surprise to the company, which filed to replace the pipeline in February.

The company is concerned that the old pipe will not be able to withstand the increased water flow and pressure expected when the new treatment facility, which is under construction in Hingham, goes on-line in June.

Hingham Conservation Agent Pine Dubois, who is recommending the restrictions be imposed, has her own concerns, and said she made the company aware of them last summer when the commission approved the booster station project.

Dubois said taking more water from the pond (on average the company draws 500,000 gallons per day, but Perry said the company may need to take as much as 4 million gallons per day during summer dry spells) will greatly impact the wetlands and wildlife in and around the pond and throughout entire watershed basin. Company officials were told last summer that any plans to increase the amount of water taken from the pond would require separate permitting from local and state officials, Dubois said.

But Perry insisted that state Department of Environmental Protection water management restrictions which limit the company's average daily water use each year from all of its sources - including the pond to 3.51 million gallons, provides sufficient protection for the watershed.

If the restrictions are imposed, Perry said the company will be forced to launch a legal appeal for which customers will pay in higher water bills. Rate payers can also expect to foot the bill for any increased costs due to construction delays, Perry said.

Perry's statements drew harsh criticism from town officials in both Hingham and Hull who accused the company of poor planning and management.

Hingham's Conservation Commission is expected to take the issue up at its next meeting, Monday, March 25.

Permit fees increased

At the recommendation of building inspector Robert Eagan, selectmen this week raised fees charged for plumbing and gas inspections.

Residences will be charged $30 for an inspection of up to three fixtures, with a $7 charge for each additional fixture.

A re-inspection will cost $20, while a water heater or boiler inspection fee will be $25.

The town will charge $120 for a new house inspection.

Commercial sites will be charged $40 to for a plumbing inspection of up to three fixtures, with $10 for each additional fixture.

There will be a $30 re-inspection fee.

The town will charge $35 for water heater or water steam boiler inspection at a commercial site.

Warrants mailed

The financial news facing Cohasset is not all bad. Selectmen were pleased to learn that it cost half to mail the town meeting warrants than it did for the special town meeting in January.

Town administrator Gregory Doyon reported that in January it cost $700 to mail the warrants to residents, but that last week the mailing was organized by carrier route, reducing the work and costs of the post office.

Doyon also thanked the volunteers who helped with the mailing. He said the $14 lunch they were given more than paid off, since the volunteers did the extra work of organizing the warrants by carrier route.

Landfill lawyer finds fault

Sohier Street wells come under fire

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

The potential hazard to Cohasset's emergency water supply dominated last Thursday evening's and Friday morning's Board of Health hearing sessions on the proposed 27.5 acre expansion to the privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

Testifying for a second evening in support of the town's effort to block expansion, geologist Patrick Barosh continued to focus his attention on the path contaminated water from the landfill would flow after reaching fracture and fault lines in bedrock surrounding the Cohasset Heights area.

"Once the ground water reached bedrock it would tend to follow its (bedrock) surface, which would be northeast," Barosh explained.

This direction of flow would pose a threat to the two town wells on Sohier Street, he said. At present these wells are inactive, but according to Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) guidelines are classified as emergency backups to the town's water supply.

Barosh further stated that a fault line lies directly under these wells and that once escaping from landfill containment contaminated water could reach bedrock anywhere from "a couple of days to a few months" and be on its way to the well area.

CHL attorney Anton Moherke repeatedly assailed Barosh's authority to speak as an expert witness on the subject of potential water hazards, stating that Barosh's expertise was more in the field of fault and fracture analysis.

Robert Weimar, vice-president for the engineering firm of Camp, Dresser & McKee, in concurring with Barosh revealed that at certain points the ground water level in the landfill could be up to 40 feet higher than the bottom of the protected liner used for the containment of landfill debris.

It was his opinion that this fact alone made the site unsuitable for any expansion.

Friday morning's session started with geologist Peter Dillon, testifying for CHL, stating that water quality samples taken from the Sohier Street wells in 1994 showed possible contami-

Cool compromise reached for library

This week selectmen agreed to a plan to install air conditioning in phases at the Pratt library.

Sheila Evans, chairman of the library trustees, said that the staff offices on each floor of the library could be air conditioned for $8,000.

She said the fall special town meeting will be asked to approve air conditioning for the central portion and the wings.

Evans said the library staffers are the only town employees working indoors which do not have air conditioning. She said that because they work nine-hour shifts, the staff have been exhausted during the recent hot summers.

However, Evans said the trustees were happy to postpone the other work to help reduce the demands on the town's free cash.

Originally, the trustees wanted $50,000 to air condition the entire library. The figure will be amended to $8,000 on town meeting floor.

nants which would not meet current safety criteria and would have to be treated prior to any use. This, coupled with potential economic costs to the town in having to upgrade the wells, would, in his opinion, prohibit future development.

When asked by Moherke if the wells could ever be used as a general public drinking water supply, Dillon responded, "Definitely not."

Saying that water preservation is precious, Moherke exhibited a photograph of each of the Sohier Street wells in their present condition and asked former DEP official Brian Donahoe if he had ever seen a public water supply in worse-looking shape.

"Not really," Donahoe had to admit.

Cohasset Water Commission Chairman Fred Koed stated that while the wells in their current state leave a lot to be desired (one well is presently open to the elements and contains levels of harmful bacteria, and a fire last summer in the well area did serious damage) the town does have future plans to revamp the wells.

Koed said these plans were due in part to the droughts of recent years coupled with the town's continuing reliance on having to ask for backup water from the towns of Hingham and Scituate.

This session was to have been the last in the lengthy proceedings, with closing arguments being submitted in written form by all parties to alleviate any further hearing dates.

But, due to a sudden medical emergency in the family of CHL attorney Moherke, Hearing Officer John Shea was forced to adjourn the rest of the day's testimony. The final session has been rescheduled for this Saturday (Mar. 23) — exactly two months and 18 sessions from the initial opening of the Cohasset Heights expansion hearings.

Police charge selectmen with sex discrimination

By a unanimous vote, the police union has accused selectmen with discriminating against men when it requested to a civil service list from the state only containing females.

In February, selectmen decided to request an all-female civil service list from which to interview candidates to fill a vacancy in the department.

"We feel it's very highly discriminatory," officer Paul Laugelle told selectmen Monday night.

Selectman Peter Pratt disagreed. "Discrimination is a difficult term," he said and asked how requesting the all-female list is discriminatory.

"You eliminate all other candidates," Laugelle replied.

Selectman Michael Sullivan said that other lists of potential police officers which selectmen could have requested, such as local preference or veterans and families of those killed while serving in the military, are also discriminatory.

Laugelle replied that those lists are far less restrictive than the all-female list.

He said the local preference list contains the names of those living in the Cohasset area, not just in the town.

In making the all-female list, the state civil service commission must by-pass many men with higher scores in order to find enough women.

There are currently two females among Cohasset's 13 patrolmen, while all four sergeants are males.

Cable-TV talks to start, service could expand than more channels, he believes that most cable television subscribers are not using the 60 channels that are presently available, and should be allowed greater selectivity.

On two occasions, Horn said, Continental Cablevision has agreed to survey its Hingham subscribers to determine how many use the community access channels 3 and 53. However, the survey has not yet been done.

Horn would like to see "commercial" channels, such as shopping services, excluded from the billing formula.

He also said initial strategy sessions have been hampered by the regular presence of a Continental Cablevision representative who attends the committee's meetings.

Horn said he has reviewed the open meeting law, and believes the committee is prevented from going into executive session to discuss strategy.

Continental Cablevision general manager Richard Donahue said the company's representatives attend all meetings, "regardless of the contract situation." He added that a consultant hired by the City of Brockton advised the cable television committee there that excluding the cable representative "could taint the [contract renewal] process."

"It does put them in an odd position, I'll admit that," Donahue said.

But for the next contract, Hillman said he thinks the cable television committee should focus on the television service, rather than delving into additional services that Continental Cablevision can provide in the future. The next contract can be awarded for a maximum of 10 years, and when that contract approaches expiration, other services can be considered. He noted that at this time, the cable television committee's duties do not extend beyond television.

Horn also said Hingham should address television service at this point, adding that the committee's scope has not been broadened at this time to include other technologies. The cable television committee is an advisory body, reporting to the selectmen. However, if the selectmen determine these other services are of interest to a sizable number of residents, then the board can so instruct the committee.

Hillman said that the quarterly reports Continental Cablevision provides to his committee show few minor subscriber complaints, and those are resolved in a timely fashion. However, his concern for Cohasset's next contract is that the community has a deal that is "at least as good as other cities and towns in southeastern Massachusetts."

Continental Cablevision comes to the bargaining table with offers of more channels to its subscribers, Donahue said. Some with be "pay-per-view" services, while others will be included in the basic cable service. In addition, new "tiers" of service will be available, packaged, he said, by categories such as sports, movies, and children's programming.

With advances in technology, subscribers will eventually have access to close to 500 channels.

Selectmen pledge to fight water rate hike been," the attorney predicted.

"This increase is outrageous," resident Maria Plante wrote in a memo to selectmen.

During Monday night's meeting, Plante and other residents said the water company is slow to respond to repairs.

They also pointed out that senior citizens comprise a high percentage of the affected rate payers.

Selectmen told DeRensis to appeal a decision denying the town the right to speak at the hearing now underway on the rate increase.

The hearing officer in charge of the case denied the town's request to intervene in the hearings because Cohasset applied too late and claimed attorneys representing Hull and Hingham will in fact be speaking for Cohasset ratepayers as well.

DeRensis said there is a possibility that Hull's lawyer is claiming that Hull ratepayers will not benefit from the improvements and should therefore not have to pay for them. DeRensis said there is a possibility that the Hull residents could be shielded from the full rate increase.

But it is unclear if Cohasset ratepayers would be shielded if they do not have representation. He said the Cohasset residents "are kind of victims of the whole process."

DeRensis said it will cost the town $400 to appeal that decision to the full DPU board, but he was not optimistic that the hearing officer's decision would be overturned.

He did say the DPU would probably protect the rate payers.

"It's likely to work out alright," he said. "I can't guarantee that."

If the town does intervene in the case, it would cost an estimated $5,000 in legal costs, plus the cost of engineers to testify on the poor condition of the water pipes in Cohasset.

However, in the event that Cohasset is not allowed to intervene in the case, DeRensis will still have the opportunity to make a 20-minute presentation on the rate increase at the end of the hearing and to file a brief.

In addition, selectmen agreed that Cohasset should start looking at the possibility of connecting the 220 houses in North Cohasset.

DeRensis said that if the town took the water company property by eminent domain, it would have to pay the valued cost of the property, even if it is old.

The Town of Nantucket, which he represents, purchased a plant through eminent domain from the Mass.-American Water Co.

Selectman Chairman Merle Brown suggested it might be cheaper to simply lay new water mains connecting the area to the town water supply.

In addition, selectmen also told DeRensis that he should only attend those sessions of the DPU hearing that are necessary, in an attempt to hold down costs.

Brown said, "We have to have money some place. I don't know where we're going to get it."

Snow record broken

$45,000 budgeted for snow removal, the department was almost $120,000 "in the red."

By comparison, during the winter of 1993-94, the highway department spent $149,000, which was $105,000 over the budgeted amount.

Litchfield said the DPW used 2,581 tons of sand and 678 tons of salt.

Sand used in Cohasset was purchased from P. A. Landers Company of Marshfield which as the low-bidder to sell sand at $4.90 per ton. Continental Salt Company of Staten Island, New York sold road salt to Cohasset at $38 per ton.

Litchfield said he was very satisfied with Landers' service to the town, with prompt deliveries when the stockpile had be replenished during the winter.

"Landers was excellent," he said. "They were here right after we called them."

The end of the winter finds the highway department in reasonably good shape, given the amount of work that was required. Litchfield said there were a few minor breakdowns, and some equipment needs minor repairs, "but there's nothing major."

Litchfield reported that in 1995, the last sanding or plowing turned out to be March 17. The year before, the date was March 13.

Although spring arrived yesterday, there's always a chance that Mother Nature may add some more to the snow accumulation.

Skilling reports that spring snow is not entirely uncommon. According to weather station records, since 1980, there have been four significant spring snowfalls, most recently on March 23, 1994 when 4 inches of snow was recorded.

In addition, he said, there was 6-1/2 inches of snow on March 24, 1993, a little more than 7 inches on March 29 and 30 in 1984, and a "spring blizzard" on April 6 and 7, 1982 which produced a foot of snow to bury crocuses.

Police chief contract ok'ed

Monday night selectmen unanimously approved a new three-year contract, with a modest raise, for police Chief Brian Noonan.

The contract, which is effective from March 1 of this year, sets Noonan's salary at $54,000 for the first year. Starting March 1, 1997, the salary will be $55,500, rising to $56,500 for the third year of the contract.

For the previous year, Noonan earned just over $53,000.

Chris Golden is 'euphoric' about spelling bee!

Erin Sutherland, daughter of Sue and Ted Cox and Peggy and George Sutherland of East Harwich, has been named to the dean's list at UMass, Amherst for the fall semester. Erin is a senior majoring in history and education and will graduate in May.

While at UMass, she has continued teaching gymnastics at the college level during every semester since her freshman year. As a sister in the UMass chapter of the Delta Zeta sorority, Erin has been active in community service work and in helping the elderly in the Amherst community.

Erin and her friend Ali Welz are busy planning a spring break cruise to five Caribbean islands with Erin's aunt, Diane Williams. Sure looks like there will be a lot to talk about by the end of March. Don't forget to let us know all about your trip!

Norwich University informs us that John O'Leary, Jerusalem Road has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester for achieving a grade point average of 3.0 or higher. John is a member of the Class of 1999 with an undeclared bachelor of science major.

Christopher Golden is not only feeling euphoric these days, he knows how to spell it! That is the word that won him the chance to compete in the Patriot Ledger spelling bee on March 23. The bee will be held at Weymouth High School. (It is not open to the public, but we'll let you know about Christopher.) He is 13 years old and in grade 7 at Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School. Congrats to you, and we're all behind you, so let us know how you do.

Candice Buckley, the daughter of Lynn and Gerald Buckley, is one of nearly 100 first-year undergraduate women at Dartmouth who will undertake paid research internships for the winter and spring terms through the college's Women in Science Project. Candice will work with Dartmouth professors Xiahong Feng and Laura Conkey on tree rings and stable isotopes for climatic analysis in northern China. She will spend up to 10 hours a week in a lab, working closely with faculty members and their research teams.

We sure hope that Sam Esposito is feeling better after suffering a heart attack a few weeks ago. Everyone who knows Sam knows he won't be down for long. He is so strong and busy he'll say he doesn't have time to be sick! We all love you, Sam, and are counting the days until we see you "around town" again.

Louise G. Littlehale of the Cohasset Garden Club attended an orientation meeting March 14 at the Museum of Fine Arts to plan for the 20th annual 'Art in Bloom' festival of flowers and art April 30-May 2 at the museum. To celebrate flower design as an art form, arrangements by 70 New England garden clubs will interpret masterpieces throughout the museum's world famous collections at the festival. ❑

Congratulations go to Brooke C. Lombardy, a senior at Archbishop Williams High School, who made the honor roll for the second quarter.

Rik Tinory, owner of Tinory's Productions in our fair town, sure made the news last week as he so fondly remembered George Burns after his death. Tinory recorded some songs for George Burns when he came her to perform at the South Shore Music Circus. George even sent him an autographed picture of himself shortly before he passed away. It is nice that he has such good memories of such a popular and kind man.

John's paternal grandparent is Dorothy Demick of Pittsfield. Congratulations go to all of you!

Don't forget the Chamber of Commerce is holding its annual Candidates' Night this Thursday at 7 p.m. at Second Congregational Church. Candidates will get the chance to present themselves and field questions from the audience. In addition to the seated spectators, there will be a viewing audience present via a live airing on local cable television. With all the races this year, it should be an interesting evening. You can ask your questions of your favorite candidate! See you there.

As school begins after spring vacation, so do all the spring sports. Why not post a copy of the schedule where you can refer to it with ease, so that you can support our athletes!

Finally, here's hoping all of you who were away last week will call and fill us all in about your vacations. We would love to hear about them, especially if they involved warm, sunny weather!

Cohasset Village

We'll bet we have something in common: we love Cohasset.

The word "unique" really applies to this lovely outcropping of ledge with its mix of personality in everything from its home styles to its people.

But one part of town confounds us. The Village. It desperately needs a jolt of vitality to insure it will thrive and be a vibrant part of town.

Several village merchants, in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce, apparently agree and have put out the call to residents for advice on what can be done to perk up Cohasset's "downtown."

Empty storefronts like those at the former Colonial Pharmacy and Village Fare don't generate confidence that business is booming.

There is good news. Just two examples are The Red Lion Inn, which has new owners, and Hingham Institution for Savings, which had the confidence in Cohasset Village to come to town and, as an added bonus, beautifully renovate and restore the antique brick building it occupies.

The Village Renaissance Committee has also added the caring touch with upgrading the walkway between the parking lot and South Main Street among its other beautification efforts.

Hingham Square is bustling and Scituate Harbor is starting to flourish with new restaurants and other businesses headed for Front Street. While Cohasset Village is much smaller — that's no reason why it can't be a magnet for shoppers and an attractive place for businesses to open offices. What could be nicer than being sandwiched between our beautiful town common and the harbor, the way Cohasset Village is?

So merchants and the Chamber want to know what kind of businesses residents would like to see in the village, how the village can be marketed to other towns, and what can be done to make it more inviting.

A village committee meeting is slated for 5:30 p.m., Thursday, March 28 at French Memories. Interested town officials, citizens, and merchants are encouraged to attend.

Those who can't attend should send comments or suggestions to the Chamber of Commerce, PO Box 336, Cohasset or contact Dean Rizzo at 383-1994.

In the meantime, we should all try to support our village and town merchants by shopping in Cohasset whenever possible.

Town wants its money back

Dear Governor Weld:

The Cohasset Board of Selectmen were recently provided with an updated projection of costs associated with the landfill expansion site assignment application by Cohasset Heights Landfill, Ltd. We are disturbed to learn that the cost to the Town of Cohasset taxpayers for the January to June 30 time period will exceed $240,000, bringing the total FY1996 cost to an estimated $325,000.

The board hereby requests that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts reimburse the Town of Cohasset for these costs, because the site assignment procedure under the Solid Waste Act is an unfunded state mandate. In order to protect its interests, the town has had to engage one law firm to represent the Board of Health which is operating in a quasi-judicial capacity as well as a second firm to represent the interests of the town of Cohasset. In addition the town has had to hire environmental experts to challenge the findings of the proponent's engineers, so that we can be assured that the Town's water supply and wetlands are safeguarded. All of this is as a result of an unwieldy state-mandated permitting procedure. The proponent was required to file a $2,000 per acre application fee which does not come close to defraying the town's cost.

The board wishes to also remind you of the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs' deliberate exclusion of the C.H.L. and Rockland Landfill Facility from its landfill moratorium as well as the failure of the Department of Environmental Protection to aggressively enforce its regulations on a current landfill facility which is damaging the environment. Had each of these state agencies been diligent in pursuing its goal of protecting the environment, perhaps the town would not have had to incur this large expenditure.

We ask that you join in supporting our request for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to reimburse the Town of Cohasset for these expenses.

Local students need your help

To the Editor:

April 25, 1995, 50 students and five teachers from Cohasset High School participated in a town-wide cleanup of three sites that were in danger of becoming breeding grounds for mosquitoes.

The sites were James Brook, Sanctuary Pond and a tidal creek off of Border street. This removal of debris freed water from the dams of trash that had held it back for so long. Included in the piles blocking these waters were tires, telephone poles, and other very interesting natural and human generated trash. By the end of a six-hour day the waters at all these spots were flowing again, thanks to all the hard-working volunteers.

The experience was great fun and extremely gratifying. This year on April 23, the students of Cohasset High would like to carry out the second annual National Day of Service. This day has been designated by the Massachusetts National and Community Service Commission as a day when residents of towns all over can take part in cleanups such as this one.

This repeat of last year's service, however, would be even better if you would join us in the removal of debris from these sites. If you are interested in joining the students this year or are able to donate tools (rakes, picks, shovels, even boots and gloves: all of these are needed and would be greatly appreciated), then please call Jack Buckley at Cohasset High School (383-6100). Thank you very much for your interest and support, we hope to see you on April 23!

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to the Question of the Week:

• Selectmen: do you think it's time that Cohasset hired a town manager? Why or why not?

Nan Roth, selectman

The issue of whether Cohasset needs a town manager is complex. The town needs a stronger, more effective planning process which will involve all departments in analyzing assets and services, projecting needs and combining this information into a comprehensive financial and asset management plan.

Funnelling all information and authority through a town manager would be an effective way to control such a process and would provide a single locus of responsibility and authority in town. Yet, a town manager form of government is only as good as the manager hired. All power and control for day-to-day activities would be held by one person, good or bad.

The change to a town manager system of government is certainly one that could be explored through a Charter Commission process. However, it should be possible to operate our town more effectively using our present system.

The selectmen need to bring our various departments together, to encourage them to communicate fully and frequently with each other and the public. In facing our large number of capital and maintenance projects, town activities must be well-planned, financed and coordinated.

Martha Gjesteby, selectman

The question on whether or not Cohasset is ready for a town manager has again been raised. I am definitely in favor of a change, but I would like to offer some of the pros and cons. These could be helpful if citizens want to delve further into the matter.

These are some of the pros of having a town manager:

• As managers do the hiring and firing, it could take "politics" out of the process.

• A town manager would be a professional with intimate knowledge of federal and state law as well as town bylaws.

• A town manager would also be familiar with available grants as well as having the knowledge of how to write grant applications.

• The saying is "that a more efficient operation of the government by a town manager should at least create enough savings to pay his salary."

• A good town manager should be instrumental in creating better communications between the selectmen and the public as well as with other departments.

Here are some of the possible negatives of having a town manager:

• There could be too much power concentrated with one person.

• The selectmen will be less involved in the day-to-day operation of the town. This includes contract negotiations with town employees.

If we should want to make a change, Town Meeting would have to vote to make a petition to the Massachusetts General Court. This is covered by Mass. General Law 41 section 23A. We would not need to create a charter to accomplish this purpose.

Ronnie McMorris, selectman

Cohasset recently changed the title of executive secretary to town administrator in order to more accurately reflect the job being performed. I favor taking the next step and making the position a town manager to meet the present needs of the town.

Cohasset's proposed operating budget for fiscal year 1997 is almost $17 million. We face major capital proposals from the board of health, sewer commission and school department. Given the size of the budget and the number of major projects, the selectmen need to play a greater role in developing an overall plan for the town. A multi-year financial play that includes goals, priorities and timetables can be developed by working with residents and the various departments. A professional town manager with a background in public administration or business administration would help us achieve that goal.

The selectmen and residents would remain responsible for policymaking. But a town manager would have clearer authority than a town administrator and greater ability to coordinate the work of town boards. The actual management of the town government would move from a volunteer board to a trained professional.

In Hull, the town manager prepares the budget and is drafting the town's first five-year capital plan, which will link declining debt to the phasing in of future capital projects. Cohasset needs this kind of coordination and planning.

Throughout my campaign for selectman, I have stressed the need to focus on management and planning and to establish priorities and timetables. Cohasset has already moved toward centralized management.

• School committee: what in your view is the chief benefit of the education reform act? The biggest detriment?

Owen O'Malley, school committee

In my view, there is no benefit in the Education Reform Act of 1993. It represents a pure power grab on the part of the state. One of the act's detriments is that it grants to local governing boards the right to abrogate legally elected school committees.

Keith F. Knowles, school committee

The chief benefit of the Education Reform Act has been the opening up of the educational process. Historically, education in Massachusetts has been controlled by the teachers' union and professional educators. Parents and taxpayers had only a limited say in the process. The Reform Act has brought about three new ways in which the public can control the educational destiny of their children.

First, charter schools owe their existence to their ability to employ individuals who are experts in their field(s), rather than only certified teachers. Second, school councils created by the Reform Act give citizens the opportunity to participate directly in decisions made by each school in the district. Finally, the development of comprehensive evaluations for both teachers and administrators will eventually allow our school system to prune away dead wood. The implementation of teacher competency testing will ensure that we are entrusting the education of our children to only the most qualified individuals.

The primary drawback of the act is the difficult and traumatic transition period it has brought about. As teachers, administrators and school committees grapple with new financial restrictions and requirements, budgets will need to be realigned. Curriculum changes brought about by state standards will create the need to realign teaching staffs and course requirements. The loss of direct personnel authority by the school committee makes the roles of superintendent and principals even more critical. These drawbacks aside, each of these adjustments is a small price to pay for what should be a very positive end result.

Rick Shea, school committee

I believe the chief benefit of the state's Education Reform Act is its evaluation requirement. In business, you cannot improve what you cannot measure. The same is true in education. Under education reform, students will be evaluated against core curriculum standards and must demonstrate competency to graduate from high school. Teachers and administrators will also be required to meet measurable performance standards. The School Committee will have an important role in this process by setting performance standard policies and approving school improvement plans.

The biggest detriment of the Education Reform Act is that it mandates expanded responsibilities for school districts without providing additional state funds.

Implementing the Education Reform Act will be a challenge for the School Committee, but one which will provide an opportunity for positive changes in the management of the Cohasset schools.

• Treasurer-collector: the treasurer-collector's office is closed to the public on Wednesdays. If elected, would you support a change in that policy?

Wigmore A. Pierson, treasurer-collector

The office of treasurer-collector is now shorthanded, with Sally Lincoln recovering from hip surgery and the newly elected treasurer-collector needing time to settle in. This is not the time to expand office hours.

However, during the week when quarterly property tax payments or excise taxes are due, it may well serve the public interest to have the office open on certain Wednesdays.

Patricia Anne Walsh, treasurer-collector

One rainy Friday evening, March 15, I visited Sally Lincoln at Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital as promised in one of our telephone conversations. Her good news was that she would be going home in a few days.

Sally worked for many years as assistant treasurer before her accident. She was esteemed for always being cheerful and accommodating while counting and receipting departmental "turnovers" of money and checks, although frequently interrupted by the telephone, explaining insurance and retirement benefits to retired town employees.

Former Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley requested closing the office on Wednesdays to permit employees to catch up on their workload and post receipts so they could concentrate in relative peace and quiet. It can be difficult to balance with constant phone calls and a stream of people wanting to be waited on. As the employee most familiar with working conditions, I asked Sally her reaction to the Mariner's question.

She said, as I had also observed, they had often waited on citizens on Wednesdays. Residents sometimes ignored the "Closed Wednesday" sign on the window, opened the door, walked into the office and requested and received assistance.

Sally knew, from keeping in touch with the office by telephone, that last Wednesday, March 13, Linda was out of the building taking a computer course, and Nancy was catching up on posting the January receipts in the ledger.

Sally's recommendation, with which I concur, is that since the part-time employee has been additionally cut from the budget proposed for next year in the Town Meeting warrant, the office remain "closed" on Wednesdays.

Joe Buckley, treasurer-collector

If elected Treasurer-Collector, I will run the office like a business. The taxpayers will be the customers and the office, as far as possible, will be run for their convenience.

However, to say I would open the office on Wednesday at this time would not be good business sense. In every action we take, the cost to the town and the effect on the tax rate must be foremost in our minds.

Taxpayers can save themselves time and help hold down administration costs by mailing their payments.

Question of the Week:

Each week, the Cohasset Mariner will pose a question to the candidates. Responses to the question may be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street or mailed to the Cohasset Mariner, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield 02050. Or they may be FAXed to our Hingham office at 617-740-8955. All responses must be submitted by Noon on Tuesday. There will be no exceptions to this deadline.

Responses to the candidates must be brief — a 250 word limit. Articles which exceed the limit will be cut. So be specific and make every word count.

If you have any questions about this election policy, please call editor Mary Ford at 749-0031.

The Question of the Week is:

• For selectmen candidates: what is your position on restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad? Why?

• For school committee candidates: why does the school budget have line-item autonomy at town meeting? Should that be changed?

• For treasurer-collector candidates: what is the town's bond rating? Why is it important? Can it be improved?

• For water commission candidates: Cohasset officials, unlike those in many other South Shore towns, have said the town's water problems are related to distribution and not supply. If that's the case, is there a need for residents to practice water conservation?

• For sewer commission candidates: could Cohasset save some money by buying into the proposed pumping station in the west corner area of Hingham rather than using the North Cohasset fire station site?

• For planning board candidates: will Cohasset's part of Route 3A look like Route 53 in Hanover in a few years? What can the planning board do to prevent that?

Question of the Week

• Planning board: how important is it for planning board members to understand the town's zoning by-laws?

Mike Mullin, planning board

Of course Planning Board members should have a good understanding of Cohasset's zoning laws and their application. It's the job of the Planning Board to ensure that the zoning laws are enforced.

But a solid understanding of the zoning laws is not enough. A good planning board candidate — or any town candidate — must possess additional intangible qualities:

• Courage — the willingness to voice views and opinions that may not be the most popular.

• Common sense — an underrated value that is the key to effective town government — an ability to anticipate both the short- and long-term effects of each decision made by the board.

• Altruism — running because you believe you can help Cohasset, not to gain media exposure or additional linage on your resume.

I have studied, and have a good understanding of, Cohasset's zoning laws. What I don't know yet, I'm willing to put the time into learning. More importantly, I'm running for the right reason — a true desire to protect Cohasset's size and uniqueness.

Terry Atherton, planning board

Since the primary role of the planning board is to review development plans to insure that they conform to the town's zoning bylaws, an understanding of these bylaws on the part of the board's members is essential.

As with any other set of rules and regulations, these bylaws are often subject to interpretation.

In addition, under certain circumstances, it may be in the town's best interests for the board to recommend that variances be granted for certain non-conforming aspects of a particular site plan. Because of this, the board member's knowledge of the zoning bylaws must go far beyond just the wording. To make effective decisions, board members must also have an understanding of why each of the zoning bylaws was written and how they have been interpreted in the past.

• Sewer commission: how has the sewer problem affected business in the village? Will restrictions be lifted when the upgraded sewer plant comes on line?

Ted Guild, sewer commission

The sewer moratorium has had a restricting impact on the Village. For this reason, in recent years, the Sewer Commission has received important assistance from the Chamber of Commerce. This led directly to the renegotiation of the town's Agreement for Judgment with the Commonwealth and to the present sewer expansion program.

As noted in last week's column, the sewer commissioners expect to submit the final segment of the program (the Village and central Cohasset) to the 1997 annual Town Meeting.

Once construction has been completed (probable date is late 1999), the sewer ban will be lifted, and there will be no further special state-imposed sewer restrictions on the Village area

• Water commission: do you think heavy residential water users should be charged a higher rate for water used in excess of what the average household uses?

Richard Muncey, water commission

Every Cohasset household is different. Therefore it is difficult to figure an average residential water usage.

I feel that everyone should be charged the same residential water rate regardless of the amount of water consumed. If one household uses 2,000 cubic feet with five household members, and another uses 5,000 cubic feet with the same number of residents, they will pay for the amount of water used. One water bill will obviously be higher than the other.

With the new project of remetering the entire town with outside readers, every home will now have an accurate reading of its water consumption. This will increase revenue.

As a commissioner, I plan to enforce a stricter penalty on water users who violate any water ban the town may impose.

With the addition of new mains and rehabilitation of the water system planned again for this summer, the consumption will go up. More people will be using more water because of better water pressure. This again will increase revenue.

The Board of Water Commissioners is currently in the middle of a new rate study. This will give the board a better knowledge and understanding of water rates and where they should go.

John Rafferty, water commission

This is an excellent question and a topic getting more attention in the water industry. The Cohasset Water Commission is reviewing this issue currently.

Yes, I think residents who consume above average volumes should pay more. Heavier use requires larger water mains and greater plant capacity. The larger mains are more expensive, and higher volume usage increases operating costs. As more customers install "thirsty" automatic sprinklers, one can argue that they should pay a higher step-up rate for consumption over the average. An increasing rate structure also helps water conservation by making "excess" use more expensive.

Roughly 22 percent of water utilities nationally have inverted (higher volume, higher price) rate structures, 37 percent have uniform structures (higher volume, constant price) and 38 percent have declining structures (higher volume, lower price). However, use of the inverted rate structure is increasing as the cost of securing, treating and distributing potable water rises.

In Cohasset, we have a uniform residential rate structure comprised of a quarterly $25.74 fixed charge plus a variable charge equal to $3.80 per 100 cubic feet. Approximately 60 percent of the customer base uses less than 2,000 cubic feet of water per quarter. Only 32 customers have larger meters (over 5/8-inch) for higher volume usage.

Water rates in Cohasset remain high for the average customer. However, by adopting an increasing rate structure with a step-up rate above the average usage level, we should get a more appropriate cost distribution and possibly a slight decrease in average rates.

Nan Roth plans coffees

The Committee to Elect Nan Roth to the Board of Selectmen will hold coffees every Sunday until Election Day. Anyone who would like to meet Roth and discuss her views on town government is welcome to attend and should call coffee chairmen Margie Steele (383-1319) or Ann Whelan (383-0034) for times and locations.

Meet the candidates tonight

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce's next scheduled meeting is its annual "Candidates' Night," which will be held Thursday, March 21, at 7 p.m., at the Second Congregational Church.

The program will begin promptly at 7 p.m. so as to allow all the candidates a chance to present themselves and also to field questions from the audience. In addition to the seated audience, there will also be a viewing audience present via a live airing on our local cable station.

Each candidate can expect to have up to five minutes to present their positions to the business community and to the community at large. Competitors for the same office will follow one another alphabetically. Once all of the presentations for a particular office have been made, the audience will be invited to ask specific questions of those candidates. A chamber member will moderate the answer and rebuttal time in an effort to provide an equal forum for each participant and to insure a timely progression to the next group of candidates.

SAFE presents candidates night

SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion) will present a Meet the Candidates Evening on Thursday, March 28, at 8 p.m. in the Bancroft Gallery of South Shore Art Center.

Candidates for the board of selectmen, board of health and water commission will make brief presentations and answer questions from the audience. Coffee, dessert and informal discussions with individual candidates will follow the presentations.

Election supper to be held

The Beechwood Congregational Church is holding an Election Supper on Thursday, March 28, at 6:30 p.m. The supper has been a church tradition for more than 75 years. Candidates are welcome to come early to chat with constituents in a relaxed atmosphere, with each candidate introduced before dinner is served.

A family-style roast beef dinner, beverage and dessert will be featured. The public is invited to attend. Tickets are $6.99 for adults and $3.50 for children. To make reservations, call 383-1298.

Cohasset Mariner election policy

The Cohasset Mariner will not accept letters from candidates or letters endorsing candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues up until the March 28 issue before the election.

Candidates are encouraged to advertise their campaigns in the Mariner. For information about deadlines and costs for political advertisements, please contact Judy McCaffery Perry at 1-800-649-6661.

Capital budget planning failed

To the Editor:

Once again let me say that I recognize the need for replacing the abandoned Osgood School. The timing is unfortunate. In 1973, when the school population was 1,984 pupils, a similar effort had to be abandoned for lack of adequate sewerage. (There were 1,218 pupils in 1995.) Little has been heard about it until now. Meanwhile the town has obligated itself for new playing fields, the Hagerty property, and a new DPW garage, besides facing the state mandated sewer projects and landfill capping.

There is no backing off from these obligations. With the prospect of paying off the whole debt service on the school for up to five years until the state picks up on its agreed-upon share, the whole package will mean an increase in our taxes of 36 percent — it would have exceeded 38 percent under the original school proposal. Somehow the capital budget planning has failed; our priorities might have been differently ordered.

Postponing the Deer Hill improvements is certainly a help; I don't understand why the town was not given that option in the first place, nor do I understand why, having put that aside, the School Committee saw fit to add $140,000 to renovate the gym and auditorium this coming year when they knew that the town was trying to cope with an already heavy tax burden.

This whole thing must have been apparent to the school people for a long time. Why have they waited so long and then presented as an emergency? We were shown a movie graphically displaying neglected maintenance and housekeeping at the Osgood School along with the implication that the building is structurally unsound.

Yes, we need a new school, but I think our townspeople can make a responsible decision without this sort of hyperbole. After all, it is their responsibility.

School reimbursement guaranteed

To the Editor:

The School Facilities Committee would like to clarify some issues that have arisen relative to state support for the new elementary school building project.

Provided that our proposal is submitted by June 1, 1996, Cohasset will be guaranteed 60 percent reimbursement for the total cost of the project. Since the School Building Assistance Act was established in 1948 there has never been a time when the State of Massachusetts has failed to fund an approved project.

There has also been a concern raised about the possible curtailment of funding during the bond pay back period. When the Commonwealth makes its first reimbursement payment, the total amount required to repay the reimbursement of the bond issue has been guaranteed by the state. There is no possibility that the reimbursement would stop until the state's full payment is made.

Anyone with any further questions should call me or the superintendent of schools.

Bob Beggan, Chairman for the School Facilities Committee

Coffeehouse to feature Kilburn

The Second Congregational Church will host a Coffeehouse on Saturday, March 23, from 7 to 10 p.m., featuring an evening of music and humor with award-winning folk singer Eric Kilburn. He will perform original songs in a show spiced with funny stories and unpredictably zany punches.

A $5 donation will be accepted at the door. Refreshments and a variety of crafts from Appalachia will be available for sale. All proceeds will benefit the 1996 Appalachia Service Project this summer, when 84 Cohasset High School students and adult advisers will travel to Appalachia to repair homes for needy families.

Support for new school urged

To the Editor:

This time the Cohasset School Facilities Committee needs and deserves support.

I was chairman of the Advisory Committee in the early 1970s when essentially the same issue of building a new lower school came before the town. The Advisory Committee was unanimously opposed to that project mainly due to the fact that population surveys, at that time, predicted a significant decline in the school enrollment over the next five years. The Osgood School was then less than 50 years old and we believed the expenditure was not justified.

This time around, however, the situation is significantly different. The Osgood School building is some 25 years older, and wear and tear plus building code requirements require major changes. Also we are now experiencing a growth in the school population. We either have to make significant renovations to the existing building with no state reimbursement, or build new with 60 percent state aid. To renovate is a band-aid approach that will likely cost the town as much and maybe more than a new facility (with the state reimbursement). We all know that updating an old structure is guaranteed to uncover unforeseen problems that inevitably result in added unexpected costs that can be very significant. Let's not be penny-wise and pound foolish.

I believe that the new school is now justified and should be supported by the voters of Cohasset.

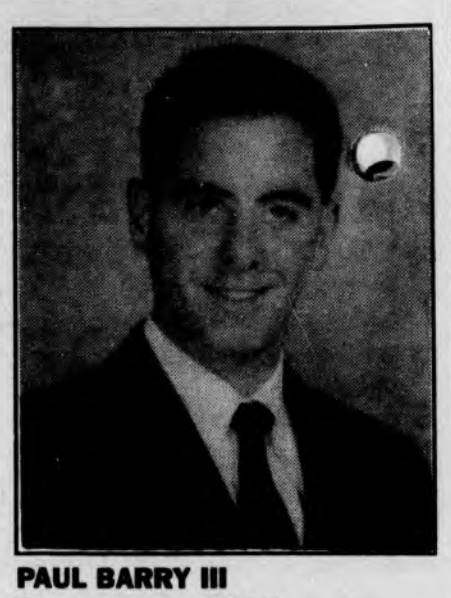
Barry Waste Services acquires Daly Disposal



PAUL BARRY III
Company president

Barry Waste Services & Recycling Company, Inc., has acquired Daly Disposal of Cohasset. Terms of the deal were not name public by president Paul Barry III, but he emphasized the strategic importance of the company's 300 new clients.

Chamber, merchants seek advice about future of Cohasset Village

Several Cohasset Village merchants, in cooperation with the Chamber of Commerce, are looking for advice from residents. Cohasset Village offers a unique atmosphere, but there are several concerns facing the village which are critical to its survival.

What kind of businesses would the people of Cohasset like to see in the Village? How can we market Cohasset Village to neighboring towns? Can we make it more inviting to patrons?

Residents are encouraged to let the merchants and Chamber know what they think. A village committee meeting will be held Thursday, March 28, at 5:30 p.m. at French Memories. Interested individuals, town officials and merchants are encourage to attend.

Those who are unable to attend are asked to send their comments to the Chamber of Commerce at P.O. Box 336 or contact Dean Rizzo at 383-1994..

METCO dinner, tour is planned for March 24

The Boston METCO parents have planned their annual dinner for Cohasset host families Sunday, March 24 at the Dorchester Community YMCA. The location has been changed from Northeastern University because participants will be able to use the indoor pool for one hour (with life guard on duty) and use the basketball courts at the YMCA for two hours.

In conjunction with that event, the Cohasset METCO committee has scheduled a field trip earlier that day to the Museum of Afro-American History, the African Meeting House, and the Black Heritage Trail, all in Boston's Beacon Hill neighborhood. A bus has ben reserved to take METCO host families from Cohasset to Beacon Hill for the national park tour and then on to dinner at the YMCA.

The bus will leave Cohasset High at noon and return about 5:30 p.m. The Black Heritage Trail National Park tour takes about two hours (1-3 p.m.); the dinner is from 3-5 p.m. If anyone would prefer to drive, the tour will begin at 1 p.m. in front of the Robert Gould Shaw Memorial across the street from the State House at the corner of Beacon and Park Streets. Please RSVP to METCO coordinators Connie Afshar (6006) or Cliff Chase (1574) as soon as possible.

Kindergarten screening set

In accordance with Section 306.1 of the Massachusetts Special Education Law (Chapter 766), Cohasset Public Schools will conduct a screening program for children who will reach the age of five on or before Sept. 1, 1996.

The entry screening program will take place at Osgood School on April 10 and 11. Contact the school secretary at Osgood, 383-6117, for more information.

Third-graders host Deer Hill hoedown

The Osgood gymnasium was transformed recently into an old-fashioned barn with hay and streamers. The children dressed for the occasion with hats, boots, ties, dresses, bandannas and jeans. Parents were invited to their child's regular physical education class last week as a finale to their square dance unit. The parents had an opportunity to see some of the concepts and skills which their children have been learning in Mr. Weydt's physical education class.

This class began with the children participating in an aerobic dancing session that stressed the benefits of exercise, proper warm-up and cool-down techniques and how to monitor their pulse rate. After the aerobics session the parents were treated to a fantastic show of square dancing by the third graders. They do-si-doed and promenaded around without missing a beat.

After the children performed, the hoedown really began as children encouraged (or pulled) some parents up on the dance floor to participate with them.

The hoedown really got underway when parents, like those shown here, participated, says PE teacher Mike Weydt.

Council seeks candidates

Each of Cohasset's three schools has a School Council made up of the principal, teachers, parents and a community representative. The council is charged with formulating a school improvement plan and meets monthly. Parent representatives are elected for two-year terms by the parent body for each of the schools.

There are five openings for parent school council representatives: one at Osgood, two at Deer Hill and two at the Jr./Sr. High. Individuals interested in serving should submit their names and a paragraph about themselves and their interest in serving on the council to the PSO Nominating Committee, Box 30, Cohasset 02025 no later than Friday, March 29. The election will be held April 11 through 18.

All parents who will have children at a specific school for the two-year period 1996-98 are eligible to serve on the council. For further information, call nominating committee members: Kathy Ofsthun (383-9396), Lesley Faber (383-2071), Susan Meikleham (383-6151), Jean Muir (383-1850), Susan Pile (383-6088) or Mary Sullivan (383-6666).

A sure sign of spring

Record field expected for 20th running of Cohasset Road Race

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

The Boston Marathon isn't the only road race celebrating a milestone this spring.

It may be a few years behind Boston, but the Cohasset Roadrace By The Sea 10K will be run for the 20th consecutive year on March 31 beginning at 1 p.m.

Prior to the race, a beach walk will be held starting at Sandy Beach and covering the same course. Last year the walk attracted a field of 250.

Tom Gruber, who along with Roy Fitzsimmons, is co-director of the event, said the race field should top last year's record of 850 runners. Gruber has received several inquiries from people who have never run the race before. He expects the majority of runners to register on Sat. March 30 from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. and on race day.

Volunteers numbering close to 60 will man the course and finish line. Twenty-seven of the volunteers are Rotary Club members, the main sponsor of the race.

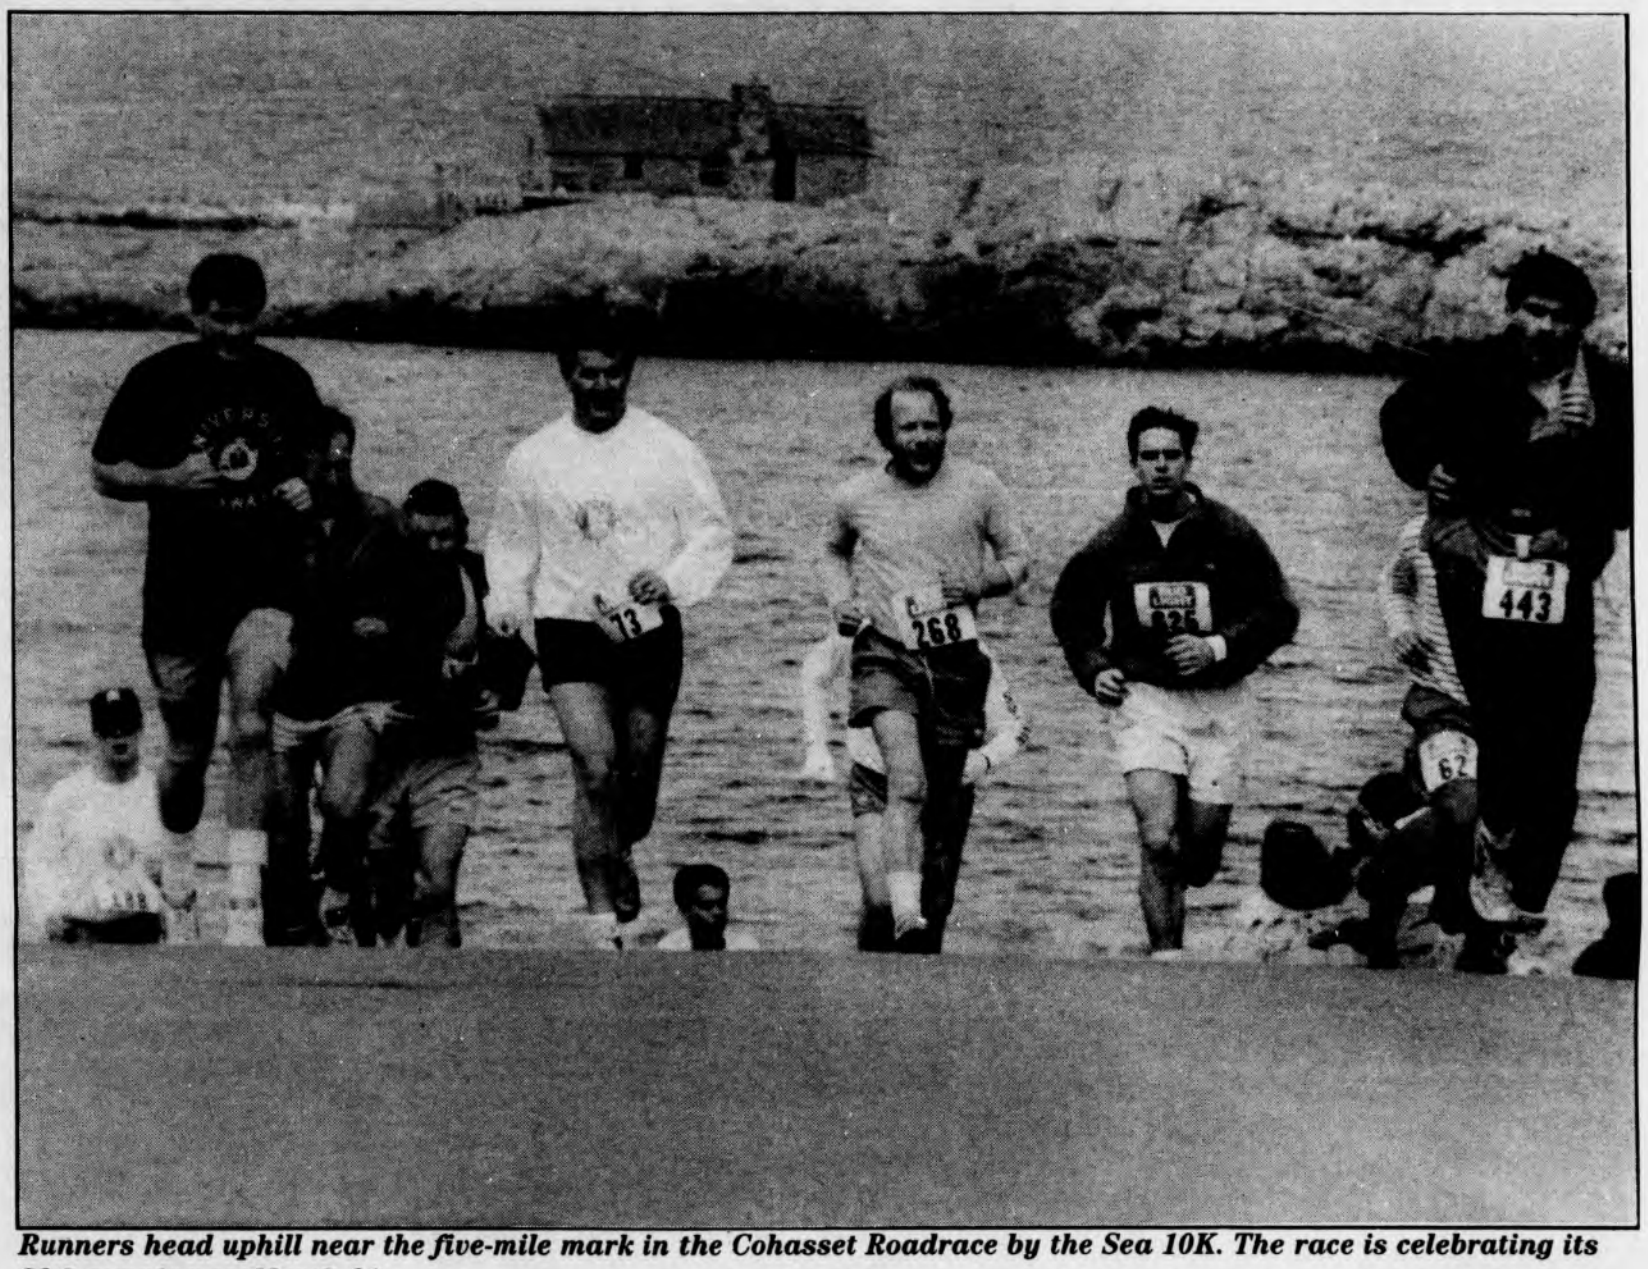
"It takes quite a crew to put this thing together," Gruber said. "We're kind of proud of the fact we've been able to put this thing together for 20 years.

"It's really fun to see the town come together and have a good time."

For several years marathoners have used the scenic 6.2 mile race as their last tune-up before the prestigious Patriot's Day event. But the race has a charm all its own.

With the start on Cohasset Common, runners get a New England flavor not found in most races. The course then winds its way down Elm Street and past Kimball's By The Sea before it heads down the tree-lined portion of the course on Atlantic Ave. The course then runs along the shore, passing Sandy Beach onto Jerusalem Road.

Ironically, runners don't always have the opportunity to take in the gorgeous scenery of the ocean on one side and breathtaking homes on the other as they navigate the winding hills and stiff winds of Jerusalem Road.



Runners head uphill near the five-mile mark in the Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea 10K. The race is celebrating its 20th running on March 31.

The toughest part of the course comes just near the five-mile mark when runners take the left from Jerusalem Road onto Forest Ave., put their heads down and lean into the steep 80-yard hill. Once they reach the top, the course mercifully heads downhill again along Forest Ave. The final mile follows North Main Street back to Cohasset Common and the finish line in front of town hall.

Local kids gather for weekly dose of Magic

By JOE REARDON
Cohasset Mariner

Gulping cokes and throwing down cards on the blue and white picnic table, the group of youngsters are lost in the world of Magic.

No, they're not on vacation at a theme park. The kids battle futuristic creatures and try to outwit one another while taking part in the weekly tournaments, run by Pastimes owner Elliot Goldberg.

The cards, Magic The Gathering, have become extremely popular over the last year and a half and possess a language all their own. Players use a 60-card deck made up of five different colors. Each color represents a particular defense or offense in the game. Some cards are more powerful than others. The object of Magic The Gathering is to knock the 20 points each player starts with, down to zero or "no life" by killing off the opponent's creatures.

Goldberg, whose store is located on Route 3A, decided to start the tournaments when the kids who frequent his store suggested they meet on a regular basis.

"The kids wanted me to have a tournament," said Goldberg, who admittedly is much more knowledgeable about sports cards. "A couple of them will be here when I open on Saturday waiting for the tournament to start."

Twelve-year-old Sloan Sherman of Cohasset played in his first tourney at Pastimes on Saturday. He was short about 20 cards, but that has never been a problem as far as Goldberg is concerned. He gave the youngster 20 cards he could keep.

Sherman said playing at Pastimes was the best location to get a game going full steam. "It's a lot more fun than playing at someone's house," he said. "You don't have to worry about your parents yelling at you when you get loud."

Each player pays $3 to enter the tournament. The winner receives two-thirds of the money in the form of merchandise credit in the store while the second-place finisher wins the remaining one-third.

Goldberg usually sits back and watches the kids play in the round-robin tournament because Hull's Joe Porter is on hand to serve as referee.

The 24-year-old Porter, a 1990 graduate of Hull High School, bought his first pack of Magic The Gathering cards at a book store in the South Shore Plaza just under two years ago.

Goldberg said Porter is so adept at the game "he doesn't speak English, he speaks Magic."

Porter was attracted to the futuristic art on the cards and quickly built his collection to more than 10,000 cards. He best describes the game as "a cross between Dungeons and Dragons and poker."

He has a good time helping the kids learn and improve their skills at the game.

"I come down, have fun and socialize," Porter said. "It's a way to get kids to do something fun instead of hanging around."

The Gathering is not the only set of cards. Magic has more expensive packs with rare, individual cards worth as much as $500. Goldberg sells his packs for $2.50.

Porter says the game is not only fun, but educational as well. Facets of geometry and math are utilized and quotes from Shakespeare are on many of the cards.

Players must decide if the card they use to kill off a creature will be detrimental later in the game if they are in a position to win and could have put the card to better use them.

Dough Smith, a 10-year-old from Scituate, learned how to play the game last summer. He especially likes thinking out strategies and using his wits in trying to win.

"I like the basic rules and that you have to use your brains," Smith said.

Mike Sadler, an eighth-grader at Cohasset High School has played in every Pastimes tournament since Goldberg began holding them. Sadler is a fan of poker and fantasy. "It's a good game for me," he said.

Porter not only helps out Goldberg on Saturdays, he also competes in tournaments.

He recently entered a tournament at MIT where the decks of cards used were worth up to $3,000.

"They get serious about this game," Porter said. "I went down there with a deck that cost $3.50 and made it to round three."

However, Porter entered to prove a point. He was convinced expensive wasn't necessarily better and was sure he could match the others play by play.

"I did it to show no one needs expensive cards to play this game," he said. "You just need to know what you're doing."

Porter is convinced Pastimes could draw more players, but Goldberg would rather limit the number to no more than 14.

"You could probably get every Magic player in Cohasset here," Porter said. "We'd have to start the games at 10 a.m. and we'd probably have a winner by now."

Goldberg said the game is especially popular with junior high and high school students.

"They're getting into it because it's a really fun game," he said. "As long as the kids want to do it, I'll have it there for them."

Goldberg paused, then added with a laugh: "The stakes are low, but the excitement runs high."

Cohasset resident Donald Staszko (center) holds one of the OshKosh B'gosh teddy bears he donated to the Cohasset Police Department. Cohasset officers hand out teddy bears to young children shaken by an injury or domestic troubles. When the department recently ran out of bears, Staszko stepped in to donate more — upgrading the supply to colorful, cuddly OshKosh B'gosh bears. Picture to the left of Staszko is Police Chief Brian Noonan and to the right is Officer Lisa Matos, who is assigned to domestic violence cases and works with children in the PALS (Police Assisting Local Schools) program.

Road race events planned

The South Shore Community Center will kick off the 20th Rotary Club Cohasset Road Race By the Sea with a dance and silent auction on Friday, March 29, from 7 p.m. to midnight at The Chart House Restaurant. Tickets are $20.

The evening will feature the famous Toni Lynn Washington Band, a contemporary jazz and blues band presented by Joe Hajjar of The Yard Rock in Quincy. Also included are hors d'oeuvres, a cash bar, practical tips for runners and walkers and a silent auction celebrating health, wellness, travel and leisure. All are invited to attend, regardless of whether they are planning to participate in the 10K road race or not.

This year a pledge-walk, which will benefit SSCC programs, will be added to the popular "run or walk" event, scheduled for Sunday, March 31, beginning at 1 p.m. A fun-walk will cover the same course or an optional three-mile course starting at 10 a.m. Both follow the scenic thoroughfares of Cohasset and are expected to draw more than 1,000 participants.

To participate in the pledge walk or to reserve tickets for Friday's festivities, contact Nina Belsan at 383-0088 or 545-5462. Applications for the road race and walk are available at The Good Sport, Curtis Liquors and the SSCC. Call 383-6550 for further information.

Town meeting expected to draw a crowd

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

With big ticket items like the proposed $9.9 million new school and $5 million-plus in sewer improvements on the agenda, town meeting won't have trouble drawing the 100-voter quorum needed to get underway.

In fact, Town Moderator George Marlette estimates that ten times that number or 1,000 citizens, may make their way to the high school gymnasium for town meeting Saturday.

"I cannot recall this type of expectation," said Marlette, adding that eight "checkers" will be at the door to check in citizens as they arrive and additional tellers will be on hand to count the votes. An overflow room — most likely the high school audio visual room — will be available if the gym cannot accommodate everyone.

Marlette plans to start the meeting promptly. He will allow only 1/2 hour for lunch (Boy Scouts will provide refreshments) and will extend the meeting until 6 p.m. in order to accomplish as much business as possible. He expects town meeting to be continued to a second session at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Town meeting will be televised live on cable-TV.

The first five articles in the annual town meeting warrant — including the town's proposed $16.9 million fiscal year 1997 operating budget — will be taken up first. Articles in the special town meeting, including those on sewer improvements

Shaw's breaks ground

A construction worker watches as the ground is prepared for installation of a retention pond near Bergson's. The retention pond is the first step in the demolition and reconstruction of Cushing Plaza by Shaw's Supermarkets.

Construction at Cushing Plaza gets underway

By MARY FORD
Cohasset Mariner

Bulldozers will be a familiar sight at Cushing Plaza for the rest of the year as Shaw's Supermarkets breaks ground, setting the stage for reconstruction of the Route 3A shopping center.

Company spokesman Bernie Rogan said the new Shaw's should be up and running by this time next year and the supermarket will be the last piece of the plaza puzzle to open.

But before demolition of existing buildings and construction of new ones begin, the first step in the project is installing a new retention basin next to Bergson's restaurant.

He explained that the retention basin is needed to capture run-off. Shaw's had to purchase additional land to accommodate the water run-off which currently goes across the roadway continuing on its way toward the harbor.

Shaw's will build facilities in the plaza and catchments in the parking lot area to trap the water so it moves more slowly and is dissipated.

Selectmen grapple with Straits Pond sewer issue

Affected residents are in an uproar

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

Fearful that angry residents could defeat the Strait's Pond sewer article at Saturday's town meeting, selectmen indicated Monday night they may support a compromise allowing the town to pick up some of the cost of the project.

Selectmen desperately want the article passed, since the town faces fines of $2,000 per day if it is defeated. The sewer project is proceeding as a result of an agreement with the state to correct pollution in the pond.

Residents have erupted over plans to have households on the sewer line to pay the entire $5.6 million cost and vowed to defeat it unless the town chips in.

"The article will crash and burn," unless the town picks up some of the cost, Jay Cody of Jerusalem Road predicted.

Cohasset's Week

Permit fees increased

At the recommendation of building inspector Robert Egan, selectmen last week raised fees charged for plumbing and gas inspections.

Residences will be charged $30 for an inspection of up to three fixtures, with a $7 charge for each additional fixture.

A re-inspection will cost $20, while a water heater or boiler inspection fee will be $25.

The town will charge $120 for a new house inspection.

Commercial sites will be charged $40 to for a plumbing inspection of up to three fixtures, with $10 for each additional fixture.

There will be a $30 re-inspection fee.

The town will charge $35 for water heater or water steam boiler inspection at a commercial site.

Town meeting to address Forest Ave. drainage

After a presentation by DPW superintendent Harold Litchfield, selectmen this week endorsed town meeting article 24, which calls for a series of drain pipes and catch basins to correct drainage problems on Forest Ave. and Heather Drive.

VoTech assessment zooms

Cohasset's assessment for the South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School is increasing a nearly 162 percent over the current figure, town administrator Gregory Doyon announced last week.

The town's assessment for the coming fiscal year will be just below $67,500, up from the current nearly $26,000 figure.

The number of Cohasset students attending the school has increased to eight from three, which in part caused the jump in assessments.

However, because Cohasset is the smallest town in the system, its per pupil costs are greater. State aid is based on enrollment figures from 1993.

"We are getting hit very hard," Doyon said.

Cohasset's per pupil costs are roughly $8,000, compared with $6,000 for Scituate and $4,000 for Norwell.

Doyon said he has sent town accountant Michael Buckley's analysis on the subject to the Mass. Municipal Association.

Selectmen said they will consider seeking ways to get the state cost formula to be changed.

The vocational school district includes Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hanover, Rockland, Abington, Hanson and Whitman. Students from other towns, such as Marshfield, are accepted on a space available basis. Each town pays based on the number of students it sends to the school.

Goedecke thanked for service

During what was her last regular meeting Monday night, her fellow selectmen thanked Jane Goedecke, who is not seeking re-election, for her work during her two terms on the board.

"We're going to miss you," said selectman chairman Merle Brown with a smile.

"I'll miss everything about it," Goedecke replied.

Later, at the close of the long, tumultuous meeting, Goedecke said "Thank you for a long, happy relationship."

She has not indicated her future plans.

Lee Cisneros photograph hangs at town hall

Another stunning work by popular Cohasset photographer Lee Cisneros is now hanging in the selectman's office.

The photograph, which was hung Monday, features the common facing town hall on a summer day. Lush green is the predominant color in the photograph, which also contains an expanse of majestic blue sky.

The large photograph is framed with a dark green mat.

Other works of the King Street resident, including ocean views, already hang in the office.

The public is welcome to stop in and see the photographs during business hours.

Putziger retires from ZBA; Chittick is appointed

After 12 years, Myrna Putziger had decided not seek reappointment to the zoning board of appeals.

Selectman Peter Pratt, who is selectmen's liaison to the ZBA, praised Putziger's work and said her decision to step down is viewed with "great displeasure to all of us."

He recommended that the senior associate member of the ZBA, S. Woodworth Chittick be appointed to replace Putziger.

That vote was unanimous.

Selectmen will send a letter thanking Putziger for her service.

There are three associate ZBA members and Chittick's appointment has created a vacancy. Anyone interested should contact the selectmen's office as soon as possible.

Clean water appointments

Upon the recommendation of the board of health and the conservation commission, selectmen Monday night appointed John Bryant and John McNabb to the regional committee on clean water. Bryant was also appointed to the local water resources protection committee, on which McNabb already serves.

Litchfield contract approved

Effective April 1, Harold Litchfield will become the town's first appointed department of public works superintendent. He is currently the elected highway supervisor.

Last year town meeting voted to abolish the highway supervisor's position and consolidate departments in a DPW.

Monday night, selectmen approved Litchfield's three-year contract, valid through April 1, 1999.

For the first year his salary will be $47,000, with raises of between two and five percent for the additional years.

Thomas Wigmore appointed communications officer

During their long meeting Monday night, selectmen appointed Thomas Wigmore fulltime communications officer. He is currently a parttime communications employee.

Two communications dispatchers, David Weeks and Lindsey Coyle, are resigning April 7.

Weeks will join the state police, while Coyle will work for the City of Newton.

Two town counsels in Cohasset

Technically, Cohasset has two town counsels, John DeRensis of Deutsch Williams, who was recently hired, and Richard Henderson, who has announced his resignation.

Selectmen wanted to accept Henderson's departure Monday night, but they have not received his official resignation letter.

They also plan to appoint Henderson special town counsel for a three small matters which he has been working on. Henderson will continue to bill the town $85 an hour for his special work, the fee he charged as town counsel.

Crowd expected at town meeting and the new school will be taken up next, Marlette explained. By discussing the budget first, voters will have an understanding of a sense of how much money the town has, how much free cash is available, and where the money is going and why, he said.

The school and sewer articles, which require a 2/3 vote, are expected to generate considerable debate and will likely be voted on by paper ballot, Marlette said.

Some voters will likely watch the proceedings on television and come to the meeting when an issue comes up they feel strongly about. Marlette has no problem with that behavior.

"It's perfectly appropriate that some prefer to delegate the routine business to a few," he said.

Town meeting will also take up selling the Hagerty showroom and instituting a pay-per-bag system at the RTF, among other business.

Changes approved at Red Lion Inn

Selectmen Monday night approved a change in the liquor license at the Red Lion Inn. Longtime manager of the restaurant, Philip Smith, whose name was on the original license, is no longer employed at the inn.

Carl Akerblom, who bought the business at auction for $300,000 earlier this year, will be on the license.

The change is only temporary, since a change in license requires a public hearing. Akerblom's attorney Paul Kauffman said they will seek a new license with a hearing. He said the new manager will be present to answer any questions then.

Selectmen wanted to know about Akerblom's experience in the restaurant business.

Kauffman replied that Akerblom, a longtime Marshfield resident, worked for three years at a Miami Beach club, serving as bartender for one year and two years as manager.

In addition, Akerblom told the board that he holds an associate's degree in business and runs a contracting business.

Construction gets underway

"It will be like a labyrinth," Rogan explained.

Once the run-off problem is resolved, the construction cycle to the rear of the existing plaza will get underway with demolition of the buildings at the back of the site. Then construction of the new retail center including the Shaw's store will begin.

"The smaller retailers will open first," he said explaining that Shaw's will need full access so the supermarket cannot open until the plaza and parking lot are finished.

The building housing Walgreen's will be the last to go, Rogan said.

In the meantime most plaza businesses have either moved out or relocated to their temporary homes. Buttonwood Books has moved over next to Walgreen's, the dentist office is moving across the street to the former Nissan dealership building (site of old Bergson's) and the Consignment Shop is in the former health club site near BayBank, to name a few. Papa Gino's has reopened up the street in Cohasset Plaza.

Last November, town boards allowed the project to proceed by agreeing about conditions to be imposed on the Shaw's supermarket plaza, settling an appeal Shaw's brought against an earlier zoning board decision. No fast-food restaurants will be allowed at the plaza and vehicles leaving the plaza will be allowed to turn left onto Route 3A providing a police officer is present at peak hours or a traffic light is installed. Earlier, the ZBA had forbidden a left-hand turn.

The project includes a 40,000 square-foot supermarket and another 30,000-square feet of additional retail space on the 24-acre site.

Built in the late 1950's, the shopping center which originally housed an A&P Supermarket, has had a troubled history in recent years. Several years ago, its owners, Buildner's Holding Co., went bankrupt and the Old Stone Bank took the property over. When that bank failed, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation took control. The board of health has repeatedly threatened to close down the shopping center because of the the failed septic system at the site. The new supermarket will generate 225 part- or full-time jobs. Headquartered in East Bridgewater, Shaw's currently owns about 90 stores.

Water flow issue is focus of final landfill hearing

By BRIAN SURETTE
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Board of Health concluded its public hearing on the proposed 27.5-acre expansion of the town's privately owned Cohasset Heights Landfill on March 23.

In an eight-hour closing session, board members heard form the last three scheduled witnesses, rebuttal witnesses speaking on behalf of Cohasset Heights and last-minute motions filed by attorneys for both sides.

Hearing Officer John Shea, in an attempt to shorten testimony and ensure that no further hearing dates would be required, relaxed the tone of the day's proceedings from their previously structured state, much to the relief and satisfaction of all concerned parties.

Sohier Street resident Mary Gainor, the last witness to speak against CHL's application, opened the morning session by presenting the board with a series of 16 photographs, taken by her last January and February, showing water run-off and silt movement traveling from the east side of King Street towards the Sanctuary Pond area.

Though under cross-examination from CHL attorney Anton Moherke, Gainor said she did not know the origin of the water she photographed and was therefore unable to state categorically whether or not it came from CHL property.

Professional engineer Steven Gioiosa, testifying on water issues related to land owned by the Trustees of Reservations, stated that there has always been an historical flow of water in the area south of the landfill towards Boulder Lane from heavy rainstorms.

It was his opinion that excess water in this particular area is not due to the existence of the landfill but, instead, is natural to the topography of the area, which, he explained, "has probably not changed in over 1,000 years."

Therefore, he stated, a group of endangered red maple trees in this area are not dying off due to the existence of Cohasset Heights, but they are only following nature's course.

"Stress vegetation coincides with the natural topography of the land," he said.

This point was echoed by Gioiosa's associate, Rod Gaskell, who added that in other stress-suffered portions of trustee-owned land, "habitat and wetlands regeneration is clearly coming back."

Gaskell also noted that salt deposits found on trustee land have been traced back to the state Department of Public Works property adjacent to the landfill on Crocker Lane.

Board of Health officials must now give weight to hundreds of pages of direct testimony as well as cross-examination, examine 141 related exhibits and render their decision for or against the Cohasset Heights site assignment application within a 30-day period (on or about April 23).

Shea thanked everyone for their patience and cooperation during the two months of lengthy, oftentimes confusing proceedings and started the board's decision clock with the adjournment of this last session.

At the end, those in attendance applauded each other's efforts, and one participant, when asked what he will do now that the hearings are completed, was overheard to respond, "Get back to the life I once had."

More landfill hearing costs okayed

Still staggered by the costs, selectmen last week approved payment of nearly $10,500 for engineers Fugro East, for work on the Cohasset Heights Landfill hearings, which wrapped up last week.

Selectmen have estimated that fighting the landfill expansion request will cost close to $250,000 between November and June.

Selectman chairman Merle Brown said that state environmental affairs secretary Trudy Cox will not return his calls.

Selectman Michael Sullivan suggested getting state Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray to arrange a meeting between Cohasset officials and Cox to discuss the landfill costs.

In addition, selectmen will ask the legislators to introduce a bill seeking state compensation for the costs associated with holding the hearings, which were mandated, but not paid for, by Cox.

The town of Warren received some $200,000 from the state after holding a similar hearing, according to selectman Peter Pratt.

Turkey Hill land purchase to be postponed

Town meeting will not be asked to proceed with the purchase of land known as Turkey Hill, article 8. Instead, town meeting will only be asked to indicate approval of such a purchase, pending the arrangement of state and other funding.

Other items to be postponed include work to the high school gym.

Battle lines drawn over sewer articles

By DAVID JOHNSON
Special to the Mariner

In what was likely to be a preview of town meeting, last week's hearing on the sewer articles turned into a royal donnybrook, as many residents furiously objected to paying the entire bill for connecting to the sewer.

The battle lines were clearly drawn during the explosive March 20 hearing in the town hall auditorium, which was attended by some 50 people.

On the one hand, residents living in the Strait's Pond area are outraged that some 345 households are being asked to pay all of the costs associated with the $5.4 million project.

Although figures are not yet available, residents of the harbor area who are on the sewer line will also pay the full cost of the roughly $2.9 million expansion. Annual charges in the harbor area are likely to continue to average about $500 a year.

Many speakers accused officials of not providing adequate information.

"You cannot make me pay for this sewer," Jerusalem Road resident Patrick Plante shouted. "You (commissioners) are so ridiculous, what you think people can pay."

Officials, however, say that homeowners not on the sewer line face septic system repairs to comply with Title V regulations which could easily cost $30,000, which they must face without town help.

Sewer commission chairman Edward "Ted" Guild, and some residents, called the proposed financing mechanism fair, since if the sewer costs were spread over the entire town, it would add some $200 to the average tax bill.

Guild also said that since property on the sewer line will increase in value, homeowners will recoup their investment. He said the town as a whole would not benefit from the project, which brought jeers and boos from some in the audience.

Speakers also pointed out that if property values rise, taxes will increase, benefitting the town and adding to the expenses of homeowners.

The Strait's Pond project will cost each household an average of $16,000 for 20 years, which will be paid for in betterments of roughly $1,000 each year, added to the tax bill.

Operation and maintenance will cost each household nearly $400, on average, each year.

In addition, it will cost an average of $2,500 to connect each house to the sewer line, a one-time charge.

Two residents, Anson Wheeler and Albert Sencabaugh, did endorse the plan on environmental grounds. Leaking septic systems are blamed for much of the pollution in Strait's Pond.

"If anyone feels the sewer is a bad thing, you have to look at the options," Wheeler stated. "I will be delighted to scrape up."

Sencabaugh reported that the Strait's Pond conservation group endorsed the project.

However, the other speakers appeared unanimously opposed to the plan. Some charged that the sewer commission was asking residents to approve the plan without providing all the necessary information.

Others said that if only those who benefit from a project should pay for it, they will not support the proposal to build a new Osgood Elementary School since they will not have children attending it.

"We have an excuse for not voting for the school," Plante said. "We can't afford both."

In addition, North Cohasset residents face a whooping 164 percent increase in water rates, from the private company supplying them water.

Calling the water charges "outrageous," Guild said he favored connecting them to Cohasset water, which is cheaper.

Beechwood St. resident Herb Towle, who is not on the sewer line said, "We are going to hit a small group and we are going to hit them hard. I feel this is an unfair."

Maria Plante said that close to half of residents in the area are over 65 and cannot pay the betterments.

Guild replied that residents who cannot afford the betterments can arrange to have them postponed until the property is sold, when the sum would be paid off all at once.

Several speakers questioned whether banks representing property purchasers would require the homeowner to pay off the betterments before the property would be sold.

Among her other comments, Plante said a precedent is being established by only asking direct users to pay for a project.

"We will begin the erosion of the school committee. The school department does not only ask parents to pay for the Osgood School."

Jim Maloney of Hull Street pointed out that Hingham is paying half of the costs of the sewer extension in that town.

Guild replied that the Hingham project will only add $6 to the average tax bill, so those not benefitting directly will only face minimal charges.

Muriel Silvia of Arrowood Street said that the town should have taken advantage of favorable federal funding a decade ago and passed the sewer article then.

She predicted that those opposing the project could be outvoted at town meeting by residents who don't want to pay.

Ed Fox said, "People here are opposed to the town writing a check and having us sign it."

When Guild pointed out that the town is under a court order to do something to end pollution and upgrade its sewer facilities, several people said the situation is another unfunded federal mandate.

"This is an unfunded mandate," Jim Radley of Windy Hill Road said, "It's reasonable that the town make a contribution."

Virginia Norman of Todd Lane predicted that costs of the project will be too low. "I've never heard of a town project that didn't cost more money," she said.

Deborah Mann of Jerusalem Road feared that the whole town might be asked to pay for future sewer expansions at a later date.

She also questioned the effect those postponing their betterment charges would have on the rest.

In an angry exchange, Joseph McElroy wanted to know if those living on private drives would have to pay for the laying of the sewer line from the public street. The cost of is expected to be expensive in some areas because workers must blast through ledge rock.

Guild replied that he considers Windy Hill Road to be a public road, even though it is technically a private way. However, he said the status of some of the area's roads would have to be examined.

Walter Schroeder of Jerusalem Road said it is unfair to assess betterments based on lot size. He said he has a large lot, but only three people live in the house. He asked why he should pay a higher betterment cost than someone else with a small lot, but more demand on the sewer.

At the close of the meeting, Wheeler defended the commission. "You have been pretty thoroughly beat up tonight and I don't think it is fair." As an engineer, he said that exact answers can be elusive. "The numbers that we've gotten are good faith efforts by reasonable people."

Officials get larger raise

Noting that the town offered three percent raises to employees in the unions, selectman Martha Gjesteby said Monday night that the non-union officials should receive the same.

Earlier, 2 1/2 percent increases were voted.

Selectmen approved the increase, which represents a $4,000 increase in the Selectmen grapple with sewer issue

"If you want us to help you avoid litigation and fines, we need a commitment from you," former selectman Diane Sullivan, also of Jerusalem Road, shouted at the board.

She wants to offer an amendment requiring the town to pay half the cost, while another resident, Maria Plante, wants the town to pay one hundred percent. They may try to work out a compromise.

It will cost Cohasset taxpayers an average of $200 per year for 20 years if the town does pay half.

Selectmen said amendments can be submitted to town administrator Gregory Doyon, who will obtain a legal opinion on the wording in order to save time on town meeting floor.

However, at the end of the stormy session, selectmen would not agree to rescind their vote in favor of special town meeting article 4, which provides for a sewer line in North Cohasset, saying they did not want to risk being in non-compliance with the agreement, which they signed more than a year ago.

Sewer commission chairman Edward "Ted" Guild predicted that the article's defeat would likely land the town in court, and liable for fines of $2,000 per day. Another town meeting to pass the article would be likely, he said.

Guild reminded selectmen they supported the article recently and said the project cannot be postponed.

"We went over this and you approved it, unanimously, four weeks ago. There is nothing new," he said.

"To postpone the article can't be done under the agreement. This is expected, that we are going to do it and do it now," Guild stated. "The state considers Strait's Pond to be the number one ecological problem in town."

In what turned out to be one of the longest and most turbulent selectmen's meetings in recent memory, several North Cohasset residents also hinted that they may oppose other articles — including the new elementary school and air conditioning at the library — which will not benefit them personally.

Diane Sullivan asked why the air conditioning would not be charged to those who use the library, while Cody stated that parents will not be charged betterments for building the new school.

Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Michael Sullivan pointed out that those houses not on the sewer line face expensive repairs for their own septic systems under Title V rules. Repairs which can routinely cost $30,000 and run as much as $70,000 in Cohasset.

Goedecke said she has received many calls from constituents who do not feel it is fair for them to pay for the sewer.

"Who's going to help me fix my septic system?" Goedecke asked.

She also disputed residents' claims that the sewer would not increase the value of their property, stating that prospective home buyers will be drawn toward property on sewer lines, with Title V questions solved.

Also during the meeting, Guild announced that Hull has agreed to accept an additional 15,000 gallons of daily capacity from Cohasset at its treatment plant. The total capacity will be 80,000, up from the original 65,000.

Guild said this means they will be able to add Forest Notch, as well as Linden and Rustic Drives to the sewer. Although this increases the number of homes on the sewer to 345, the average cost of the project is expected to decline only slightly, to $1,026 per year, per homeowner, from $1,052.

In response to a question from Plante, Guild said that the sewer might be extended up Old Coach Road and Rust Way in three years if capacity permits.

The town will seek eminent domain easements on these streets at town meeting anyway. Guild said they want to include all possible areas on the easement list, so they only have to go through the process once.

Guild also said that the state will make available $500,000 per year, for six years, for Cohasset residents not on the sewer line to upgrade their septic systems.

The money will be available at a subsidized rate of 3 percent and administered by the town.

Early in the discussion, selectman Peter Pratt suggested approving the concept of splitting the costs, and then holding hearings to consider the exact percentages.

Michael Sullivan opposed this idea, stating that residents would have to know what cost they incur when they make the vote.

Diane Sullivan said she was "incensed at the unmitigated gall" in asking residents to pay the whole cost.

She also blasted selectmen for not fighting more vigorously the proposed 164 percent water increase North Cohasset faces.

"You fell down on the job, you didn't get it done," she said.

When asked why Hingham is paying half of its sewer costs, Guild again stated that the project in that town is small, and will only add $6 to the average tax bill.

Selectmen are expected to discuss the issue again at their meeting Saturday at 9 a.m. before town meeting.

One town

Cohasset is still one town despite the divisive debate on the proposed new school and sewer improvements which are pitting some of us against our town officials and fellow citizens.

As Cohasset prepares for town meeting Saturday — which includes big ticket items that will increase our property tax bills — it's important to step back and remember that we're a community as well as a democracy.

We doubt there will be many fence sitters at special town meeting which will take up the proposed $9.9 million new school and upwards of $5 million in sewer projects. The event will provide a stage for emotional rhetoric by those whose minds are made up.

But for everyone's sake, we hope that all who attend will refrain from loud applause and cheering for their side. We also don't want anyone to be intimidated from speaking up because they're afraid they'll be subject to boos or angry glares.

If your neighbor feels the opposite to the way you do — don't let the issue end years of being neighborly.

Remember everyone has the right to be heard and the right to vote their conscience.

And don't overlook all the other business at town meeting including authorization to sell the Hagerty house showroom and approval of the town's $16.9 operating budget for next year.

Town meeting groupies will be the first to tell you that this very old, very pure form of government is also a great way to welcome spring and get together with fellow townspeople.

We encourage those citizens with strong views to distribute all the literature they want on the issues. Hold signs and speak out, try to persuade, get involved.

But please go to town meeting Saturday with an open mind — not about the issues necessarily — but about the right your neighbor has to hold a different opinion from your own.

North Cohasset sewer system support urged

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

The idea of providing sewer service to Cohasset has been an issue for as long as memory serves. Now the residents of the town have an opportunity to resolve this problem in the Straits Pond watershed, which is among the most troubled areas, and is of particular concern to the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection. The town remains under court order to provide a town-wide wastewater treatment plan, part of which is included as Article 4.

This article, in the Warrant for Town Meeting, Saturday, presents a plan to install a sewer line, which would service the Straits Pond area and connect to the Hull sewer system. The Hull side of Straits Pond is already sewered. Hull town officials support the idea and are near an agreement. The plan calls for the cost of the project to be funded through a betterment bond, a financial instrument to be repaid over 20 years at low interest rates. All or a majority of these costs will be repaid by those residents who will benefit from the new sewer line.

At present, homeowners in the area face significant wastewater treatment system repair or replacement costs (as high as $70,000) in the event their system is considered "failed" under Mass. Title V environmental regulations. These regulations consider depth to the water table, soil condition, presence of ledge, distance to surface water, and lot size. Straits Pond is unique because it is negatively affected by all of these characteristics.

A sewer line would improve the condition of Straits Pond, which is polluted by leaching wastewater systems, many of which would fail a Title V inspection (even though they seem to work fine). Failed systems prevent the sale of a home until upgrades are made. The sewer would also have a significant beneficial effect on real estate values and the tax base. As most residents are aware, Title V has had a detrimental impact on the sales of homes in the town of Cohasset.

This project has undergone significant research by experts, and is supported by the town's Sewer Commissioners, the Board of Health, and the Conservation Commission, as well as the Department of Environmental Regulation, Coastal Zone Management, and Office of Environmental Affairs at the state level. The feasibility phase has been completed by a qualified engineering firm, and final costs are subject to the bid process to take place in the design phase of the project. Town approval is required to move forward to this next phase.

Few disagree that a sewer in this area is a good idea. The issue appears to be how to pay for it. Some have expressed that the Town of Cohasset should pay for a portion of the project cost. After all, it is a municipal project, and it would avoid a town-wide fine and improve a town pond. Any degree of town subsidy would obviously be warmly received in the short run, but may come back to haunt Straits Pond residents in the form of tax increases later.

While the town subsidy idea has merit, too large a percentage is not likely to pass in a town-wide vote due to the increased sensitivity of tax increases in the town. This would also involve more bureaucracy, delays and if history is an indicator, would result in another more costly proposal, if not a stalemate altogether. It all boils down to what is fair. Perhaps the percentage of town subsidy should be addressed considering how many will directly benefit, but keeping in mind that we are all one community. The town can simply not afford too high a percentage on every project.

But what is really important is that the Article 4 pass Town Meeting, Saturday. We urge all residents of Cohasset to vote yes on this Article. Residents of North Cohasset will benefit at little or no cost to other taxpayers and at a much lower cost than other wastewater system options. Let's not miss another opportunity to improve the environmental quality of our town.

The Straits Pond Conservation is a group of homeowners who live in the Straits Pond area of Cohasset. The organization was formed in August of 1994, and its purpose is to clean Straits Pond and to bring the residents in the area into compliance with pertinent sections of the revised Title V environmental regulations.

Sewer users shouldn't foot entire bill

To the Editor:

I would like the readers of the Cohasset Mariner to know that I am not against sewering!

What I am vehemently opposed to is Article 4 in the Warrant for Special Town Meeting (March 30 at 10 a.m.). This article gives unprecedented authority to our Board of Sewer Commissioners to mandate paying the $6 million bonding for this project to 1/10th of our Cohasset taxpayers. This $6 million cost is unfair and unjust and will be a tremendous burden to the 220 households in the North Cohasset area who are already facing a 164 percent rate increase from the Mass-American Water Co. commencing June 1, 1996.

Final construction costs of this sewer project are unknown and I am not willing to give our Board of Sewer Commissioners a blank check.

The Board of Sewer Commissioners is dividing our

Question of the Week

The following candidates responded to the Question of the Week:

• Selectmen: what is your position on restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad? Why?

Ronnie McMorris, selectman

I believe it is important for Cohasset to concentrate its efforts on mitigating the environmental impacts that will result from restoration of service on the Greenbush line.

Our residents clearly have concerns about safety, traffic, noise, wetlands and the siting of the train station. In order to minimize the adverse effects and maximize the benefit our community will experience from the train, we need to formulate a plan.
